Rock Creek up for sale

NovaGold says need to focus on larger projects spurs decision

By Tyler Rhodes

NovaGold Resources announced Tuesday that it is officially putting its Rock Creek gold mine project up for sale.

According to the firm's director of communications, Rhylin Bailie, the Canadian mining company has hired an undisclosed outside firm to solicit offers for the open-pit project just outside of Nome. "We do think that the project holds value in the right portfolio," Bailie said. "It just doesn't fit in our portfolio anymore."

According to Bailie, NovaGold is placing its focus on two larger projects, Donlin Creek near the Kuskokwim River, and Galore Creek in British Columbia. The Rock Creek

Mine, while at a more advanced stage in development, is tiny in comparison to the two other projects. "Our two big projects, Donlin Creek and Galore Creek, are ramping up, and we need to focus our time and resources at those projects," Bailie said.

Bailie said employees working at the mine were informed of the decision Tuesday morning. Approximately 30 direct employees and contractors have been working at the mine at any given time recently. Bailie said the staffing at the site will remain at its current level as NovaGold solicits offers for the project.

Ordinance would end overnight camping at Belmont Beach

By Laurie McNicholas

Nome Common Council members moved a slowly evolving solution to the land use conflicts at Belmont Beach on the east side of the Snake River closer to implementation at their meeting Monday.

The council heard first reading of an ordinance to amend section 13.25.060, which prohibits overnight camping, the erection of temporary residential structures and the storage of personal property, to expand the area included in the prohibition southward to an area of Belmont Beach adjacent to the southernmost portion of lot 61A, block 57. The council moved the ordinance to a second reading, public hearing and final action at the next regular meeting.

The proposed ordinance addresses land use conflicts between residents of the Belmont Beach area and gold dredge miners who park their dredges on the beach. On Sept. 13 the council adopted an amended recommendation of the Nome Port Commission to separate the gold miners from the recreation and subsistence users of the beach by establishing a boundary between them and designating an area of the beach for a boat ramp.

The council heard first reading of a proposed ordinance to amend sections 10.30.030 (a) to prohibit dogs from Anvil City Square and specific playgrounds and unanimously moved it forward for second reading and a public hearing. The amended ordinance will apply to the Nome Elementary School grounds and to any playground owned or maintained by the city.

The council approved by a 4-1 vote first reading of an ordinance to accept a right of way easement over Lucy's Way (on the side of Anvil Mountain near the Panorama Subdivision) moving the ordinance forward for second reading and a public hearing. Councilman Stan Andersen voted against the ordinance, through which private property owners would grant a perpetual right of way to the city across a roadway in the Lucy's Way subdivision. In accepting the right of way offer, the city also would accept maintenance responsibilities for the road.

Andersen voiced opposition to a proposed resolution to extend the term of agreement with Bristol Environmental and Engineering Services Corp. (BEESC) as acting city engineer. The city entered into a contract with BEESC Oct. 14, 2003, and the current addendum agreement extended the contract from Oct. 14, 2008 to Oct. 14, 2010. Senior Engineer James Vogel has served as main engineer under the entire term of the contract.

Andersen said he would rather put the contract out to bid to see what others have to offer because Randy Romenesko, who has managed several city construction projects, plans to terminate his agreement with the city for consulting services in December of this year. The council rejected the resolution to extend

BEESC's contract by a 3-2 vote. Councilmen Jerald Brown and Randy Pomeranz voted in

Flu shot clinics coming early

Plenty of vaccine should be available region-wide

By Tyler Rhodes

Like it or not, the more unpleasant realities of winter are on their way.

The cold. The blizzards. The darkness. And, come December and January, the flu.

In contrast to last year when vaccine supplies were short due to the new threat of H1N1, or Swine Flu, Norton Sound Health Corp. is reporting fully stocked supplies and plans for multiple vaccination clinics. "We believe we have received more than enough this year to meet demand," said Chris Kilby, director of Public Health Nursing for NSHC.

This year's flu vaccine is formulated to target

Letters

Dear Editor,

After reading the 9/16/10 letter Ms. Karen Nanouk wrote about the outrageous salary paid to Bering Strait Native Corporation Board members I totally agree with her viewpoint. Man...it must be really nice to be a child of one of the BSNC Board members. Imagine the expensive Christmas and birthday gifts they must receive while so many of our shareholders are struggling to survive, so many stressing about the upcoming holidays, so many praying and dreaming for that huge illusionary dividend check that never comes, so many shattered dreams and...so many that contemplate suicidal thoughts! Yes, it is time for us shareholders to put an end to draining of our dividends by these outrageous salaries

Did the board members let the shareholders know in 2008 that NANA gave BSNC 11 million dollars? Was there ever a public accounting of that money, or...was that also paid out to bonus for the board members? I would like to thank Karen Nanouk and Francine Hopson for noticing the Holy Moly differences being a shareholder and board members.

Thanks!

Dear Alaskans,

Alaska isn't Alaska anymore—the people for Alaska (Native and non-Native) have to take responsibility of Alaska's fishing resources (Beringa—the Bering Sea region and North Pacific).

In the early 70s, decisions worldwide started in motion to divide the world fishing resources. By the early 80s our President signed on the (EEZ) Law of the Seas, the 200-mile exclusive economic zones around and off the coastal zones of the world to be managed by the people living on shore of their coastline (Continental Shelf), especially the fishing resources. The reason for this was that fishing interests from afar cared not for the future of the resources fished—where it is hoped that the communities that lie next to the resource will have a greater interest in seeing the resource is managed properly. Thus, Alaska (People—State) need to take responsibility.

Do believe this would be now, if the people with political influence would take the subject up. Eventually someone will because eventually Alaska will have control of its fishing resources from birth (spawn) to the final marketing.

Sincerely,
Bruce Lemke

Port Commission rejects lone bid to prepare port development plan

By Laurie McNicholas

Twenty firms considered the City of Nome's request for proposals to prepare a port development plan, but only one submitted a bid on the project, City Manager and Port Director Josie Bahnke told members of the Nome Port Commission at their meeting Sept. 23. "The other 19 who did not respond may feel $30,000 is not enough," she added.

Harbormaster Joy Baker reported that several potential bidders contacted her to ask if the project budget of $30,000 could be increased. "I said 'no,' and none of them replied."

Bahnke said the city has no obligation to accept the lone proposal from Moffatt and Nichol of Seattle, WA, and she likes to have at least three choices to evaluate and score. She also said the costs of getting to and from Nome were not reasonably considered in the proposal.

"We could pare down the scope of the project," Bahnke suggested. "We asked for many deliverables." She said a lot of information needed for the plan such as state trends is available in-house. Noting that Eileen Bechtol is developing several plans under contract with the city, Bahnke said Bechtol could incorporate readily available information in the port development plan and work with PND Engineers of Anchorage on technical aspects.

Bechtol owns Bechtol Planning and Development in Anchor Point. PND currently is developing options for repair and expansion of the barge ramp at the port. Bahnke said neither firm responded to the RFP for the port development plan. In response to questions from commissioners, Bahnke said Bechtol told her it was out of the question for her firm to respond to the RFP because the project required an engineering firm, the scope of work was unrealistic and the project budget was insufficient.

Commissioner Charlie Lean said it's a red flag that the city received only one proposal out of 20 firms that considered bidding on the project. The commissioners unanimously adopted a motion to reject the bid from Moffatt and Nichol and work with in-house entities on a port development plan until they can come up with more definitive plans.

Offshore mining plans

Bahnke said officials from the Alaska Dept. of Natural Resources Division of Mining recently informed her of plans to open the west beach to a one quarter mile limit for offshore mining. She said DNR issued 45 permits for gold mining dredges this year, half of which park in the harbor while the other half are scattered from Belmont Point to the mouth of the Nome River and up and down the beach.

