School board stands firm on replacing principals

By Tyler Rhodes

After four weeks of considerable noise, it was a moment of silence in the elementary school commons Tuesday night that cemented the school board's split vote of Jan. 12 to replace junior/senior high school principal Janeen Sullivan and assistant principal Doug Boyer next year.

The chances for the administrators' contracts to get the green light from the board were dashed when Barb Nickel's motion to rescind the Jan. 12 vote was met with sealed lips from her fellow board members. Board president Gloria Karmun twice asked for a second and was twice met with silence.

Karmun, who had voted with Nickels in the Jan. 12 meeting to ap-

Medical records off limits in murder trial

By Sandra L. Medearis

The court has ruled that a man charged of shaking a baby boy, leading to his death, cannot look at medical records concerning the later suicide of the infant's mother.

A grand jury in Nome handed up an indictment July 17 charging Frank David Lee, 35, on Murder One and Murder Two in incidents "on or between" June 8 to Oct. 11 in 2008, according to court documents, that resulted in the death of Harley Dickson on Oct. 13, 2008. According to the indictment, Lee "knowingly engaged in conduct directed towards a child under 16 and with criminal negligence inflicted serious injury on the

NSEDC approves major local and Bering Sea ventures

All parties and players in talks remain tight-lipped about the projects and money involved

By Laurie McNicholas

Last week the Norton Sound Economic Development Corp. board of directors gave green lights to two major business ventures after discussing them for at least six hours behind closed doors during their quarterly meeting in Nome.

One venture involves Nomeites Cussy Kauer, Ginny and Carl Emmons, Charlie Reader and Charles Fagerstrom. They presented their proposal to the NSEDC executive committee in an hour-long executive session closed to the public Feb. 2 and to the full board in an hour-long closed session Feb. 4.

The board unanimously approved the proposal Feb. 5 after discussing it for about an hour in executive session.

Secrecy surrounds the purpose of the venture. NSEDC President and Board Chairman Dan Harrelson told The Nome Nugget the group requested confidentiality, Fagerstrom declined comment at this time, and Kauer said, "It is confidential at this point."

It is no secret in Nome that local residents and NovaGold representatives are discussing the purchase of some of the mining com-

NJUS prepares to tank up with $2.50 fuel

By Sandra L. Medearis

Nome's kilowatt vendors have signed a contract for next winter's fuel to keep utility generators spinning and our lights on.

The contract price for fuel delivered that meets Nome Joint Utility specifications, verified by an independent lab, will be around $2.4914 per gallon for a delivery of 1.6 million to 2.2 million gallons of diesel oil. This puts the total purchase in the ballpark of $4 million to $5.5 million.

The final price will be adjusted on a formula that takes in the average daily trading price of heating oil during July on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The price could drop if the gross heating value per gallon tests below a certain baseline.

Delta-Western submitted the winning bid to Western Alaska Fuel Group, a purchasing consortium that includes NJUS, Kotzebue and Dillingham. WAFG and suppliers have historically used the day of lifting the fuel to the barge, and recently a three-day average wrap. Vendors have been proposing a variety of pricing methods—month, five to seven days, 30 days' average, according to John K. Handeland, utility manager.

Letters

Residents of Nome,
As a young child I had to attend boarding school along with students of King Island and Mary's Igloo. I was not only offended by your editorial in your paper. We (Bryan and RoseAnn Timbers) had the privilege, opportunity, honor to raise our two children Greg and Kirsten in Nome and they both graduated with honors from Nome-Beltz High School and also graduated from college with honors.
We as parents involved in boards and committed to improve everyone's lives. I was so honored that my daughter Kirsten committed herself to run for the school board. I watched her read all of her information, attended many work sessions, prepared for all board meetings and to her best of all abilities do the best as she was raised to contribute back to what her passion of educational opportunities, dedication and commitment to being raised in Solomon and Nome.

I also want to support Albert McComas, Heather and my daughter to support their decisions for the betterment of all of Nome and the Nome Education goals and opportunities offered to all.
Sincerely,
RoseAnn S. Timbers
Solomon/Nome resident since birth

Dear Editor,
Along with everyone else in this community I have my opinions on this school board issue. I think that it is important to look at it from every angle. In my mind, when I analyze any situation I try and put myself in all shoes. I have held back from responding to letters in the newspaper, until I read the editorial in last week's paper.
I understand your (along with many others') feelings of rage, but degrading young women who are leaders in our community is completely unnecessary. When you implied that Kirsten Timbers and Heather Payenna are "...vindictive baby girls..." to me, you are implying this about me and many others that fall in our age group. They represent us. And this word, "vindictive", I am sick of hearing. Do you, editor personally know these two fine young women? Do any of you, who have personally attacked these ladies, personally know them?

These two educated Native women are products of this community and both are alumni from NBHS. They both have been through the Nome Public Schools system since kindergarten, later excelling in life. Kirsten graduated with a B.A. in Sociology and Human Service from Fort Lewis College, and Heather with a B.A. in History from the University of Hawaii, both under the age of 25. And the fact that these college graduates actually moved back to Nome to serve our community is inspiring and what I believe to be the actual goal for our youth. Education doesn't end here for Kirsten or Heather. In the future, they plan to eventually obtain master's degrees.
An NPS teacher stated, "No one under the age of 25 should even be allowed in a leadership position...." and another teacher's wife referred to these board members as a "...former high school drunk" and "a wanna be cheerleader (kiss butt)..." They were both publicly posted on the internet. These comments were circulated by people who I thought to be mature adults and/or parents of children who will one day fall in the same age range and perhaps want to be leaders themselves. When I say "leaders" this isn't limited to running for the school board, but rather the numerous boards, councils and clubs that many people reside on throughout our region.
All of these personal attacks via email, internet posts, letters/editorials in The Nome Nugget, and phone calls even being made at their place of work, are just as "hurtful, irresponsible and ignorant" as Nancy McGuire described the result of the board's decision.
My intent of this letter is not to rush to the defense of these two specific individuals, but rather to the defense of the people that fall within these stereotypes. I took personal offense to these labels being placed on them. I believe that everyone is entitled to voice their own opinion, but if you hold yourself to be a mature adult, then have a little respect when doing so.
Katie O'Connor

