Awesome! John Baker shatters Iditarod race record

By Diana Haecker

Hundreds and hundreds of people lined Nome's Front Street to see Kotzebue musher John Baker be the first musher in this year's Iditarod Trail sled dog race to cross the finish line in Nome. The rising sun cast golden light into the finish chute as Baker and his ten dogs made their way under the burlled arch. Along with Baker's family, race officials and selected media, drummers and singers with the band Pamyua were on hand to provide the soundtrack to an emotional finish that had Baker's family in tears. Cheers, drumming and the unique walrus whoop made by Eskimo fans filled the cold air.

This was Baker's 16th Iditarod Trail sled dog race. He has made the top ten in 11 races and now he not only won the race for the first time but also made history by setting a new race record of eight days, 18 hours, 46 minutes and 39 seconds on the trail. Baker shaved off exactly four hours of the record set in 2002 by Martin Buser. Baker said that he had no thoughts on breaking any records and that it didn't dawn on him until Tuesday morning that he might actually do so. He went even further and said that he didn't allow himself to think about winning until he was actually under the burlled arch as the first musher. "When Martin set the record, that year, I was in third place and my good friend Ramy Brooks coming in second, that was a special year to me. But now, breaking the record is icing on the cake," Baker said.

After Baker was checked in and signed off on having finished the race, sponsor dignitaries handed him his $50,400 winner's check and the key to a brand new Dodge Ram truck. With this year's win, Baker ended Lance Mackey's four-year string of victories and Lance's wife Tonya made it through the crowd, into the finish chute to congratulate Baker on his achievement.

Sitting on the winner's pedestal, Baker cradled his lead dogs, Velvet and Snickers. He said he had been running these two dogs in lead for all of last year's Iditarod race. He added that this year he had switched out the leaders at times and gave Velvet a break for two runs.

"I'm a pretty lazy musher, it's just too easy to leave them in lead all the way," Baker said.

Asked if he had been looking out for Ramey Smyth to catch up to him along the coast, Baker said that Smyth did keep him on his toes, as he is the best in the business of catching and passing teams by the end of a race. But Baker had confidence in the strength of his dogs. "This team wasn't as strong as last 2011 IDITAROD CHAMP—Kotzebue's John Baker poses under the burlled arch with his lead dogs Velvet and Snickers after eight days, 18 hours and 46 minutes on the Iditarod Trail shattering the all-time record set by Martin Buser in 2002.

NovaGold resources sells Nome holdings

On Monday, NovaGold Resources Inc. announced the sale of 11,500 acres of Alaska Gold Company lands around Nome.

The buyer is Nome Gold Alaska Corporation. "We are executing our strategy of bringing value from our non-core assets," NovaGold president and CEO Rick Van Nieuwenhuyse said in a press release. He said that NovaGold is focused on advancing its Donlin and Galore projects toward production.

The alluvial gold properties sold are fee-simple United States patented mining claims. The claims are held by Alaska Gold Company. Nome Gold Alaska Corp. will pay Alaska Gold $21 million in three installments and provide a letter of credit for $4 million as an environmental reclamation bond.

NovaGold is also looking for buyers of their land holdings around Nome, in-town real estate lots, sand and gravel holdings, as well as its Rock Creek and Big Hurrah gold properties.

Sheldon Katchatag of Unalakleet was delighted at the prospect that a fellow Inupiat was in contention to win this year's Iditarod Trail Sled dog race. Katchatag awakened as many Unalakleet residents as he could. He convinced about a hundred people to climb out of their beds on Sunday morning before 5 o'clock to welcome Kotzebue's John Baker into the first Iditarod checkpoint on the coast. Addressing the crowd Katchatag declared, "He's going to win this thing. He's got the support of all the Inupiat from here to Greenland behind him."