"DNR is looking at up to 60 [offshore mining] permits," Bahnke reported. "There is a moratorium in California on offshore dredging. We lack space." Ideas under consideration for solving that problem include development of a campground near dredge 6, she said.

American Roots

We are the grass roots of government. The people of Nome are what make America tic. We are the layer of government that is in direct contact and source of strength for our state and nation. Our attitudes about local government are carried forward to Juneau and Washington, DC.

What happens in our town travels up through our roots to all branches of government. We are the voters who put people in office. We have the power to make government good and responsive to citizens. We also have the power to allow bad government by doing nothing. If we stay home and let the other guy vote, we will get what we deserve.

We do have a problem. Many folks who call Nome their home can't vote in our municipal election, not can they run for office. They live outside of the city limits. The rest of us will have to do our civic duty and get to the polls next Tuesday. Let's do it. Let's vote for good government. Even though Nome has very few lawns, the grass roots of this tundra town are what America is made of, not tea leaves.

State of Alaska in the news

Compiled by Diana Haecker
AFN endorses Murkowski
In a special session, the Alaska Federation of Natives board of directors ratified a resolution to endorse Lisa Murkowski in her bid to go against the odds and remain in the senatorial race against tea party-backed Joe Miller and Democrat Scott McAdams. The resolution will be introduced to AFN's full membership at their annual convention coming up October 21- 23.

AFN co-chair and state senator Albert Kookesh said that AFN does not take endorsements lightly. In the past, AFN endorsed former governor Tony Knowles, congressman Don Young and Senator Ted Stevens. AFN president Julie Kitka said that given the fast pace of developments in this particular race, and its high-profile nature, the AFN Legislative Committee felt it appropriate to take immediate action to recommend endorsement of Senator Murkowski. Kitka said she looks forward to lively political discussion on the convention floor when the resolution is up for consideration by the entire AFN membership.

Meanwhile, Alaska Governor Sean Parnell endorsed Joe Miller in the U.S. Senate race during a joint event in Wasilla. Parnell called Miller a "principled leader" the state needs in Washington. The endorsement went also the other way around as Miller endorsed Parnell as he is seeking the governor's seat in an election. Parnell moved up to be governor after Sarah Palin quit the job halfway through her term. As Miller is going on the record for not condoning Alaska receiving federal education money or other federal earmarks, reports surfaced – and were confirmed – that he accepted federal subsidies when owning a farm in Kansas, where he came from prior to moving to Alaska in 1994.

Congressman Don Young went on the record saying that he'd endorse neither senatorial candidate.

Bill Walker won't be a write-in choice
Number 2 in the GOP primaries, Bill Walker, announced on Monday that he would not get back into the race for governor as a write-in. Last week, Walker, who was running strongly on his experience as an oil and gas expert, said he'd consider a write-in campaign after U.S. Senator Lisa Murkowski made the announcement that she would be a write-in candidate in the senatorial race. Walker also looked into the option to run as a Alaskan Independent or Libertarian, but both parties didn't respond favorably. According to Walker's Facebook post, he said it was a most difficult decision made after analysis, prayer and input from family.

Prosecutor in Ted Stevens case commits suicide
Washington (AP)— An attorney says a Justice Department prosecutor who was part of the team that convicted Sen. Ted Stevens has killed himself. Attorney Robert Luskin says 37-year-old Nicholas A. Marsh committed suicide on Sunday amid an investigation into whether he and other prosecutors in the case against Stevens acted improperly. Allegations surfaced that information was not turned over to Stevens' defense team and Attorney General Eric Holder ultimately dismissed the case and vacated the guilty verdict.

Parnell vs. "Frankenfish"
Governor Sean Parnell weighed in as the Federal Food and Drug Administration contemplates to approve genetically engineered Atlantic salmon for human consumption. Parnell said genetically engineered salmon poses significant potential threats to the environment, consumer health and the wild seafood industry. He sent off a letter to commissioner Margaret Hamburg asking for a report on environmental risks and impacts on wild stocks and said he was concerned about potential dangers associated with escaped genetically engineered fish.

State releases study of fatal airplane crashes in Alaska
According to a study by the Alaska Department of Health and Social Services Section of Epidemiology, the number of fatal aviation crashes between January and August 2010 was higher than those compared to years past. This year alone, 19 people died and eight were seriously injured in ten plane crashes, not counting the military cargo plane that went down shortly after leaving Elmendorf and the plane that went missing at Katmai National Park. The plane, its pilot and three passengers still have not been found. This year's flurry of plane accidents prompted the study. Although most of the crashes, including the crash that claimed the life of former Senator Ted Stevens and four others, are still under investigation, the study cites the wet and foggy weather as a possible culprit for the high number of plane tragedies. "Besides being difficult to fly in, the long stretch of poor weather may have affected pilot proficiency by limiting time in the air," said Mary O'Connor with the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, who co-authored the study. "Pilot hours may have been further reduced due to the high price of aviation fuel and other operational costs." The study recommends to continue crash prevention programs such as the Medallion Foundation's simulators and training programs, and Federal Aviation Administration and Alaskan Aviation Safety Foundation-sponsored safety seminars. The study also recommends that weather information should be enhanced and made easily available for pilots.

High winds pummel south-

central, Anchorage
High winds whipping through the Cook Inlet and Mat-Su Region over the weekend wreaked havoc with power lines, phone lines and caused massive disruptions of power supply. More than 200 trees fell on power lines, causing small fires and power outages for days. In some areas, the power was out for three days, while fire departments responded to hundreds of calls for service. In the Mat-Su area alone, 2,500 homes were without power on Friday and early Saturday.

In their own words: Municipal candidates answer to the Nugget

The Nome Nugget sent out questionnaires to the candidates running for city council, school board and utility board seats in the Oct. 5 municipal election. Candidates were given 200 words to answer each of three questions. The following are the responses received by The Nugget.

Nome Common Council Seat B: Jim West Jr., Cliff Johnson

Jim West Jr.
(incumbent – appointed)

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a common council member?

Born and raised in Nome, degree in business administration, own and operate various businesses here in Nome, 28-year member of the Nome Volunteer Fire and Search and Rescue Department, currently a captain, six-year member of the Nome Ambulance Department, 10-plus years as a member of the Local Emergency Planning Commission, past member of the Nome Joint Utility Board, 12 years and current chairman of the Nome Port Commission. I have been involved with and completed projects which include building the Port of Nome Phase 1 and Phase 2, building the new power plant, the continuing phases of upgrades on the water and sewer system, new public safety and equipment storage buildings, new landfill solid waste cell.

Preparing and growing Nome's future for the benefit of the younger generation through responsible fiscal management. Nome is a first-class city with outstanding city services that the people have come to enjoy. We have been very lucky on being able to find the grant funding to help with the much needed upgrades throughout the city, utility, school systems.

2) The planning commission has battled around the idea of annexation for the outlying areas of Nome. Would you be in support of expanding Nome's boundaries? If so, where and why?

Yes. I am a supporter of annexation out to Rock Creek Mine, the facility is worth over $200 million, adding that to the tax rolls would be a huge increase in revenue for the city, if they ever get up and operational, the city as a whole would then again benefit through economic development jobs and services keeping Nome green. There's got to be a happy medium balancing on expected services and cost of providing the services, it would be something definitely worth looking into spreading the costs over a larger tax base group.

3) What are the top three issues facing the City of Nome? Please explain why each issue is a priority.