Editor's note: I thought I was being rather restrained when I said they were sweet vindictive baby girls. —N.L.M.—

Letter to the editor:
In two columns dated January 7 and 14, Jason Evans wrote about what he believes to be the correct relationship between a board and its chief executive officer (CEO) and the fiduciary responsibilities of board members. Fiduciary responsibility is a legal term whereby financial institutions, trustees, board members, and guardians are required to put the interest of the client, corporation, or charge first. As a board member with a potential conflict of interest in a matter being discussed, they must disclose it at the beginning of the discussion. The rest of the board then determines if they want the board member to excuse him/herself from the discussion.
Jason mentions conflict of interest and board members serving as employees. My former father-in-law was the chairman of the board, president and CEO of Pfizer. He was both an employee and board member, which I understand is fairly common among Fortune 500 companies. He was the chair and president when Viagra was developed and brought to market. Bob Dole volunteered to be in the ad campaign. In the rest of the world, serving as a board member and employee is not a problem as Jason implies.

I studied corporate law in law school, and have a good understanding of the responsibilities of for-profit and non-profit board members. Our ANCSA corporations are different than other corporations, as we did not voluntarily invest capital by buying shares. The corporations were basically set up to seek profit for shareholders and serve as stewards for the land granted to them under ANCSA. While BSNC experienced financial problems in the past, we have been very fortunate that our corporation has grown under the 8a program.
I think our board members have been looking out for our best interests and have done a great job turning around BSNC's finances. I've been to the regional offices in Anchorage and see many of our shareholders working there from communities throughout our region. The columns Jason Evans wrote imply there is something wrong. If there is, it's his fiduciary duty to our shareholders to tell us what is going on so that it can be addressed.

Get On With Business

Let's get past our school board's mess and get on with the recall process. Hopefully the board could spare themselves the embarrassment and have the courtesy to resign. It would do the community a favor. We can do without telephonic participation from Kentucky. However, while we are getting the school board cleaned up we can't forget the other important decisions facing our town.
We have to make plans that will impact the way we live and do business in Nome. There is a new state office building in the works. Where should it be built? Should it go on the Gold Company land at the north end of Steadman near Sixth Ave.? Should it go downtown on Front Street where it would be close to the court, post office, banks and other offices? Should it be one big building or several small buildings downtown? Should the current state building be renovated and expanded? Should we keep the land to the north of town as a residential area? What about playgrounds? Are we really going to build a new bridge over the Snake River and then move the river? Will the Coast Guard ever have a permanent presence here? Will we annex Rock Creek?
There are many important decisions to make. We need public input to plan for the way Nome will be 10, 15, 20 and more years from now. We have a stake in the future and a responsibility to make Nome a town we are proud to live in and be our home. Let's get involved in local government. —N.L.M.—

Iditarod Air Force gets three-year exemption from FAA

The Federal Aviation Administration has granted the Iditarod Air Force a three-year exemption to fly in support of the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race. The all-volunteer Iditarod Air Force has been flying in support of the race for more than 20 years, but has had to apply for exemptions from the FAA for the past two years to do so. FAA regulations prohibit volunteer pilots from accepting any cost deferments such as fuel, accommodations and food. After the 2012 race, the FAA exemption to these rules will expire. The Iditarod Air Force flies food and fuel to checkpoints for both dogs and mushers, transports volunteers, judges, and veterinarians as well as moves dropped and scratched dogs.

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers denies permit to ConocoPhillips to drill NPR-A

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Alaska District has denied the permit application from ConocoPhillips Alaska Inc. to construct a drill pad west of the Colville River Delta. The drill pad was supposed to expand the Alpine petroleum field on the North Slope. The Corps justified its denial of the permit saying that there are other practicable alternatives such as horizontal directional drilling that would have less adverse impact on the aquatic ecosystem and still meet the project purpose.

The denial sparked outrage in high places. Gov. Sean Parnell said in a statement that the state has recently fought the federal government for tying up Outer Continental Shelf leasing, and for adding bureaucratic “nightmares” and costs with Endangered Species Act listings and critical habitat area designations. Parnell said that with its decision, the Corps continues to set back the nation’s chances for economic recovery, domestic energy production and Alaskans’ prospects for jobs.

U.S. Sens. Lisa Murkowski and

Mark Begich weren’t happy with the permit denial, either, and state Legislature House Speaker Mike Chenault, R-Nikiski, and House Resources Committee co-chair Craig Johnson, R-Anchorage, vented their anger and frustration, saying it would be bad news for Alaskans.

The Corps proposed that other alternatives with fewer environmental impacts could include horizontal, directional drilling, but this would require new permit applications. These alternatives minimize impacts to the Colville River Delta, which is the largest and most complex delta on the Arctic Coastal Plain and drains nearly 30 percent of the North Slope. The delta serves as habitat for approximately 80 species of birds, numerous fish, migrating caribou and is within the subsistence hunting and fishing areas of the village of Nuiqsut. The delta also represents nearly 70 percent of overwintering fish habitat within the North Slope.

Begich urges Alaska legislators to protect campaign finance laws

Last week, U.S. Sen. Mark Begich sent a letter to all members of the Alaska State Legislature and to Gov. Sean Parnell urging them to make sure the intent of Alaska’s strict campaign finance laws remain intact following a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling. Three weeks ago the nation’s highest court issued a decision allowing corporations to spend freely to support or oppose candidates running for Congress or president. Under the Supreme Court ruling, corporations and unions can’t give directly to candidates, but are allowed to spend unlimited amounts on advertisements for or against those on the ballot. Last week, a legislative legal opinion was released in Alaska saying Alaska’s own statutes might not be enforced following the Supreme Court’s decision. Begich said that allowing corporate money special interests to exercise too much influence over American political campaigns is a shameful step backward.