Katchatag was dressed in polar bear mukluks handed down from his father, polar bear mittens and a white parka. He held a drum made by his son. And when the light of Baker's headlamp bobbed across the frozen Unalakleet River, Katchatag began drumming and calling out to the approaching dog team. The crowd joined in with clapping, whistling and hollering to usher in the first Iditarod musher to their village.

Baker's 11 dogs marched into the assigned parking spot and before the musher had the chance to get off the sled runners, the crowd surrounded him and Wells Fargo dignitaries presented him with the Gold Coast award and gold nuggets worth $2,500.

Taking the lead on the Yukon

At the start line in Anchorage, John Baker said he would take it easy in the first part of the race. He said that training this winter had been hampered by one blizzard after another. The strategy seemed to have paid off, as Baker's dogs seemed to have found their groove on the Yukon. Baker made his move when he passed Hugh Neff who led the front-runners out of Grayling on the Yukon. "That was the only team we passed," a tired Baker said with a chuckle in Unalakleet. "Usually, everybody else is passing us." Not this time. Baker said his dog team started to come together nicely and found their rhythm in Shageluk. From the checkpoint of Eagle Island on, Baker remained in front of the pack, but it was not a comfort-

Dear Editor,

Sarah Palin does not represent Alaska. She abandoned Alaska as Governor with only two years of governorship. She would not use the Governor's mansion in Juneau (the capital of Alaska). She wanted the capital moved to her area in the Anchorage bowl area. She ignored the Aleuts, Eskimos, Indians and Americans who came to Alaska from all over the world to help establish a free nation.

My grandfather, Richard T. Harris and Joe Juneau were allowed to explore for gold directed by chief Chowee of the Auk Quan tribe at Juneau. Our family, the Harris', is half Tlinget and Scotch Irish. We, like many people from all over the world helped build America.

From the 1900s to the beginning of the World War II, the prejudice towards people from all over the world was real bad. World War II has diminished the prejudice considerably. Some people still are prejudiced of people of other countries. (America was built by people of other countries of the world).

Many people from the Anchorage bowl came westward to Alaska via the Alaska Highway after World War II or flew and had no knowledge of Southeast Alaska. Just the old timers knew the real history.

My younger brother, Casey, was born in Juneau in 1936 and I, W. John Harris Jr. was born in Juneau in 1930. I have lived in Anchorage since 1971, but go back to Juneau whenever I have enough money to travel with my oldest son W. John Harris III. The only other grandchild from my Uncle Dick's family, Lila Haley Harris, still lives in Juneau. Her sisters and brothers are all deceased as well as my three brothers and five sisters. My father, W. John Harris Sr. was born in Juneau in 1884 and my Uncle Dick Harris was born in Juneau in 1886.

We Alaskans, Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts were really prejudiced against for many, many years like the Indians from the Lower 48 states and Canada. I knew many black people all my life who are and were wonderful people. There are Aleuts, Eskimos and Indians in our family history, where we're well known in the past. I spent part of the winter in Anchorage in 1953 after dropping out of school at the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

Getting back to Sarah Palin, she abandoned Alaska and its people and she should not be considered for any high office in America and the news media should stop referring to her as Governor. Even her past running mate for President, John McCain, had stated on public TV that if Sarah Palin ran for President, he wasn't sure if he would vote for her or not. He is also messing up the real American way of life.

Sincerely,
W. John Harris Jr.

ees. Although she never said anything to cut down I can sense it.

I have been to see her myself. Her little space is far removed from the rest of the clinic. I hope to heck there will be space for her in the new hospital, just like all our important professionals.

I doubt if her pay meets the quality of service she offers. If not I recommend at least at the minimum $30 an hour. I know professionals get much more. If she is not treated like she should be, we may lose her. She's too valuable to loose.

I hope the whole region supports her.

Sincerely,
Arlene Soxie
Unalakleet, AK 99684
P.S. I also wanted to mention I do not believe in curses on villages. We have a God who is more powerful than all the curses one may claim.