A) The City of Nome has been very lucky in the past 10 years to be on the receiving end of federal dollars. With the political climate up in the air, we face the possibilities not being so fortunate, we now have to stay within our means and enjoy what we have built. With this funding we have upgraded our infrastructure, which we dearly needed and have to maintain the services to which all of Nome citizens have come accustomed.

B) The City of Nome does and will continue supporting the education system. Finding the balance is challenging but it must be done, for we are growing the future of Nome.

C) With the coming of global warming, the shipping lanes will be opened up more, making Nome a natural stopover point. We have seen over the past few years more activity out on the Bering Sea, and our port has seen an increased use. We need to one, either increase the length to get to a deeper depth to accommodate the larger vessels. This potential would help in lowering the freight cost to the people of Nome along with helping the economy by providing more local jobs. Nome is lucky to have two ports that could be developed, in town and out at Cape Nome. In my opinion, the development of Cape Nome, which is naturally deep, but without protection would be my first choice. This would push potential development out towards Cape Nome or adding to the existing causeway would be a little more expensive, but the result would be the same.

I would like to encourage everyone to get out and exercise your right to vote.

Cliff Johnson (challenger)

1) Why Should Voters Elect You? What do you hope to accomplish as a common council member?

I think I would bring a different point of view to the city council, I like to think a new and maybe re-refreshing point of view. I would also hope that the voters would feel very comfortable and that I am very approachable, for being able to talk openly with me, to really address their concerns.

I want to accomplish an open and accessible means for communication, between the average community member and the city council.

2) The planning commission has battled around the idea of annexation for the outlying areas of Nome. Would you be in support of expanding Nome's boundaries? If so, where and why?

No. I would not support for annexation for the outlying areas of Nome. Nome has enough issues it needs to deal with, let alone take on more responsibility, just for the fact of creating more tax income and government rules and regulation! Believe it or not, more government is not always better.

3) What are the top three issues facing the City of Nome? Please explain why each issue is a priority.

1) Pro-development...I don't think the city as a whole has done all it can to help the small business owner in establishing a good foundation for sustainability and growth. There should be some incentives in place for the small business owner, things like tax incentives, different cost-saving tools, like discounted services, etc.

2) Also do more to establish Nome as a developing hub for all government services, including different incentives, favorable conditions and terms for barging companies, construction companies, cruise, tour, mineral exploration, airlines, Coast Guard, Native corporations, and state and federal agencies.

3) Do more for the local taxpayer...Things like: On a case by case, I don't think we should have to pay to use the Mono-fill, (the old city dump/land fill (inert garbage) to tear down and get rid of a old abandoned eyesore building. It should be free, especially if it helps to make Nome a nicer, cleaner place to live. Things like that, it's the little things that help the average citizen taxpayer.

Tim Smith

I would bring a different perspective to the council. Nome has many opportunities because of its geographic location and the changes that are taking place in the Arctic. Increased activity in research, travel, transportation, communications and mineral development will be happening all around us. If we don't position ourselves to take advantage of these opportunities, someone else will.

The city should take a larger perspective and strengthen our economy based on the things that will be happening in the northern Bering Sea and Arctic Ocean. Our harbor is the best one north of the Pribilofs, and it could be improved. That will give us a tremendous advantage as shipping through the Bering Strait increases.

Fish stocks are moving north and commercial fishing and fish processing could provide ways to expand and diversify our economy. The CDQ program offers an unprecedented opportunity for economic development that has been overlooked by our city government for too long. I have studied the CDQ program since its inception and have ideas about how to make it deliver a lot more benefits for local people.

I support education. We need to do more to help our students succeed in school. Quality education pays lifelong dividends and is one of the best investments we can make in the future.

2) The planning commission has batted around the idea of annexation for the outlying areas of Nome. Would you be in support of expanding Nome's boundaries? If so, where and why?

I attended a recent meeting with the local boundary commission held in Old St. Joe's to talk about options for annexation; it is not a simple undertaking.

State law provides seven ways to annex but only three that are viable for Nome: Election by a majority of the voters in the annexed area; election by a majority of Nome voters and a majority of voters in the annexed area; action by the boundary commission and the state Legislature.

There is no assurance that we could annex the outlying areas, even if we think it is a good idea. Most of the outlying area residents who spoke at the meeting were opposed to annexation. Before we begin the annexation process, we should survey the voters living outside the city to see if there will be any chance of getting enough votes for passage.

Annexation would increase the property tax base but at the same time, the new taxpayers would have the right to expect city services such as school busing and snow removal. It's not obvious that it would result in a net revenue increase for the city. We would have to analyze the costs versus the benefits before we decided to petition for annexation.

3) What are the top three issues facing the City of Nome? Please explain why each issue is a priority.

1) The high cost of living. High energy prices are driving up the costs of everything. Income has not kept pace. High living costs reduce the quality of life for all of us and even more so for the elderly, unemployed or those with low-paying jobs. When people are struggling to make ends meet, there isn't much left for the things that make life enjoyable.

2) Economic development. Nome's economy has been in a slump for a long time. The private sector based on gold mining, tourism, services and retail sales has suffered with the international recession. State and federal government spending is down and likely to be that way for a while.

The first thing we should do to build our local economy is move the NSEDC headquarters to Nome. We should take the CDQ program back from Anchorage and Seattle and use it to create fisheries related jobs and economic development at home as intended.

3) Inadequate housing. We need more quality, energy efficient, affordable housing in Nome, but land and construction costs make it prohibitively expensive to build. It is difficult to attract professional people to our community if they can't find good housing, and we need to look for ways to meet those needs.

Josie Stiles

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a common council member?

I want to be elected because I am willing and qualified. I have a diverse background and 17 years of experience on several boards and councils. I have also been employed as a public servant for the past 30 years, which includes six years with the City of Nome. I have served on the Nome Community Center board for seven years, Bering Sea Women's Group board for six years with four years as president, Unalakleet Native Corp. board for four years, Alaska Commemorative Coin Commission for three years, and am currently on the Nome Arts Council board with service the past eight years and the recent five years as president. I am also currently serving on the Iron Dog Snowmobile Race Board and have been there for five years. My whole career has been based on public service. I have always strived to be involved, make a difference and give back to our community. I will bring an open mind, fair and equal judgment, and will promote ethical behavior. I want to be an ambassador and good diplomat for Nome.

2) The planning commission has batted around the idea of annexation for the outlying areas of Nome. Would you be in support of expanding Nome's boundaries? If so, where and why?

I would encourage a process of information, research, listening and meeting with constituents and hopefully bringing it to a vote. If the voters decided yes, I would then support annexation for the outlying areas. This is a critical issue that needs those involved to decide what's best for our local government. Currently, there are those in the outlying areas utilizing services. It needs to be determined what is fair for everyone, let the voters decide.

3) What are the top three issues facing the City of Nome? Please explain why each issue is a priority?

Striving for a balanced budget is always a priority in managing funds and continually evaluating the quality of services that the City of Nome provides.

The growth of our town is a major issue. Port expansion is important and traffic has doubled, almost tripled, and hopefully we can get the Coast Guard to have their presence here. We also need to carefully plan for and monitor offshore mining. Gold is a record $1,300 an ounce today. I hope that we can continue to strengthen our relationship with Alaska Gold to help accommodate this gold rush. Other growth is focused on a new hospital, public safety building and a state building. Roads and utilities are constantly being maintained and expanded. We need to continue energy-saving options while being environmentally sensitive.

Decreased federal funding is a concern. Our country is in an era of restoring itself after a major recession and an influx of American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) funds from our government. Funds will most likely decrease with a now trillion-dollar debt. We need our city government to be self-sustaining and carefully look at other options of revenue while prioritizing and maintaining city services.