Begich said he is particularly concerned about the view in Alaska that there will not only be no limits on independent expenditures by for-profit corporations, but also no statutory disclosures identifying the contributors or reporting requirements for the corporations. Begich asked Alaska legislators to take up the issue this legislative session to ensure Alaska’s campaign finance laws remain as strong as they were before the Supreme Court decision. Following the Supreme Court ruling, Alaska’s ban on corporate contributions has been challenged by the Wasilla-based Conservative Patriots Group. The Anchorage Daily News reports that they asked the Alaska Public Offices Commission to rewrite the regulations by Feb. 15 so the group can support candidates for Anchorage Assembly in the April municipal election. At this point the federal finding contradicts Alaska law and the Alaska attorney general’s office is in the process of reviewing the Supreme Court ruling and what it means for state elections.

Mary’s Igloo to get shelter cabin

The Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation last week announced that it awarded funds from the 2010 recreational trail grants to build a Shelter Cabin at New Igloo. The cabin will be a 16-by-20-foot emergency shelter for public use. Once the cabin is built, the grant includes the installation of permanent trail markers from Teller to the New Igloo cabin site. The Native Village of Mary’s Igloo was awarded $21,449 for this project.

Nome Elementary School fifth-grader Joshua Bourdon and junior high eighth-grader Jenny Yi will represent Nome this year in the Alaska State Spelling Bee.

Bourdon and Yi battled their way through the rounds to be given their respective titles Feb. 5 during the Nome Parent Teacher Student Association Spelling Bee. Fourth-grader Dane Robinson earned runner-up honors in the elementary division, while Tristan Matson scored second for the junior high students.

Grade level winners were Brayden Bahnke, third grade; Dane Robinson, fourth grade; Joshua Bourdon, fifth grade; Jeremy Knudsen and Degnan Lawrence (tie), sixth grade; Daniel Head, seventh grade; Jenny Yi, eighth grade.

This year's bee was coordinated by Susan Rand. Diana Adams was the pronouncer. Ian McRae, Sharon Penttila and Jake Rand served as judges. Betsy Brennan, Sandi Keller and Barb Nickels kept score. Richard Beneville provided technical assistance and set-up. Refreshments were provided by Lori Head, Monica Rose and Josie Bourdon.

prove the contracts, could have herself offered the second to bring the motion to the table. Even so, by allowing Nickels' motion to die, the three board members who initially voted to replace the principals—Albert McComas, Kirsten Timbers and Heather Payenna—showed they were not going to change their minds.

The contracts were back on the agenda Feb. 9 after an informal polling of members at the Jan. 26 meeting showed that Karmun, Timbers and Nickels supported another look at the issue.

Although not as packed as it was two weeks earlier, the commons at Nome Elementary School again seated an abnormally large turnout for a school board meeting. While at least 70 approached the board to comment at that Jan. 26 session, just more than 20 individuals out of the approximately 100 in the room stepped up to the microphones Tuesday evening. The commentary, however, was much the same.

Nearly all who spoke did so in support of the two administrators. Many asked for the board members' justification in denying the contracts after Sullivan and Boyer had received glowing evaluations and the recommendation for retention from superintendent Jon Wehde. "The weight of the world is on your shoulders, but you got to know that it's on all of ours too," parent Mari Lammer said to the board. "We're just looking for an answer or a reason.... I don't distrust any of you, but I'm just looking for a reason."

The initial 3-2 vote to seek new administrators for Nome-Beltz came Jan. 12 after the board members went behind closed doors for nearly an hour and a half. Neither Sullivan nor Boyer, who were both in attendance at the Jan. 12 meeting, were invited into the executive session. The votes proceeded after the private session with no board discussion aired in the public meeting.

Karmun had called the executive session to discuss personnel matters. Board members have cited that since the discussion was over personnel issues they are unable to offer the justification behind the votes for the administrators' removal. Board member Nickels has been vocal in contending that she believes the two should be retained. "Having been in the executive session, I still couldn't come up with the reason why we made the decision we did," she said Tuesday evening.

Joining many community members, both Boyer and Sullivan, to no avail, have addressed the school board to ask why they were not retained. Boyer took the microphone Tuesday to again make the plea. "I have three kids. I have to feed my kids next year. I just need to know the reason why," he said. "If you were in my place—if you had a job one day and didn't the next without knowing the reason why—I think you would be asking the same thing."

Two of the 21 community members to speak Tuesday did rise to support the board's initial vote. Leo and Erna Rasmussen each took to the microphone to back the board. Erna Rasmussen did so quickly, simply saying she wanted a letter entered into the record. Leo Rasmussen, a former mayor, lauded the members who voted to not renew the contracts. "I'm proud you've had the guts to test the will of the public. You were elected to do that," he said to a trickle of applause.

Nome resident and business owner Matt Tomter disagreed. "Testing the will of the people, it's not really what it's about. It's about running the school," he said. "... You guys have a process to follow. The decisions you make affect everyone in this room and every kid in the school district and every kid who is about to go into the school district. ...Not to follow the process is wrong."

The majority of the board's decision on the contracts pushed parent David Head to not follow the meeting's process. A few minutes after the board had moved on from the contracts, Head rose, grabbed the microphone and called for a recall of certain board members, interrupting discussion of another matter. Despite Karmun's insistence that he was out of order, Head continued. "There are no policies here, so I can talk," Head replied before walking out of the room to applause and some condemnation.

Many in the audience questioned what they saw as the board circumventing its process in handling personnel matters. The duty of evaluating and dealing with complaints regarding administrators normally falls to the superintendent, who then reports to the board. Wehde had recommended both Sullivan and Boyer be retained for next year.

Betsy Brennan, a frequent attendee at board meetings and a former board member, said she believed the vote sidestepped the normal handling of contracts. "I feel the process was flawed. Certainly board policy was not followed. Certainly an executive session was called when the personnel were not invited to come into the session," she said.

Of the critiques aimed at Sullivan and Boyer at the more heavily attended Jan. 26 meeting were complaints of students falling through the cracks and a disregard for dropouts. Boyer argued that he is succeeding in the two main tasks for which he was hired. "My job is to lower discipline [problems] and try and keep kids in school. Discipline numbers are down. I have been working with different agencies trying to keep kids in school and trying to get kids back to school," he said. "Kids aren't sleeping in class. Kids aren't cussing down the hallways."

Besides thanking the public for their participation and comments, the majority of the board did not speak to the issue that brought most to Tuesday's meeting.