Dear Nancy,

I had heard that Tyler Rhodes moved from the Nugget's staff to a job burnishing NSEDC's image. I was surprised however, that he used the format of an infomercial, masquerading as a newspaper column, in the Nugget's last issue, as a vehicle for his new employer.

There is no doubt that the subject of his column, Mr. Charles Lean, could benefit from Tyler's literary shoeshining skills. As a commercial fisherman I have felt like a long term hostage of Charlie's chronic mismanagement as a biologist, fisheries manager, and now fisheries developer.

The sad history of his tenure reads like a train wreck. Crashed salmon returns many times. Particularly the king and chum species. Crashed crab stocks. Slow to rebuild.

The collapse of red stocks at Salmon Lake by preemptively ending a successful fertilization program and starving smolt built up by previous years of fertilization. Last year's Salmon Lake returns due to this negligence are as close to extinction as it gets.

The last one to successfully rein Mr. Lean in was the honorable Governor Hickel. After millions lost to Norton Sound commercial fishermen and buyers, to late openings of the roe herring season, Hickel made Charlie go to Bristol Bay to intern with successful herring managers.

Getting it Together

It's the behind the scenes organizers who make the Month of Iditarod events a success. It may seem like herding cats, but it's the hard work and ceaseless planning efforts for each individual event that make it easy and stress free for the participants.

It's the folks who organize the set-up, the system and the clean-up who are often overlooked. It's the folks who communicate and coordinate the timetables and logistics to avoid confusion and allow for full public participation and enjoyment. It's the folks who do the long-range planning and communication who make any event a success, but the Iditarod also demonstrates how, after many years and another generation of organizers, the citizens of Nome can work together to have fun, renew old acquaintances and make new friendships.

It's the spirit of Iditarod the keeps us going. It's the willingness to work behind the scenes and do our own parts to show what a great spirit of cooperation connects all the communities of western Alaska. It's also what makes Nome a special community. We can be quite proud of our town. —N.L.M.—

Dear Editor,

I attended the Elder and Youth Conference and I applaud the Youth. They did very well in representing their villages. They were a big help at the feast also.

I had the privilege of listening to our Tribal Healers as we had a good lunch at the Pioneer Hall. I perceived she is not treated as a professional like the rest of the Norton Sound Health Corporation employ-

Dear Editor,

I came across these and thought they would be cool for your blast from the past section of the Nugget. The (Stebbins) school photo includes my mother, Ursula Lyon in the front row, 3rd from the right.

Junkers, derelicts and land issues tackled by Planning Commission

By Nancy McGuire

The Nome Planning Commission met last Tuesday evening to hash over topics of concern. They took up the problem of dealing with junk vehicles. City Manager Josie Bahnke stated that the city tries to be non-confrontational in asking owners to take their junked vehicles to the dump, "We hope to get more voluntary compliance." Commissioner Jimmy Adams stated that the City needs an administrative procedure in place, "People need an incentive to get rid of junked vehicles." The problem will be towed away at the next regular meeting of the Nome Planning Commission.

The junk vehicle problem opened the gate for comment about the abatement process and timeline for derelict buildings. Commissioners were concerned that little action had occurred to get rid of problem structures. The current procedure involves the issuance of a complaint that a particular building or structure constitutes a fire hazard, health hazard or public nuisance. The complaint can be initiated by the owner of the adjacent property. When the mayor, city engineer, police chief or city health official gets the complaint they send a report to city council and a time and place for a hearing is set to determine whether the report is correct. The owner is notified and legal notification procedures are carried out. The hearing should be two weeks after the notice is served and the council determines if the report is correct, then declares the structure to be removed or demolished by the owner. If the structure is not demolished within two weeks the city will remove it. The owner can request a rehearing, however the city will charge for the removal or demolition. The commission previewed information on the classification of a future subdivision. Should Camp 5 be classified as a "major" or a "minor" subdivision? Is it a mineral survey or a parcel? The commissioners said they thought it would qualify as a "major" subdivision. Camp 5 subdivision is 27 acres in the area of the old Alaska Gold Camp along the Teller Highway to the south of the softball field.