Nome Common Council Seat E: Jerald Brown

Jerald Brown (incumbent – unopposed)

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a common council member?

I think that my background in finance is helpful with analyzing budgets and proposals. There are several items that I would like to see accomplished, including finalizing a smoking ordinance, making the playgrounds safer for our children by banning dogs in the playgrounds and possibly an ordinance regarding cell phone use while driving. I would also like to find a way to eliminate sales taxes on some basic essentials like groceries. Another goal I have is to see more use of renewable energy and energy efficiency in public and private buildings.

2) The planning commission has batted around the idea of annexation for the outlying areas of Nome. Would you be in support of expanding Nome's boundaries? If so, where and why?

This is an idea that has been discussed in various forms on and off for decades. I think there are still a lot of details to work out, such as whether we would create special service districts with lower tax rates. I think any annexation that would occur should encompass the power grid and include the areas that have children attending school in Nome.

3) What are the top three issues facing the City of Nome? Please explain why each issue is a priority.

Issues facing Nome include the high cost of everything—primarily linked to high energy costs, the easy access to alcohol for teens and other individuals that maybe should not be drinking, and the level of dust and other contaminants in the air from the traffic on the roads. I believe the struggles that have affected the school district over the last several months are not over, and that concerns me as well, as it seems to have polarized the community.

School Board Seat A: Jeri Ann Tomter, Marie Tozier

Jeri Ann Tomter

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a school board member?

Voters should elect me because I care about our schools and all kids in our community. My daughters, Katy and Elizabeth, go to school at Nome Public Schools and the future of our school district is very important to us.

One thing I hope to accomplish as a school board member is for us to come together as a community and to continue to support our teachers, school administrators and students. If we all step up and help, this community will continue to grow. We are a team and need to work together.

2) What do you see as the most positive area or element within our district? What area or elements need the most improvement?

People are the most positive area in our district. We have great students and staff. My kids have had wonderful teachers who have encouraged parent/guardian help and involvement in the classroom. I am an active parent helper in the classroom and see firsthand the positive effect it has on kids when parents help out.

The area that needs the most improvement is that there is so little parent/guardian help and volunteering in the schools. I encourage parents/guardians to talk with the teachers and ask how you can help out. If you can't help in the classroom, helping the teacher with a task or project from home is just as important. Teachers and kids appreciate any help we can give.

3) Nome Public Schools has just come through a period of turmoil with turnover in both the administrative and board ranks. Realizing there will always be differences of opinions in the community, what can the board do to help heal the rift that occurred and reassure the public that they are being heard?

Our community has just gone through a very difficult time, in regards to Nome Public Schools. I would support having a board procedure training on how a school board operates for all school board members. Rather than sending all five board members out for board training, look into having a professional come to Nome and conduct the training here. It will save in airplane tickets, hotel rooms and per diem. In addition to board training, a review of the NPS Board Policy manual and Strategic Plan as a full board would also be a step forward together. I feel that the strategic plan is a good tool and implementing the timeline targets to reach the goals is realistic. I care about our community and schools. I will listen to concerns, and I will work together with others as a board member in a respectful manner to grow our community.

Marie Tozier

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a school board member?

My name is Marie Tozier. I hope that Nome voters elect me because they recognize my love of learning and commitment to education. I grew up in Nome. I attended Nome Elementary School and graduated from Nome-Beltz High School in 1989. I received an associate's degree in 2005 from the University of Alaska Fairbanks-Northwest Campus and a bachelor's degree in arts and sciences in 2008. In 1998, Tok and I decided to home-school our 4-year-old twins. Since then we have home-schooled our seven children. We are enrolled in NPS Extension Program, which offers a unique opportunity to home-school while participating in school activities and contributing to the community.

As a school board member, I would like to see improvement in the on-going battle against low test scores in our district. I believe that focusing on reading proficiency, at all grade levels, will improve overall school performance. Improvements in reading will be reflected in every other subject. I look forward to finding ways to involve the community in reaching this goal. If we can find ways to support young students learning how to read and older students improving their reading skills, we can demonstrate that we value each student.

2) What do you see as the most positive area or element within our district? What area or elements need the most improvement?

The greatest assets of our school district are our community and our students. Nome is a hub for diverse cultures and many groups who value education from preschool to college. Nome has a healthy Head Start program, an elementary school, a charter school, a high school, the extensions program, NACTEC and Northwest Campus. Many businesses reward educational excellence by offering scholarships to students upon graduation. I am continually impressed with the students of Nome Public Schools. From sports to drama productions, our students find ways to excel that bring pride to Nome alumni, friends and family.

One area where I would like to see improvement is the performance gaps on standardized tests.

This is addressed in the NPS Strategic Plan in a number of ways. There are goals set for relevant curriculum, proficiency on state tests and parent mentoring. The most difficult part of the plan will be the implementation—to see these goals to reality. As a school board member I can offer experience in bridging parents with the education experience of their children. If elected, I will work towards meeting these goals.

3) Nome Public Schools has just come through a period of turmoil with turnover in both the administrative and board ranks. Realizing there will always be differences of opinions in the community, what can the board do to help heal the rift that occurred and reassure the public that they are being heard?

The school board can foster an open, respectful atmosphere to assure parents and the public that their concerns are valid and taken seriously by the board. The community should have adequate means to address their concerns: at board meetings and via personal contact with teachers, administrators and board members. Each member serves because they desire the best for their children and the students of Nome Public Schools, and should act with that as their guiding principle.

School Board Seat C: Betsy Brennan, Charles Pullock

Betsy Brennan

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a school board member?

I believe I am the best person for the job! I feel passionately that education is the key to success in life for all children. I was elected to a three-year term on the Nome School Board from October 2006 until October 2009. During those three years I worked hard, and missed just one board meeting. Since then, I have attended the majority of NPS board meetings and know the issues facing the district. I worked on the committee that developed the new Nome Public Schools Strategic Plan.

I have lived in Nome for 22 years and have served on various boards and organizations: The Nome Preschool Association board, Bering Sea Woman's Group board, Nome Community Center board, and the Nome PTSA. My husband and I are raising our two children, and I am proud they attend NPS. As a member of the Nome School Board, I can be involved in the community I love and use my talents. As a board member I hope to assist NPS staff realize the strategic plan and new vision statement: Students will be engaged in a quality education that ensures student proficiency through a challenging curriculum that embraces diversity and is culturally responsive.

2) What do you see as the most positive area or element within our district? What area or elements need the most improvement?

One of the most positive elements within our district is the new strategic plan that is now in place and approved by the school board. I was fortunate enough to be a part of the process in developing the plan this past year. I am excited about the outcome and have already seen many changes in the way the district is approaching education and tackling areas of concern. An example: the changes made in the fifth and sixth grade. Another positive element is the wonderful staff of NPS. These dedicated people keep our school running and truly care for all our students. I think one area that needs more improvement is in the recruitment and retention of qualified staff. The district saw a large turnover in teaching staff this past year. Specifically, the district's special education department needs to be fully staffed at the beginning of each school year. This has been a problem for two years in a row. Another area needing improvement is exploring different ways to reach out to parents/guardians and encouraging their involvement in our schools. Studies show parent involvement in their children's education is one of the most important factors in student success.

3) Nome Public Schools has just come through a period of turmoil with turnover in both the administrative and board ranks. Realizing there will always be differences of opinions in the community, what can the board do to help heal the rift that occurred and reassure the public that they are being heard?

I believe one of the greatest things the Nome Public School Board can do is follow its own policy manual and bylaws and conduct all its business in an open and public manner in accordance to state law. This would go a long way in healing the rift and reassuring the public.