Nickels, however, again departed from her fellow members. In her closing comments, she pointed out that Gov. Sean Parnell had declared February as "School Board Recognition Month." Citing an article in an Alaska Association of School Boards newsletter, Nickels read a passage referring to citizens working with local school boards. "I only wish the Nome Board of Education used their role as intended and had ensured a continuing commitment to local citizen control and decision-making," Nickels said.

What now

Following the board's silence on bringing Sullivan's and Boyer's administrative contracts up for another vote, they did unanimously approve all the tenured teacher contracts before them. Sullivan's name was among those on the list.

Wehde said since Sullivan is a tenured and accredited employee with the district she has the right to remain employed as a teacher. Wehde said he would work to fit her in with a position that is in line with the district's soon-to-be-approved strategic plan.

Wehde also said the district is moving forward with the hiring process for a new administrative team for Nome-Beltz. He said the district has so far received approximately 30 applications for each position, some from Alaska, some from out of state. He said plans are to do a first round of interviews with candidates via teleconference with a committee made up of, among others, himself, one or two school board members, district personnel officer Bill Gartung, administrator Jon Berkeley.

Once the field is narrowed to three or so candidates for each position, those prospective administrators will be interviewed in person for the positions. "This has to be a completely thorough process," Wehde said.

“Based on price index history, the group felt that July prices were most favorable and a 30-day average more favorable,” he said. “Delta-Western will tell us the lift date and we will set the quantities then.”

Handeland also explained that negotiations with the supplier set their profit at 53 cents per gallon plus whatever happened in the NYMEX market. In the past, the price on the day of lifting has linked to a different fuel market index from Seattle, but this year WAFG hired an economist to evaluate several indices and deemed a NYMEX price prediction more favorable, as that exchange had more action than OPI out of Seattle.

Handeland told the NJUS Board of Directors, who approved the contract at their Feb. 4 meeting, that NJUS staff would consider power coming onto the grid from the Banner Wind Farm in setting the volume to be purchased. If predicted output from the wind turbines materializes, NJUS generators will use about 125,000 fewer gallons of fuel over the next year.

NJUS has decided not to join a Norton Sound Economic Development Corp. fuel purchase group this year, an alliance that has been under consideration.

“Our product is unique,” Handeland said.

“The potential of splitting with those utilities is not in our interest. Our fuel has lower sulfur content, and based on the volume we require, there are economic advantages to the supplier being able to use the whole barge instead of having to split out the orders.”

Handeland told the board that a deal could work out where NSEDC would finance the Nome purchase at a very low interest rate even if the utility did not use their purchase program.

“Well, I hope the July price is real low,” NJUS board member Carl Emmons said.

The NJUS staff based 2010 budget projections on $3 per gallon, according to Handeland, as fuel prices seemed to be “on the rise.”

On Feb. 4, the NJUS board handed the Nome Common Council a spending plan for operations and maintenance that shows estimated revenues of $13.5 million, reduced by about $320,000 from FY09 projected revenue, against operations and maintenance expenses of $12.8 million, slightly down from projected '09, including provisions for depreciation in the amount of about $4.7 million, which results in a net margin of $720,000.

Net margin and non-cash amortizations will fund the 2010 capital improvements budget, annual bond and debt service payments, fuel inventory and grant program local participation. The operation and maintenance budget does not include these items.

child by at least two separate acts, and one of the acts resulted in the death of the child.”

On Sept. 20, 2009, a family member found Harley’s mother, Tammy Dickson, 22, unresponsive. A health aide was called to the scene but was not successful in attempts to revive Tammy Dickson.

Alaska State Troopers declined to say how the death occurred and that an investigation was in progress. Community members, however, reported that Dickson had hanged herself in an apparent suicide.

On Oct. 14, 2009, Lee filed a motion for dismissal of his indictment, saying that hearsay testimony, recorded testimony presented to the July 17 grand jury, from Tammy Dickson, should not be admitted. Tammy Dickson did not appear before the grand jury. Judge Ben Esch ruled that Dickson was unavailable and had a Fifth Amendment privilege not to testify. At grand jury, an Alaska State Trooper investigator, Mark Granda summarized Tammy Dickson’s testimony and played a recording. Lee’s motion was denied.

In a subsequent motion, Lee asked for additional discovery, access to records on investigation of Tammy Dickson’s suicide, so that defense could review them for her state of mind at the time of her suicide and have use of the records in defense of acts alleged against Lee that were committed by an alternate perpetrator.

Judge Esch ruled Lee could have access to records in possession of the state, but medical records fall under Tammy Dickson’s right to privacy and that right extends to surviving family members. The state does not have the medical records. Dickson’s personal representative has the power to waive the right.

According to court documents, Lee was interviewed by Troopers on two occasions and also by an Anchorage Police Department Officer Patrick Roberts. The grand jury heard the Trooper interviews, but Mark Granda, Trooper investigator, did not mention the interview with Roberts. In another motion for dismissal, Lee argued that the grand jury was left with the impression that they had all the evidence Lee was willing to provide to medical and police personnel, that Lee’s consistent denial from the day Harley Dickson entered the hospital to eight months later of any involvement in the baby’s death was not provided the grand jury. The state has argued that all three interviews produced the same, except that in one interview Lee denied drinking. A ruling on this motion is pending.

A Teller village health aide answered a report on Oct. 12, 2008, according to court documents, that Harley Dickson had stopped breathing and was foaming at the mouth. The health aide went to the residence of Frank David Lee and Tammy Dickson. The baby was not breathing, according to documents.

The health worker started rescue breathing. The baby was taken to the clinic and then medivaced directly to Anchorage.

In Anchorage, Barbara Coopes, an acute care pediatrician, treated Harley Dickson. She told the grand jury that the baby arrived at the hospital with a coma and respiratory failure, meaning he was on life support, according to court papers. She said he had injuries to his eyes and brain swelling. Dr. Coopes testified that, in her opinion, the baby had been shaken.

Shaken Baby Syndrome is a form of child abuse where the abuser violently shakes a baby or small child creating a whiplash motion causing acceleration-deceleration injuries that can lead to death or severe brain injuries.

Dr. Coopes, according to court records, said her opinion was that Lee’s explanations concerning his running outside with the baby in a panic October 2008 did not explain the injuries.