The city manager reported the status of the Nome Bypass Road upgrade project.

• Twin Peaks Construction is slated to complete Phase II of the project from East N Street to the Nome-Council Highway by July 31, 2011.

• The Bypass Road portion of the project was constructed last year and is substantially complete. The remaining work includes final grading, delineators, signs and seeding.

• The budget is tight. Although DOT/PF has not fully resolved the issue, there are already cost overruns on some bid items. It is unknown at this time if the funding will be adequate to complete the project.

• There is no funding at this time for a proposed bike path on the north

Nome Public Schools sets major goal: 90 percent of third graders to read at or above grade level by 2014

By Laurie McNicholas

The Nome Board of Education has established a major goal calling for 90 percent of Nome Elementary School's third graders to read at or above grade level by the end of third grade within three years—by the end of the 2014 school year. The action came with unanimous approval of "The 90 percent Reading Initiative" resolution at a meeting on March 8.

The 90 percent reading goal is an outgrowth of a 2010 visit by NPS teachers to the Kennewick School District in Washington State to learn ideas and strategies that have helped the district achieve and maintain Adequate Yearly Progress in its schools.

The resolution acknowledges that only 67 percent of NPS students district-wide meet state proficiency standards for language arts, according to 2010 test data. It also notes that early learning is the foundation for AYP success and that students who fail to read at grade level will fall further and further behind.

Following are key elements of the initiative as stated in the resolution.

- "NPS recognizes the need for providing professional development to staff to support the 90% reading Initiative.
- "NPS recognizes the need for annual growth and catch-up growth in reading for all students.
- "NPS will collect and analyze data on catch-up growth to assure students who are falling behind receive appropriate reading interventions.
- "NPS will implement structural changes to the academic schedule that reflect a commitment to dedicated, direct reading instruction time. All elementary students will receive at least 90-120 minutes of reading instruction each day. K-12 students requiring intervention will receive extra reading instruction."

Success in meeting the reading goal at the end of the 2014 school year will be measured by the student attaining at least a 40 percentile score on the Measures of Academic Progress test.

NPS Superintendent Jon Wehde described the resolution as a "seminal document" in his report to board members before they adopted the goal. He said NPS aspires to Kennewick's literacy rate in the high 80 and 90 percentiles. "We have far to go; many are behind and far below proficient in reading, but tonight we are taking a stand," he said. "We won't accept less than 90 percent literacy or know the reason why."

Wehde recognized NPS teachers and instructional aides for their work. He said a remarkable growth potential showed up in the 2010 Standards Based Assessment test results. (See an analysis of the 2010 SBA results from Wehde's written report on page 8.)

Nivy Brandt, the school board's student representative suggested that an assembly be held to let students know they did great in the 2010 SBA.

Board member Barb Amarok noted that Wehde's written report said four of five NPS schools made AYP in 2010. "Was it not three?" she asked. Wehde acknowledged that the Nome Youth Facility did not make AYP due to an error on the part of NPS and the record cannot be changed, but he said in fairness to the facility's teacher Lloyd Perrigo, his report says the facility achieved AYP.

Amarok questioned whether NPS students had made remarkable gains in 2010, noting that 25 students dropped out of school in 2010 and 47 students dropped out in the previous two years. "What effect does that have?" she asked. "There was a larger dropout in 2010 than in 2009."

Amarok said there is a need to be brutally honest where a school is failing and put it on the table. She quoted Lynn Fielding, a keynote speaker at the annual Assn. of Alaska School Boards meeting last November, as saying that school districts need to admit they have failed. Fielding has served as a Kennewick School District board member for 22 years. He is a tax and business attorney, co-founder of The Children's Reading Foundation and co-author of books including Annual Growth for All Students, Catch-up Growth for Those Who Are Behind (2007) and The 90% Reading Goal (1997).