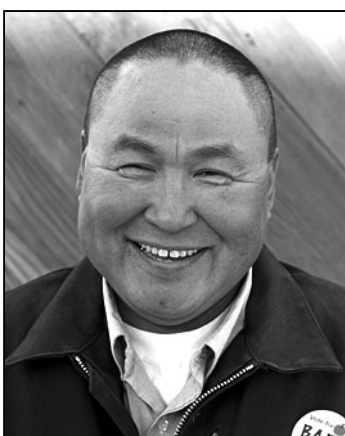

I also believe school board member training is very important. Board members are asked to make decisions on issues ranging from student safety to finances to personnel issues, and it is essential to receive proper training during their terms. Nome Public Schools is a member of the Statewide Association of Alaska School Boards. Board members should attend various workshops and trainings to help better educate themselves on their roles as elected officials. Board members who approach their jobs with a desire to become more knowledgeable will be more effective as board members.

The school board also should hold a yearly retreat or meeting to discuss the board's goals and develop and evaluate superintendent goals. The school board should also welcome open discussion by members of the public on a regular basis in work sessions and more informal settings.

Charles Pullock

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a school board member?

I have a bachelor's degree in rural development, and I believe that solutions for the school district can come from within the community. As a school board member, I am a visible member of this community, and I want to serve as an advocate and fair voice for each student, parents, guardians to seek more understanding and communication between students/parents and the school. As a school board member, I will work hard to have a solid, unified board, so that the students, parents, teachers and administrators can achieve their desired goals.

2) What do you see as the most positive area or element within our district? What area or elements need the most improvement?

Back in May, when I went to the high school graduation, I witnessed this community award $500,000 in scholarships to graduating students who are seeking to continue their higher education.

An area that needs most improvement is more kids need to stay in school, from the time they enter into the seventh grade and when they reach their senior year, need to support each student so they may graduate from Nome Beltz. Another area is more community involvement with academics and sporting activities; we as community members and graduates need to support the efforts of our kids of Nome.

3) Nome Public Schools has just come through a period of turmoil with turnover in both the administrative and board ranks. Realizing there will always be differences of opinions in the community, what can the board do to help heal the rift that occurred and reassure the public that they are being heard?

Each school board elected must be held accountable; school board members must represent every student and parent and the school district. The goal of the school board and administration is to ensure that more kids need to stay in school and not drop out. I believe the high school has a good principal who wants to see the kids succeed within his school. It's the school board's obligation to provide leadership and support so that the school and community can succeed.

A personal experience earlier this month, I had a chance to meet the new high school principal, Steve Gast; I was impressed with him. I had met him and in five minutes he had asked me to stop by his office for coffee. We as a community and school board must support good administrators.

School Board Seat E: Barb Amarok, Joe Lyon

Barb Amarok (incumbent – appointed)

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a school board member?

My name is Barb Amarok. Nome has been my family's home for five generations. I'm asking the community to elect me to the school board because I am passionate about education; my father and my aunt were teachers and I followed their examples. I have worked in the school classrooms, in the halls, in the offices where students have been sent, and in the conference room with administrators.

I have a vested interest in the effectiveness of the school because members of my family are always enrolled; currently, I have nine family members attending NPS.

As a school board member, I will continue to work diligently to support the administrators and teachers in our goals to decrease the dropout rate, address student needs and issues that affect their education, and advocate for children and families.

cate for children and families.

Over the past year, a strategic plan was developed that the board and staff, with dedication and support from the community and local organizations, continue to implement. Areas that are being addressed are balanced and relevant curriculum, proficiency on state tests, making families feel welcome in the school, professional development for staff, and secure funding. I hope to help accomplish the goals outlined.

2) What do you see as the most positive area or element within our district? What area or elements need the most improvement?

The children of our community are precious; one of the most important local values is love for children. Each student matters and should be treated with respect. The backgrounds and traditions of families and the community need to be recognized so that the students look at themselves with pride.

Maximum learning takes place when students' programs are relevant and meaningful to them. Teaching and learning should be based on students' individual strengths and needs.

We need to work on making sure that each child feels secure in the school and in the classroom. We need to make sure that each student feels like he or she belongs and that all families feel like the school belongs to them. We need to make sure that each child feels a sense of achievement. We need to make sure that students relate school to their families. We need to make sure that student learning is related to the community and the local environment. Achievement and graduation will be the result and these are the areas that need improvement.

3) Nome Public Schools has just come through a period of turmoil with turnover in both the administrative and board ranks. Realizing there will always be differences of opinions in the community, what can the board do to help heal the rift that occurred and reassure the public that they are being heard?

The devastating effects of the words and actions of last year are still being felt by many people. I will demonstrate and support forthcoming, upfront, positive and honest actions on the part of the board and the administration. Every member of the board must remember that there is value in every viewpoint and that no issue is black and white. We must speak and act in ways that demonstrate this.

I will continue to abide by the values of respect for others, cooperation, humility and hard work. I will work, individually and as a member of the board, toward a cooperative relationship among the community, the board and the staff with a focus on actions and outcomes based on the needs of the students.

I would like to see everyone work together to improve education for all children in Nome.

Joe Lyon (challenger)

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a school board member?

My family and I have lived in Nome since 1975. Many Nome citizens know I've worked at various jobs in this community. Any job that I have ever worked has been with the drive to do the best I can. If elected, I will do my very best. I want those who voted for me to always be glad they did. I hope to bring unity and balance to the Nome school board.

Personal agendas have no place there. The school board must be a service to all our students and parents.

2) What do you see as the most positive area or element within our district? What area or elements need the most improvement?

The most positive element in our district, to me, is this. We are a very diverse community. We get along. We help our neighbors when they need help. We watch out for other people's children to keep them safe. This community is so giving when it comes to supporting our students and teams, both financially and morally. Even if it's not a first-place finish, we're still proud and we say, "you did your best, and that's all we ask!" The area I would like to see an improvement in is a sense of nationalism. What happened to the Pledge of Allegiance? Why can't the students sing the traditional Christmas songs? I would love to see an elementary and high school choir again in the schools.

3) Nome Public Schools has come through a period of turmoil with turnover in both the administrative and board ranks. Realizing there will always be differences of opinions in the community, what can the board do to help heal the rift that occurred and reassure the public that they are being heard?

In a nutshell, what occurred with the school board should never have happened. Rules are in place to keep this kind of thing from ever happening. Now, to reassure that public and to gain trust towards the school board members, all the rules and policies must be followed to the letter. The public must be listened to and given an opportunity to have their say. They speak, we listen. Debate the issues/concerns and come to a consensus. Not everyone will be pleased with the outcome, but at least they should know we did our best to resolve an issue.

Thank you, and I would appreciate your vote.

Recalled baby formula found in Nome

Powdered infant formula that is subject to a national recall by the manufacturer has been found in Nome, according to the state Department of Health and Human Services.

According to the department, some of the state-purchased formula for the Women, Infants and Children program at local clinics in Nome and Bethel were part of the recall. On Sept. 22, Abbott Laboratories issued a voluntary recall for some of its Similac powder infant formula products. Abbott is conducting a voluntary recall of the formula because of the possibility that the product contains a small common beetle.

The products affected by the recall were identified by lot numbers on the bottom of the cans. According to the state, only cans of small powder WIC products with the letters "RB" in the lot code are affected by the recall.

The United States Food and Drug Administration said it determined that while the formula containing beetles and/or beetle larvae poses no immediate health risk, there is a possibility that infants who consume the tainted formula could experience symptoms of gastrointestinal discomfort.

Efforts to contact the Norton

Sound Health Corp. WIC department were unsuccessful as of press time.