A pre-trial omnibus hearing for Lee’s case is slated for Feb. 12 at 9 a.m. in the Nome Courthouse before Judge Esch.

Icicle Seafoods revives Norton Sound herring sac roe fishery

Norton Sound Economic Development Corporation board addresses regional fisheries issues

By Laurie McNicholas

The Alaska Department of Fish and Game will open a commercial fishery for herring sac roe in Norton Sound this spring because Icicle Seafoods will provide a market for the product, reports Jim Menard, area manager for Norton Sound and Kotzebue.

The region's once lively sac roe fishery died for lack of a market several years ago.

The Norton Sound Economic Development Corp. board approved terms of a contract with Icicle Seafoods at a meeting last week in Nome. Menard told the board he is working with state and federal agencies to obtain a waiver for Icicle Seafoods to send a herring processor into eastern Norton Sound waters—a critical habitat area for spectacled eider. The bird was listed as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act in 2001.

Regulations restrict discharges of gray water into waters less than 60 feet deep in a critical habitat area, but Menard said most eiders will not arrive there until after the fishery ends. It usually closes at the end of May, he added.

The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation gave preliminary approval for a waiver for Icicle Seafoods Feb. 8 and sent the request to the Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Menard reports.

He said the sac roe fishery is staged at Cape Denbigh or in the Stebbins and St. Michael area depending on ice conditions. The harvest quota for Norton Sound herring is an ample 7,000 tons.

Icicle Seafoods will want to place its processing vessel in the lee of Bosboro Island to protect it from stormy weather, Menard said. Waters in the area are only about 50 feet deep, and they are shallow throughout Norton Sound, he noted. He said tenders can't run long distances to deliver catches to a processor.

Unalakleet River weir

A four-year assessment project for Unalakleet River Chinook (king) salmon will begin this summer with installation of a floating weir on the Unalakleet River, reported Scott Kent, ADF&G's assistant area manager for Norton Sound. Kent said the Native Village of Unalakleet fully endorses the weir and will receive $204,000 of the total $619,000 in project funds to employ two fisheries technicians. A long-term plan is to help NVU secure funding for a local biologist who can run the project, he added.

Kent said NSEDC is providing matching funds by counting salmon at the North River tower, a tributary of the Unalakleet River, and the Bureau of Land Management will fund a technician to help with weir operations. He thanked Paul Ivanoff and Middy Johnson, NSEDC employees in Unalakleet, for their unswerving support of the study. The Office of Subsistence Management approved funding for the project last month.

Kent said the weir will be fabricated in Unalakleet with installation scheduled in mid-June. Twenty new panels for the Pilgrim River weir also will be fabricated this spring in Unalakleet, he added.

In the past decade, king salmon returns to the Unalakleet River have declined steeply to a level that precludes commercial fishing and severely restricts subsistence and sport fishing, Kent notes in a written project description. The project aims to obtain estimates of the abundance and age, sex and length (ASL) composition from spawning Unalakleet River kings. ASL and escapement data from weirs are considered the least biased and most accurate. The data will be used to determine spawning goals and examine trends in relation to environmental changes and harvest practices.

Nome boat ramp

The NSEDC executive committee discussed a request from fishermen for an additional boat ramp in Nome. Paul Ivanoff, NSEDC community benefits director, said fishermen want a ramp in the outer harbor, which stays ice-free for three to four weeks longer than the inner harbor, so they can fish later in the season. The fishermen say the existing boat ramp is used by miners and recreational boaters and is inaccessible at times, Ivanoff added.

The City of Nome says the Army Corps of Engineers won't issue a permit for a boat ramp in the outer harbor, reported NSEDC Chief Operating Officer Simon Kinneen. "There is a potential for a third armored pier in the future," he added.

Dan Harrelson, NSEDC president and board chairman, said he has heard that a company parks its barges at the boat ramp. Charlie Lean, who is director of Fisheries Development and Research for NSEDC and a member of the Nome Port Commission, said the ramp originally was built as a landing ramp for barges, so it is steep. He said there is talk of building a new ramp next to the current ramp at a shallower angle and separating them with pylons. A survey for a new ramp has been completed, he noted.

Kinneen pegged the estimated cost for a new ramp at $500,000.

Lean said the Corps of Engineers does not want to place a ramp in the outer harbor because it would have to dredge away the beach and pave over riprap, creating a ramp in both directions.

Harrelson asked Kinneen to meet with Nome fishermen and tell them they can opt for a second ramp next to the existing one or wait until a third armored pier is built. Kinneen said he will ask a city representative to attend the meeting.

Community welders project

Five communities have accepted NSEDC's offer to provide each of them with a welder package valued at about $11,000, reported Paul Ivanoff. They are Golovin, Elim, Koyuk, Savoonga and White Mountain. The package includes a welder, generator, welding supplies and a trailer. It was developed because some communities said they need welders to repair small boats and carts, Ivanoff said.

If a community doesn't need a welder project, the city council may submit a proposal for alternate equipment within a budget guideline of $11,000, he added.

Chief executive officer Janis Ivanoff said NSEDC's education, employment and training unit is developing a welder training program for villagers. The NSEDC board directed staff to provide welder packages to the five communities that have requested them.

Boat trailer funded

Nome fisherman Frank McFarland thanked the NSEDC board for providing the Norton Sound Marine Harvesters Association with funds to purchase a new boat trailer. He later told The Nome Nugget that the association's trailer had been damaged late last October while hauling a boat used for beach mining out of ice at the boat ramp.

"The harbor was all frozen in ice from channel to boat ramp," McFarland said. "The Bad Chicken kept slipping, then three of the rams broke and put holes in the boat." The boat has a fiberglass hull.

The broken trailer is tied up in an insurance claim, but McFarland thinks it will be useable eventually. Its steel hydraulic rams were used to lift a boat out of the water and transfer its weight to the trailer so it could be pulled up onto land.

McFarland said he asked NSEDC for $61,000 to repair the damaged trailer and an older trailer that needs new axels, and to maintain both trailers for 10 years, but NSEDC gave him that amount to buy a new trailer. The damaged trailer cost more than $61,000 and the association has no matching funds, so it will need to buy a used trailer or a smaller one, McFarland said.