Countering Amarok's remarks, board member Betsy Brennan said Wehde's report on 2010 SBA results shows wonderful achievements and the way to go. She acknowledged that some students are falling behind and dropping out, but said there are all sorts of reasons for that. "The problem is endemic in western Alaska and probably Alaska when you look at Anchorage," she said. She suggested looking at school districts in the entire state and determining what can be done to address the problem.

Brennan credited Wehde with bringing the 90 percent reading initiative to NPS. "We owe that to Jon Wehde," she said. "Strategic Plan, Jon Wehde. We need to celebrate success. The numbers are increasing...."

"This report was supposed to show increases," commented board member Barb Nickels. "We had multiple double digit increases and should be very proud."

Creating balanced classrooms

The creation of balanced classrooms is among strategies the Kennewick School District uses that are considered promising for Nome Elementary School, NES Principal Dave Keller noted in his report to the board. "Based on our own teacher reports as well as a conversation I recently had with Kennewick Assistant Superintendent of Elementary Education Greg Fancher, creating balanced classrooms is essential to equity of instructional opportunity, and assures that all students experience a rich cross-cultural learning experience," Keller wrote in his report to the board.

Eighth graders to the rescue

By Jeff Erickson

The 2009 decision by the Alaska Schools Activities Association to allow schools with enrollments of less than 20 students to use eighth grade students in team sports (basketball and volleyball) was made to help teams remain viable. It probably wasn't considered a tool that would shift the balance of power in 1A conferences. However, that is what happened at the Bering Sea Conference basketball tournament in St. Michael this past weekend.

Eighth graders Renatta Olson, Alice Amaktoolik and Keisha Olanna led the #1 seeded Golovin Lynx to the championship over a plucky, and even younger, Teller Aklaq team that features three eighth graders, three freshmen and a senior. Jumping out to a 31 point lead at halftime, Golovin had to withstand a withering offensive barrage by Teller in the second half to prevail 51-44. Coach of the Year Eric Boring led the young Aklaqs to the surprise second place finish.

The boys' tournament featured many very competitive games but it became clear that two teams stood out and were heading for a showdown. The Elim Eagles had ruled the BSSD roost for the past three years, each time grabbing the championship and representing the district well in Anchorage. They came in with the top seed and had their eyes set on a four-peat. Golovin on the other hand came in as a dark horse. They hadn't played any of the top three seeds and a couple of mid-season forfeits hurt their record. They didn't let any of that distract them as they won their first two games early and prepared for Elim.

Elim as well ran through their first two opponents on the way to the championship game. The matchup was all that fans could have hoped for, and more. Elim asserted itself early and led by as many as 17 in the first half; big man Oscar Takak, Jr. leading the way. Golovin wouldn't give in, chipping away at the lead until late in the third quarter when they tied it up, 57-57. John Peterson imposed his will on the Elim defense with repeated attacks on the basket forcing contact and making big shots. The rest of the game was a see-saw affair with the entire gym on the edge of their seat. Fans in both communities stuffed into video conference rooms to watch the broadcast of the games. Emotions couldn't have been higher. At the end of the quarter the score was tied again and the result was an overtime period.

The key to the end result was the foul situation. With a very short bench Elim's problems became huge when Takak fouled out. Teammate Josh Jewewouk took the reins and kept the Eagles in it until he too fouled out. By the end of the overtime period Elim was down to three players on the floor and Golovin held on for a 95-88 victory, ending the Eagle run of championships.

While there were tears for the "agony of defeat" on the Elim side, there was elation on the Golovin side of the floor. Both teams left their best effort on the floor and, after the initial shock of the loss, Elim will look back on their great run with pride.