Complete information on the recall, including all affected lot numbers, is available at: www.similac.com/recall. Information from the WIC program on the recall and how to return or exchange the formula is available by following the links regarding the tainted formula at <http://health.hss.state.ak.us>.

According to Similac, the problem was found to have occurred in one area of a single manufacturing plant. The recall concerns the powdered product offered in plastic containers and product sold in 8-ounce, 12.4-ounce and 12.9-ounce cans. The company has a 24-hour toll-free number, (888) 376-2054, to call for information on the return process. The recall affects up to 5 million powder formulas sold in the United States, Guam and some Caribbean countries. The recall does not affect any liquid products.

Schmidt runs away with girls win, boys nab regional title

By Tyler Rhodes

Battling high winds and runners from nearly 20 teams, in pretty short order Rosa Schmidt found herself in a familiar position at Saturday's regional cross country meet in Nome—alone and in the lead.

With a cushion of more than a minute and a half between her and runner-up Jerrilyn Cleveland of Shungnak, Schmidt took the regional title and maintained her perfect season in races outside of Anchorage. Schmidt, a freshman, clocked a time of 23 minutes, 14 seconds, lopping nearly two minutes off her initial performance on the course in late August. As regional champ, Schmidt earns her way into the state meet this weekend in Anchorage.

Nome's Hannah Tozier will also be competing at state at Bartlett High School after placing 10th in the regional race at home. Finishing in 27:01, Tozier was more than five minutes ahead of her previous time on the course. To make it to state, a runner must either be part of a winning team or place in the top 15 individually.

On the boys' side, it was White Mountain's Asa Bergamaschi who took an early lead and held it until the end. Bergamaschi finished in 19:36, followed by Barrow's Sam George at 19:55. Nome's Jeremiah Johnson was the first Nanook to cross the line, placing third overall at 20:03.

Bergamaschi's individual win helped seal the team title for White Mountain in the small schools division, with a score of 11 points, beating out Buckland, 19; Kiana, 24; Unalakleet, 38; and Shishmaref, 48. For the large schools, Nome dominated the standings, placing its five scoring runners in the top 11. Nome scored 28, followed by Kotzebue with 61 and Barrow with 80. Nome's varsity squad of seven will compete at Bartlett Saturday in the state meet.

Nome's Johnson led a pack of Nanooks through the finish chute with Sam Schmidt, Emerson Conger and Tim Sullivan placing fourth through sixth. Nathan Blandford capped Nome's scoring contingent with his 11th place finish. Jens Irelan placed 14th and Junyor Erikson was 20th to wrap up the Nanooks' performance on their home course. Two of Nome's runners who have put in strong varsity performances all season, Tim Schmidt and Dion Williams, were sidelined from the regional competition due to illness.

For the girls, Nome was unable to compete as a team since the Lady Nanooks only brought four runners to the line. Teams are required to field at least field five runners, and Nome has competed all season just a runner shy of a full team. Beth Herzner was the third Lady Nanook to cross the line, finishing in 19th. Caitlin Tozier summed up Nome's effort with a 23rd place effort, roughly in the middle of the pack.

For the large schools, Barrow took the girls' title with 23 points compared to Kotzebue's 32. Kiana topped the ranks for the smaller schools, scoring 13, followed by Point Hope, 21; Unalakleet, 23; Buckland, 25; and Gambell, 39.

Runners Saturday had to contend not only with the steep climb that starts approximately a mile into the race, but also with a stiff headwind. Runners looked either determined or miserable, or perhaps a mix of both, as they fought their way up the climb that rises above the high school on Anvil Mountain. The athletes, however, were treated to a long downhill and tailwind on the old Glacier Creek Road before hitting a series of trails to lead them back to the finish line at the high school.

Attendance was great at the Sixth Annual Cultural Festival for Teller. The community of Teller hosted four dance groups, visiting Nomeites as well as regional attendees. Nomeites took advantage of Teller being 77 miles from Nome. Nomeites arrived by road in vast

There were volunteers for everything from workshops to assisting in cleaning. The potluck was well stocked and well attended. Teller was proud to see the attendance this year and looks forward to hosting the festival again next year.

1) Why should voters elect you? What do you hope to accomplish as a utility board member?

I believe my years of experience serving on the utility board and working for the utility, prior to retirement, prepare me to be an effective board member to represent the community. I am retired and live in Nome, and will work toward keeping the rates as low as possible while providing the most reliable service. In addition, I will advocate for expansion of services, both electric and water/sewer, and planning and implementation of cost-effective renewable energy.

2) What role can/should renewable energy play in Nome's power supply? If you feel it should, how does Nome go about developing it or encouraging its development?

Renewable energy should play an important role in Nome's power supply. There is thermal, natural gas, battery storage, solar, and other forms of renewable energy that may be feasible, and should be explored. The Nome Joint Utility continues to look at renewable energy options while striving to provide reliable diesel-generated power to its customers. Wind power appears to be the renewable energy of choice as demonstrated by the Banner Wind Farm. The problem is that wind power is only available when the wind is blowing, unless a solution is found to store the excess power, possibly in a battery. We cannot forget that diesel generation must be available immediately if the wind decreases or quits.

Natural gas is available in our area and could be a source of energy for generating electricity and heating; the new generators that the utility purchased can be converted to burn natural gas. I would insist that the renewable energy source is cost effective and would not be installed without assurance that it really will provide reliable and cheaper electricity to the consumer. I would like to see the State of Alaska step up with an energy plan and implementation funds that includes all of Alaska. I would also like to see the U.S. government get serious in converting to renewable and other energy sources here in America, and stop depending on foreign oil. Unless there is a change, the big oil companies will continue to make record profits and we will continue to pay high prices.

3) What are the top three issues facing the utility board?

The high cost of diesel fuel is No. 1, the need for affordable and reliable renewable energy is No. 2, and expansion of electric and water/sewer services is No. 3. There is a fixed cost of doing business that could be spread over a larger customer base if services were expanded, resulting in a lower fixed cost for all consumers.

Saying it Sincerely

Are Your Prayers Effective?

By Pastor Mike Christian, River of Life Assembly of God for the Nome Ministerial Association

“The prayer of a righteous man is powerful and effective” - James 5:16b -

The Word of God tells us that, “the prayer of a righteous man is powerful and effective.” I don’t know about you, but if there is one thing I want when I pray, it is to know that my prayers are going to be answered. I want my prayers to be “Powerful and Effective!” If this is what you and I desire to see when we pray, then we must strive to the best of our ability (with God’s help), to live a life of “Righteousness.” To live a righteous life in the world we live in today may seem like impossibility, but it’s not! When you or I give our life to Christ, we accept the fact that our sins are forgiven and brought under the blood of Jesus. Therefore, we also must accept the responsibility that comes with this new way of living we have entered into by becoming a follower and servant of our Lord Jesus Christ. We now have the privilege and honor of bringing glory and honor to our Lord by living each day according to his word. Our actions and our words are supposed to show those around us that we belong to Jesus, and that we are determined to live our lives each day for his glory. When we pray, we must believe that the Lord not only hears our prayers, but that he is going to answer our prayers. We must learn to pray “according to his will” just like Jesus prayed when he was in the Garden of Gethsemane just before his arrest and eventual death on the cross (Matthew 26:36-46).

Now I’ll be one of the first ones to admit that saying it is sometimes easier than doing it, but that still doesn’t mean that it’s impossible. It simply requires a desire on our part to put forth the effort to walk the walk and not just talk the talk. Each day we should show the love of Jesus to those with whom we interact. Whether it’s over a cup of coffee or a lunch meeting, the words we speak and the things we do should reflect the Lord we serve. We should also be reading and studying His Word so that we can learn how to be like Him more and more each day. This is part of living a life of righteousness.