Crabbers miss bonus

McFarland was among three crab fishermen who asked the NSEDC board to reconsider a decision not to pay a post-season bonus for their crab catch, which they sold to the company's processing plant in Nome. He provided figures for his fish ticket receipts from crab and halibut deliveries and a list of expenses such as crew payments, fuel and insurance that showed he took home only 20 percent of his gross income after four to five months of fishing.

Eric Osborne said Norton Sound crab fishermen are paid a lot less than the grounds price paid for Bristol Bay crab. A two-week fishing closure at the beginning of the crabbing season caused financial hardship for harvesters, he added. Osborne said NSEDC paid $1.50 per pound for silver salmon, double the statewide average price, except for troll-caught silvers in Southeastern Alaska.

Wilma Osborne noted that she and her husband, Eric, have four children. She said when the Unalakleet plant pays silver salmon fishermen a bonus and crab fishermen receive no bonus, it impacts her and the children. She said receiving a post-season crab bonus is like a Permanent Fund Dividend or Christmas; it's a big celebration. "I feel I was not invited to the celebration," she added.

Robin Thomas said Norton Sound crabbers receive the lowest ground prices in the state. Noting that it is hard to operate with high overhead expenses, he said NSEDC should pay fishermen at least the average state price for crab plus a cost-of-living adjustment.

Harrelson said before the crab season began last year, the board decided to get away from bonuses and give fishermen a good grounds price. "At December meetings after listening to testimony from fishermen, the board said no poundage bonus for crab, halibut or salmon fishermen," he added. He said silver salmon prices were up and down for the whole season, so the price per pound paid to silver salmon fishermen was adjusted throughout the season.

EGGS: Unscrambling the Research

By Bob Lawrence, MD
Alaska Family Doctor

Do you need a compact, easy-to-prepare, whole food likely to improve your memory, help your eyesight, and lead to weight loss? Eggs may be your super food.

Eggs have spent several decades on an often-misunderstood list of foods thought to increase a person's risk of heart disease. This is because eggs are loaded with cholesterol, and it is known that certain forms of cholesterol in the blood stream are associated with a higher risk of cardiovascular disease. Traditionally, medical professionals assumed harmful cholesterol levels in the blood were related to high levels of cholesterol in the diet. This led the American Heart Association to recommend a limit on cholesterol consumption to 300 milligrams (mg) or less per day in otherwise healthy individuals. The problem is that a single large egg has 212mg of cholesterol, meaning a person eating a two-egg omelet will break the daily AHA recommendation before finishing breakfast.

Fortunately for egg-lovers, research over the last several decades has not supported a dietary restriction on eggs for most people. In fact, in 1999, JAMA published an important study of 120,000 men and women showing that consumption of up to 7 eggs a week does not increase the risk of heart disease or stroke in otherwise healthy people. The only increase in risk was seen in patients with diabetes. Various studies since then show that though eggs may cause an increase in overall cholesterol in about 30 percent of people, the increase occurs in both good (HDL) and bad (LDL) cholesterol so that the overall risk of heart disease remains unchanged.

Cholesterol may be the most infamous component of eggs. But from a health point of view, the average egg, at only 71 calories, has a long list of vitamins, minerals, and nutrients that promotes overall wellbeing.

The typical large egg has 6 grams of protein and 3.5 grams of healthy unsaturated fats. The fat-soluble vitamins A, D, E, and K are concentrated in eggs. Eggs are also a good source of B vitamins, zinc, iron, and folate.

Eggs likely improve and maintain eye health. Egg yolks are a rich source of lutein and zeaxanthin, relatives of beta-carotene, which have been linked to a reduced risk of age-related macular degeneration. A study published last year in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition reported that patients who consumed 2 to 4 eggs a day for 5 weeks showed an improvement in the health of the retina of the eye.

Eggs are also a rich source of choline, an essential nutrient thought to improve memory and support healthy muscle function.

Interestingly, egg consumption may also provide one of the secrets to weight loss. Eating eggs causes a person to feel full longer. In a 2005 study published in the Journal of the American College of Nutrition, researchers found that subjects who consumed two eggs for breakfast felt full longer and ate less over the next 36 hours than others who ate a bagel-based breakfast with the same number of calories. Subsequent research by these scientists showed that people who consumed eggs for breakfast lost 65 percent more weight and maintained a higher level of energy compared to those who ate a bagel-based breakfast with the same number of calories.

Overall, the research supports the use of eggs in a healthy diet. Of course, this benefit does not extend to the bacon, sausage, hash browns, or other sources of saturated fat typically prepared with eggs. However, it does not take long to acquire a taste for eggs with a healthy mix of seasoning, onions, peppers, or tomatoes that will afford the greatest health benefit. So consider an egg for breakfast and be well.

pany's local assets, which include land and gravel. Rhylin Bailie, NovaGold's manager of corporate and investor relations, confirmed the rumors in an e-mail to the Nugget Feb. 8. "NovaGold has been approached by several parties interested in acquiring non-Rock Creek mine assets," she wrote.

A majority of NSEDC board members approved a major Bering Sea fisheries investment proposed by the company's wholly owned for-profit subsidiary, Siu Alaska Corp. Siu President and CEO John Eckels presented the proposal in a two-hour executive session Feb. 4. The NSEDC board discussed the proposal for an hour in executive session Feb. 5 and then approved the following motion by Nome's representative Don Stiles, who chairs the Siu board, seconded by Wilfred Katchek of Stebbins.

"...that based on discussion held in executive session, the board approve Siu's proposal to guarantee a loan to Siu to purchase fisheries assets and fishing rights, and further that NSEDC purchase the crab quota associated with that asset." This motion gave approval to NSEDC to provide a loan guarantee to Siu.

Reggie Barr of Brevig Mission and Teller's Joe Garnie voted against the motion, Orville Ahkinga Jr. of Diomedé abstained, and Truman Kava of Savoonga was absent. The 11 other NSEDC board members approved the proposal.

In response to the Nugget's request for information about the venture, Eckels wrote in an e-mail that Siu "is looking at an investment opportunity involved in the Bering Sea fisheries. We are very pleased that NSEDC has today seen fit to approve our request for the guarantee of a pending financing plan. We must emphasize that there are several significant hurdles before us, including regulatory approval, before the transaction can be closed. Due to confidentiality requirements between the parties and the ongoing sensitive negotiations, we are unable to disclose further details. Should we be successful in this opportunity, we look forward to issuing an announcement at the appropriate time."

During a public session at last week's board meeting, Eckels readily answered questions from Garnie about NSEDC's financial role in the 2008 purchase of the C/P Alaska Ocean by Glacier Fish Co. Siu holds NSEDC's 37.5 percent ownership interest in GFC. GFC's acquisition of the 376-foot Alaska Ocean increased the company's fleet of Bering Sea pollock harvesting catcher/processors to three vessels and its pollock holdings to 6.22 percent of the annual Bering Sea quota.

Garnie asked Eckels if NSEDC is in debt for the Alaska Ocean purchase.

"Yes, quite a bit of debt was taken on in the Alaska Ocean purchase; as I recall, about $150 million or so," Eckels replied.

Garnie asked if NSEDC owes the debt, and Eckels said GFC owes it. "There could be a capital call if Glacier Fish came to us and said they could not make payments," Eckels added. "NSEDC has not guaranteed any of that debt."

Garnie said he does not understand how NSEDC can own 37.5 percent of GFC and not owe any debt.

"Glacier Fish is responsible for making debt payments," Eckels replied. "If Glacier Fish does not have the funds to make payments, there could be a capital call [saying] 'we need more money.'"

Harrelson asked Eckels if the pay period for the debt is eight years, and Eckels said he thinks so. Harrelson said the faster the debt is paid off the larger will be the distribution of profits from Glacier Fish back to Siu.

Eckels said GFC officials are pleased with the company's current position despite an 18 percent decline in the total allowable catch of pollock and a decline in market prices. "They have done a good job of cost control," he added. "At the last meeting I said 2010 would bring a capital call possibly, but now Glacier Fish is quite pleased." He said GFC has no expectations for a capital call in projections for this year.

Aleutian No. 1 report

Siu holds NSEDC's 50 percent ownership interest in the Aleutian No. 1, which harvests golden (brown) king crab and opilio crab. Noting that the Bering Sea Women's shelter owns 25 percent of the vessel and its captains own the remaining 25 percent, Garnie asked Eckels who manages the vessel and pays for its taxes, wages, fuel and upkeep.

Eckels said Siu is the managing member of the Aleutian No. 1 LLC for operational and administrative issues. "Siu has contracted with one of the fishing captains to manage fishing operations," he added.

The vessel broke even on brown crab in 2009, Eckels reported. The exvessel price for brown crab dropped from about $3.50 per pound in 2008 to $2.31 in December 2009.

Noting that the Aleutian No. 1 harvests a lot of crab owned by NSEDC, Harrelson asked what the vessel pays the parent company as a royalty.

CDQ Harvest Manager Jon Zuck said royalty payments were a little more than $1 per pound for a total of about $560,000. Harrelson noted that royalty payments are tax-free.

The Aleutian No. 1 currently is harvesting opilio crab, Eckels noted. He said the captains have reported low catch rates and icing conditions, but they expect to harvest the quota by the end of the season in April. He said the exvessel price for opilio is about 40 cents per pound lower than last year.

NSEDC's net worth grows

NSEDC posted an $11.1 million gain in net assets in 2009, $9.6 million of it due to stock market gains, reported Controller Rick Walicki. He said the company withdrew $1 million from a securities investment portfolio for operating expenses last September. Net assets totaled $134.7 million on Dec. 31, 2009 compared to $123.6 million at the end of 2008. Walicki said his figures for 2009 are preliminary.

Bulk fuel order leaps

The NSEDC executive committee reviewed interest rate bids from three financial institutions for a line of credit the company needs to accommodate a 4-million gallon fuel order from Bonanza Fuel of Nome, a new participant in the 2010 Bulk Fuel Program. At a cost of $2 to $3 per gallon, the Bonanza Fuel order will total up to $12 million, so NSEDC will need a line of credit to meet cash flow demands, explained Chief Executive Officer Janis Ivanoff.

The program funds bulk fuel orders for participants in NSEDC's 15 member communities. They repay NSEDC for the fuel loans in monthly installments for a year. The program charges no interest or administrative fees.

The Bank of America submitted the lowest interest rate (1 percent), followed by Wells Fargo Bank (1.73 percent) and Charles Schwab (2.75 percent). Terms varied among the three entities. Walicki said Wells Fargo handles NSEDC's checking account, so it would be convenient for the company to establish a line of credit with the same bank. The committee directed staff to try to negotiate a lower interest rate with Wells Fargo.

Board and staff changes

Diomedé residents elected Orville Ahkinga Jr. as their representative on the NSEDC board at a special election Dec. 16. He replaces Mary Menade-look, who resigned from the board.

Janis Ivanoff introduced Kyan Olanna as NSEDC's general counsel, a new position approved by the board at a special meeting in December. She said Olanna is a graduate of Nome-Beltz High School and Yale University.

The NSEDC board elected Jack Carpenter to a seat on the Siu Alaska Corp. board at a special meeting in December. He replaces Henry Ivanoff, who was elected to the seat in November but declined it, citing plans for hip surgery.

Lady Nanooks net second in Barrow

Holding a two-point lead in hostile territory, the Lady Nanooks entered the fourth quarter against tournament host Barrow Saturday night with a tournament win within grasp.

Turned out the Lady Whalers' reach was a little longer as they outpaced Nome down the line to take the game and tournament with the 56-41 win. Richelle Horner and Hilary Stiles led Nome in the effort, each scoring 14 points. Devynn Johnson added 10 points and Renee Lammer chipped in three. Barrow was led by Jaleen Simmonds' 28 points, followed up by Hillary Lowry and Jalene Kanayurak who each had 11.

Horner, Johnson and Stiles were all named to the all-tournament team for Nome. Barrow's Simmonds was the tourney's most valuable player and three-point competition champion.

The Lady Nanooks' route to the championship game came by way of wins against Skyview on Friday and Unalaska on Thursday.