My friends, it is my desire to see Jesus bless your and my life in every way possible. It is my desire to see our prayers answered and every one of our needs met. This is what he promised to do if we would do our part. In Matthew 6:33 Jesus tells us: “But seek first his kingdom and its righteousness and all these things will be given to you as well.”

So, as we go before the Lord in prayer, may we be striving to live a life of righteousness every day. May our hearts be sincere and your motives pure when we ask our heavenly father to answer our prayers. May our prayers become “powerful and effective!”

Why some people benefit from a gluten free diet

Bob Lawrence, MD
Alaska Family Doctor

Gluten has become a food substance of interest for people looking for ways to eat a healthy diet. Some have claimed that avoiding gluten gives them a higher quality of life.

The claims are varied and hard to prove. Many people, including celebrities and alternative healthcare advocates, maintain that people gain increased energy and more effortlessly lose weight when they avoid gluten in the diet. Proponents of the gluten-free movement tend to focus on gluten as if it were a not-to-be-trusted hidden ingredient added to processed foods similar to trans-fats or high-fructose corn syrup.

It is true that gluten, a natural protein found in wheat, barley, and rye grains, is found throughout the American diet in breads, cereals, baked goods, and processed foods where wheat gluten is used as a thickening agent.

However, the extent to which gluten is a cause of disease in the general population is probably quite low.

Most people lose weight and feel better when switching to a gluten-free diet because to do so requires a person to replace high-carbohydrate foods with vegetables and high-fiber grains other than wheat. It is likely that these same people would lose weight and feel better by simply increasing their intake of vegetables while decreasing their intake of simple carbohydrates.

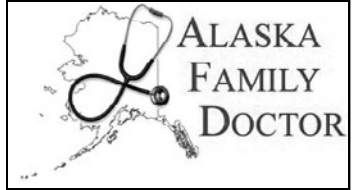

Medically speaking, gluten can cause serious disease in a small group of people who have a genetic condition of gluten intolerance called Celiac Sprue. A person with this disorder basically loses the lining of their small intestine if they eat any foods with gluten. This makes it hard to absorb nutrients including fats, vitamins, and proteins.

Patients with Celiac Sprue often suffer from gastrointestinal symptoms like stomach cramps, diarrhea, and malnutrition. The condition can also be associated with an intensely itchy rash called dermatitis herpetiformis, metabolic disorders like diabetes mellitus type I, or neurologic problems secondary to poor absorption of calcium.

A somewhat larger group of people may have a sensitivity or allergy, not merely to gluten, but to any of the proteins in wheat or similar grains. Unlike a gluten intolerance, protein allergies induce an immune response where the body goes into attack mode having mistaken the wheat protein for a bacteria, virus, or fungus.

Symptoms range from itchy eyes and hives to bronchospasm with wheezing and potentially anaphylactic shock.

A puzzling subset of this disorder only affects people if they exercise right after eating wheat-containing foods.

Other affected individuals develop a form of asthma, called baker’s asthma, when breathing wheat or other flour dust.

The primary treatment for any medical disorder related to wheat ingestion is avoidance of wheat-containing products. Lowering the intake of gluten in the diet has become easier due to the current popularity of gluten-free products, but a true gluten-free diet requires significant forethought and may be entirely unnecessary. For example, a gluten-free diet will not help if symptoms are secondary to an unrelated intolerance of milk, nuts, or eggs.

For this reason, if you think you have a problem with gluten or wheat products, ask your doctor about simple tests to determine your specific risk of allergy or intolerance.

Before your visit, you may find it helpful to keep a food diary in which you record the specific foods you eat and the symptoms you experience after eating these foods. This diary will become an invaluable tool for you and your provider if together you decide to initiate a food elimination program.

Six blast through triathlon

A sunny but windy September 19 greeted the six individual participants in the Second Annual September Blast Triathlon. Sponsored by the high school swim team, participants swam 1,000 meters, ran six miles and biked six miles. The wind was a factor – both good and bad. During the bicycle portion, the wind was mostly against the riders. However there was one section where everyone reported that the wind, coupled with downhill terrain caused them to go so fast that their legs could not keep up with the speed of the pedals. Unfortunately, this section was rather short.

Thanks to the cross country team for having a nice three-mile trail that gave participants quite a variety: uphill, downhill, road running and off road running.

Everyone was a winner:

Fastest overall: Phil Hofstetter 1:23:35

Fastest under 18 years of age: Nathan Blandford 1:37:56

Fastest female finisher: Jane Lando 1:51:50

Fastest first time participant: Robert Lawrence 1:55:30

Fastest in the 19 to 29-year-old group: Darcee Perkins 2:11:00

Fastest most frequent participant: Christine Schultz 2:43:30

A special thanks to everyone who helped put on this event: Nanook swimmers Nathan Blandford, Kaylene Evans, Nick Morgan, Jake Stettenbenz, Zach Sullivan; Sharon Keeney, Lawrence family, Bob Lewis, Terri Perkins, Janeen Sullivan, Susanne Thomas and Erin Forton. Zach and Jake swam a mile for fun while awaiting the winners and Kaylene swam 1,000 meters, also for fun while folks were out on the trail.

investigate and shape policy issues that impact the residents of the north. One of the most rapidly changing issues in the Arctic is the climate, the sea ice and the loss thereof. With more areas of open seas in the summer, international shipping companies look to the Arctic Ocean, the Beaufort and Chukchi seas as well as the Bering Strait for shorter shipping routes. In order to deal with the unprecedented task to figure out how to address Arctic marine safety and marine environmental protection, the Institute issued a workshop report that builds on the Arctic Marine Shipping Assessment, a groundbreaking report published last year by the Arctic Council.

The most important issues identified in the so called AMSA report are to develop the polar code that would install mandatory rules for polar ship construction, design, operations and ice navigation competence. Also identified as crucial policy issues were Arctic Search and Rescue agreements to be in place by 2011 and to implement an Arctic observing network to support scientific research and marine operations.

In addition to Arctic marine safety, including both cargo and passenger vessels, the protection of the local people and the environment was named as a high priority. AMSA recommendations include that Arctic states should conduct surveys on marine use by indigenous communities and to develop effective communications with those far-flung coastal communities to include them in the economic boon that may materialize with increased shipping.

It also advocates for designated areas for environmental protection, protection from invasive species, oil spill prevention and to further study effects of ship noise and disturbances of marine mammals. The workshop involved scientists from UAF, several federal agencies, the US Coast Guard, Norwegian, Chinese, Canadian, Japanese and English researchers, as well as shipping companies like Crowley and Holland America Lines. Nome mayor Denise Michels was also a participant.

July invoicing totaled $317,099 for all port facility operations.

Kensington gold mine opened

Public officials of the State of Alaska lauded the opening of the Kensington gold mine, run by Coeur D’Alene Mines, 45 miles northwest of Juneau. After numerous lawsuits dealing with a controversial method to dump mine tailings in Lower Slate Lake, the state of Alaska intervened to overturn a court decision that deemed dumping tailings in the lake illegal. However, the state took the issue to the Supreme Court which reversed the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals decision and reinstated the dumping permit. Alaska Attorney General Dan Sullivan said that the mine opening “demonstrates why the State of Alaska should not hesitate to intervene in cases that threaten our ability to develop our resources responsibly. Since last year, the Department of Law has fought in about a dozen cases involving resource development projects in Alaska that have been challenged

UA students face 5 percent tuition hike

The University of Alaska board of regents decided a five percent increase for the tuition for lower level courses beginning with the 2011/2012 semester. Confronted with student protests, they delayed action on a further five percent increase until November. The originally approved rate for 2011-2012 was a 5 percent increase for 100-200 level courses and a 10 percent increase for 300-400 level courses. Graduate tuition would not increase. That original board action was taken in September 2009 and will remain in effect. The Alaska university system has one of the lowest tuition rates in the United States. According to the Washington Higher Education Coordinating Board, resident undergraduate students in Alaska pay an average of $5,133 a year for tuition and fees. That’s more than just six other states, and $2,830 less than the national average. The UA faces a budget deficit of $2.5 million. Tuition revenue makes up roughly 11 percent of the university’s overall budget, which includes a mix of state and federal funds as well. State general funds make up about 45 percent of the UA system’s overall budget; but the Alaska Legislature has made clear the university must begin relying less on the state treasury.