In Friday's match against Skyview, it was Nome who would play the spoiler. Down by seven at the half, the Lady Nanooks rallied on the back of Johnson's 12 points in the third and fourth quarters. The nearly six-foot tall freshman led all scorers for the game with 15 points. Stiles added a dozen points and Lammer contributed nine, including the go-ahead free-throw within the last 30 seconds of the game that sealed the lead for Nome. Casee Penrod led the Soldotna-based Panthers with 16 points.

While its final two games were nail-biters, Nome started the Barrow tournament Feb. 4 with a big 52-26 win against Unalaska. After a relatively close first quarter, the Lady Nanooks outscored the Raiders 15-5 in the second and continued to widen the lead until the final buzzer. Stiles, with a dozen points, led the scoring for Nome which saw seven players put numbers on the board. Devynn Johnson scored 10, followed by Horner with nine, Dylan Johnson with 8, Chloe Mattheis with seven, Kaitlyn Gartung with four and Lamer with two.

Nome, who comes out of the Barrow tournament with a season record of 11-7, will next head south to compete in the Valdez Elks Tournament Feb. 11-13. The Lady Nanooks will first face Glennallen on Thursday.

Boys basketball gets back at Barrow

Playing on their opponents' home court, Nome took full advantage of the opportunity to even the record against one of the only teams to beat them this season.

The Nanooks triumphed by a dozen points over tournament-host Barrow in the championship game Saturday evening before a packed house. Nome took a 15-point lead into halftime and was able to keep the intensity up through the second half to come out on top 66-54. Barrow beat Nome 66-57 earlier in the season.

Tournament MVP Jeremy Head notched 24 points on the way to the win, backed up by Mason Evans who poured in 18. Evans, who also won the tournament's free-throw contest, recorded his 400th career assist in the game. Tim Sullivan also pitched in with a double-digit effort in the championship game, adding 13 to Nome's total. Sullivan also won the tourney's three-point contest. Joining MVP Head, Sullivan and Evans were named to spots on the all-tournament team.

Barrow was led by all-tourney team members Albert Gerke with 19 and Tyler Adams who scored 12.

In the two games that led up to the championship, Nome's opponents had to be left wondering what happened to them. On Friday Nome put 72 points between itself and Skyview in a 91-19 rout. The Nanooks came out of the first quarter with a 36-0 lead and never looked back. Nearly every Nome player had a chance to score as 10 players recorded points. Head led the way with 29, followed by Sullivan and Evans with nine, Derek Wieler, Nathan Blandford and Jode Babcock with eight, Mikey and Jon Wongittilin with six, and Jeremiah Johnson and David Stickel with four.

The Nanooks' match against Unalaska Feb. 4 got Nome's scoring machine rolling with an 80-point effort against the Raiders' 38. Sullivan led the charge for Nome with a game-high 28 points, including seven three-pointers. Evans added 17 while racking up six assists. Unalaska's Michael Fernandez led the Raiders with 10.

Nome came home from the Barrow tourney with a 16-2 record which it will defend this week at the Valdez Elks Tournament. The Nanooks will first meet Glennallen in Valdez Feb. 11.

Obituary

Dantel "Aguupan" Savetilik, Sr.

Daniel "Aguupan" Savetilik, Sr. was born September 15, 1923 at Egavik, to Savetilik and Grace Savetilik. He died peacefully on January 19, 2010 in his home in Shaktoolik where he always wanted to be.

Agaupan attended school up to the first grade. He then had to stay home and take care of his siblings, until he married Naomi Sockpealuk and had four children. Naomi died on June 21, 1951. He later met and married Agnes Takak on December 12, 1952. Together they raised a family. Agnes died on August 24, 1979. A few years later, he married Lucy Sockpealuk on December 27, 1985 and was married until she died on May 23, 2005. He loved and cherished all three of his wives and treated them all with respect.

He was in the Army National Guard and retired on November 1, 1959. He also was in the Alaska Territorial Guard and was honorably discharged on November 1, 1962. He received a certificate from the Plant Management Maintenance School at Mt. Edgecumbe on August 2, 1967. He was hired as a BIA Maintenance/Custodian on May 15, 1967. He then retired on May 11, 1984, due to all BIA Schools closing down and the Bering Strait School District taking over. He was rehired by the B.S.S.D., and retired May 15, 1985. He also worked various jobs which included working in the cannery and working on the railroad. He handled the births of all 10 of his children. Others asked him to midwife births, but he said, "No, my wife might get jealous." He also received his Lay Pastor License on July 11, 1974 and continued serving as a lay pastor until July 1, 1994. He was always available at home for anyone who asked for prayer. He also received the Elder of the Year Award in 1996. For the remainder of his life, he stayed home with his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Aguupan was preceded in death by his parents, Savetilik and Grace Savetilik; his siblings, Nils, Johnny, Rebecca, Ruth, Gladys and Florence; his wives, Naomi, Agnes and Lucy Savetilik; his children, Cyrus, Gordon, Victor, Ruth and son-in-law, Henry "Boya" Kavairlook; his grandchildren, Cyrus (Clarence and Edna's son), Roberta (Cyrus' daughter), Silas, Cyrus and Lisa (Allen and Evelyn's sons and daughter), Donald (Lawrence and Della's son) and Delores (Donna's daughter).

He is survived by his only sister, Anna Etageak, his children, Clarence Savetilik, Sr. and wife Edna, Allen Savetilik, Sr. and wife Evelyn, Grace Moths and husband John, Daniel Savetilik, Jr. and wife Minnie, Newman, Myron, Della Etageak and husband Lawrence, Robert Savetilik and wife Elaine, Donna Savetilik; stepchildren, Rhoda Asicksik and husband Eugene, Teresa Perry and husband Nate and Benjamin Sockpealuk. He also helped raise Carrie Katchatag in her earlier years; 23 grandchildren and 24 great-grandchildren.

Papa was a strong, loving, respectful and humble man who always opened his home to everyone. Even up to his last day, he was still feeding people. Papa will be greatly missed by everyone and let there be peace to his memory.

A JOURNEY, WITH MANY VOICES.

The Census only comes around every ten years and it is our tool to let everyone know who we are and what we need. It's ten questions that will help determine the need for schools, housing, roads and hospitals. By participating we speak for the generations of native people before us and for those to come.