• Rock Creek

"It's business as usual until we move on with the next step," she said.

Bailie said NovaGold could not comment on whether or not it had received any offers for the mine. She said NovaGold did not have a specific timeline for completing a sale. "There is no firm deadline. It could take a matter of months to find a buyer and close the sale," she said.

NovaGold was facing a Nov. 1 deadline from the state to make a decision on the project which has sat in limbo since November 2008. The state asked that by that deadline NovaGold either signify that it would permanently close the mine, request an extension of the temporary closure period or reopen the mine.

"We do think that the project holds value in the right portfolio. It just doesn't fit in our portfolio anymore."

NovaGold idled the mine just before Thanksgiving 2008 right as Rock Creek was nearing the end of its start-up process to bring the mine into production. In the two subsequent years, the company has worked to maintain the facilities on site and to comply with state and federal environmental and safety regulations.

Bailie said the decision to sell solely concerns the Rock Creek project. When NovaGold acquired Alaska Gold Co., it also gained significant land holdings and gravel

FOR SALE—The Rock Creek Mine in the Snake River Valley just north of Nome is seen in September 2009. Mine owner NovaGold Resources announced Sept. 28 that it is seeking to sell the project. The potential sale would not include other NovaGold/Alaska Gold holdings in the area, including lands and the Big Hurrah project.

operations in and around Nome. Bailie said the firm would continue to sell and deal with those holdings, including the Big Hurrah project east of Nome, separate of Rock Creek. "NovaGold has always been in business of selling off non-core assets," she said. In its second quarter report issued July 13, NovaGold reported earning $1 million to $3 million annually from the sale of sand, gravel and land, as well as royalties from placer gold production, largely from its land holdings around Nome.

Rock Creek represented NovaGold's attempt to transition from an exploration company to that of a producer. Many smaller mining firms specialize in finding commercial-grade metal deposits and then sell them off to larger companies to actually mine. NovaGold nearly got Rock Creek to production.

While Rock Creek has most of its infrastructure in place, it isn't exactly a turn-key operation. NovaGold cited a number of factors leading to its 2008 shutdown, including the tumultuous financial environment and equipment that did not function as planned. Specifically, the mine's crushing unit was not able to handle the clay-rich ore that would harden in the cold and jam up the machinery. Bailie did not have an estimate on how much money it would take to bring the mine into production.

The mine also faced a number of environmental challenges relating to sediment and runoff making its way into area streams. It also has faced a buildup of water behind its tailings dam which was not designed to primarily contain liquid. Those issues have largely been adressed over the last two years through water management projects and the addition of a water treatment plant and injection wells to pump water from behind the dam underground.

Bailie said NovaGold believes that the amount of work accomplished at the mine site coupled with record-high gold prices should make Rock Creek an attractive prospect for potential buyers. "We've made an incredible amount of progress," she said. Overall, Bailie said NovaGold has spent approximately $250 million on the Rock Creek project.

NovaGold has estimated that Rock Creek could produce 100,000 ounces of gold annually with probable reserves of 1/2 million ounces of gold. The firm budgeted $19.1 million for the project for 2010 and noted that it had spent $10.2 million as July 13.

favor of the resolution.

Andersen advocated for a resolution in support of Ballot Measure 1 to increase the number of legislative districts in Alaska by adding four house districts and two senate districts. The council unanimously approved the resolution.

FY2010 budget amendments

The council unanimously approved ordinances to amend the city's FY2010 general fund municipal budget, capital projects fund budget, special revenue fund budget, Port of Nome fund budget and construction capital projects fund budget following a second reading and public hearing for each budget.

Anderson raised questions about amendments to the general fund municipal budget. He noted that $724,000 was taken out of savings to balance the budget. He also noted that an equipment replacement fund of $530,000 had been amended to zero with the notation "Not necessary." Andersen asked whether the two figures are related. City Manager Josie Bahnke told Andersen she has no answer. She said the equipment replacement fund was not used for that purpose and the funds were carried over.

"I want to know why," Andersen said. "I will find out," Bahnke replied.

Andersen asked for the concurrence of the council in his request for a list of everyone who owes the city sales taxes and property taxes, everyone who owes utility bills, how long the taxes and utility bills have been owed and what is being done to collect them.

Andersen asked Bahnke to obtain written information on the status of the Sixth Avenue pump construction and whether the pump is hooked up to the Recreation Center. He also requested that she provide him with answers to a number of additional questions including the following.

Is it true that a city street probably will be dug up shortly after it is paved? Is the Public Works crew spending too much time on port issues? Why are five-gallon buckets of waste being dumped in the port facility's restrooms when they should be taken to the sewage treatment plant?

Andersen indicated his questions were based on recent reports and meeting minutes of various city entities.

Executive session

A sale tax audit and Bahnke's employment contract were discussed in executive session immediately following the regular council meeting.

Council members present in addition to Andersen, Brown (who participated by teleconference), and Pomeranz were Jon Larson and Jim West Jr. Mary Knodel was absent and excused. This was the last council meeting for Larson, who chose not to run in the Oct. 5 municipal election. Other council members thanked him for his service and wished him the best.

• Flu

the H1N1 virus, a second type-A influenza labeled as H3N2, and influenza B all in one shot. With the late emergence of H1N1 last year, a separate vaccine from the traditional flu shot had to be produced. Quantities of the H1N1 vaccine were limited in the region, initially requiring priority to be given to those who were most at risk of complications from the new strain of flu.

Residents of the region will have their first chance to get the flu shot for the season Oct. 7 in Nome and the villages served by Norton Sound Health Corp. The clinic will run from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at Old St. Joe's Hall in Nome and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the village clinics. A separate clinic will be held the next day, Oct. 8, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the XYZ Senior Center for elders.

A second flu shot clinic will be held in Nome in conjunction with the health fair scheduled from Nov. 12 and 13 at the Nome Recreation Center. All the clinics are free to the public.

While Kilby said she is confident the supply in the region is ample to meet demand, a benefit of having an early clinic is the ability to order more vaccine from the state if needed. Outside of the special vaccine clinics, Kilby said those interested in receiving the flu shot can either contact Public Health Nursing in Nome or their village clinic for an appointment.

Kilby said most of the vaccine supply this year is in the form of a shot. "The state has found that the nasal spray has not been as accepted by the public as it thought," she said.

Kilby said the Centers for Disease Control is recommending this year that anyone 6 months or older receive the shot, a departure from the past when the CDC targeted its recommendation at more at-risk populations. She said the expanded recommendation is partly based on an effort to limit otherwise healthy people spreading the flu to more at-risk populations. "The change is an indication that they want to protect as much of the population as possible," Kilby said. "All of us have exposure to elders or young children in one way or the other."

Kilby said Monday that she had not heard of any true influenza cases in the region yet this season, noting that the flu tends to hit here in late December or the first of the year.