Emerson Conger places 4th in the Ski Tour of Anchorage

The Nome Ski and Biathlon Team's three seniors, as well as the coach, traveled to Anchorage on March 6 to compete in Alaska's largest annual cross-country ski event, the Tour of Anchorage, which boasted three different ways (a 25 kilometer race route, a 40K race route, and a 50 K race route) to travel across Alaska's largest city.

Using the event as a tune-up for the upcoming regional and rural state ski meets, Emerson Conger placed fourth overall (out of 522 racers, 277 in the male division) in the 25K (15.5 mile) race that began at Alaska Pacific University and finished across town at Kincaid Park. His time of 1:22:28 was 28 seconds off the overall podium, earning him a second place finish, and silver medal, in the 18-24-year-old age category.

Sam Schmidt, who has been closing the gap on his teammate for years, finished in a time of 1:28:09, placing him 14th overall. Schmidt's efforts earned him a bronze medal in the 15 -17-year-old category.

It's hard to imagine someone skiing the Tour of Anchorage for their first race, but it's even harder to fathom that person cracking the top 50. Mark Steiger, who was also skiing on groomed trails for the very first time in his life, did just that, finishing in a time of 1:41:05, and a 41st place overall finish.

Nome Ski and Biathlon head coach, Keith Conger, skiing in his second Tour, earned the gold medal in his age category. He posted a time of 1:33:28, which was good enough for a top 25 overall finish.

"I'm very proud of our ski teamers," stated coach Conger. "Other than one fella from Dillingham, we were the only rural Alaskan, off-the-road-system skiers. We were also the only skiers to not have access to groomed trails to train on."

Dylan Watts, Alaska Pacific University's master ski instructor edged a group of world-class skiers, including Olympian James Southam of Anchorage, to capture the 50 K (31 mile) title.

Melissa Lewis of Fairbanks outlasted former Olympic biathlete Rachel Steer in the 50 K women's race.

The Nome Ski and Biathlon team will be traveling to White Mountain, the host of both the regional and rural state ski and biathlon meets, later this month.

Despite a gorgeous sunny day March 12, racers in the 2011 Nome-Golovin Snowmachine Race faced a course that was anything but pretty.

Sculpted by winds that rocked the Seward Peninsula during late-February storms, the trail between Nome and Golovin featured long sections of hard wind-drifts on land and rough ice on Golovin Bay. Finding the right mix between pouring on the speed and easing back on the throttle, 25-year-old Aaron Loyer survived the ride on his Polaris Rush Pro R 600 with the fastest time of the day to take the 2011 title. Loyer, who is from Palmer, clocked a time of two hours, 17 minutes and 26 seconds.

Loyer topped the B Class racers, which was made up of riders almost exclusively riding 600cc machines. In the A Class standings, which draws the boys on bigger machines, Nome racer Jarvis Miller was top dog, clocking a time 2:20:01. Miller, fiddling an Arctic Cat Firecat F7, was only 17 seconds ahead of Nome snowmachine racing legend Evan Booth on his Polaris XL 800. Miller and Booth clocked the second and third fastest time of all racers for the day. Nome's Tre West nabbed the runner-up honors in the B Class with a time of 2:22:45 on his Arctic Cat 600R.

Kotzebue racers on Arctic Cats went one and two in the C Class race for fan-cooled machines. Dickie Moto Jr. easily took the win at 2:44:07, followed by Quinn Schaeffer at 3:06:01. The rest of the six-racer field in the fan-cooled class ended up scratching.

In the women's race, which runs to the Safety/Solomon area before turning back toward Nome, Elim's Marlene Saccheus on a Polaris IQ Shift 600 took top honors at 1:04:10, beating Nome's Mercie McGuffey by four minutes. McGuffey also saddled a Polaris 600 for the race.

New to the race this year was a junior class. Only two young racers toed the line, both from Kotzebue. Gabe Schaeffer on a SkiDoo 550 raced to the win in 57:44. Henry Richards was only a few minutes back on his Arctic Cat Z 440, making the junior class the only group to finish without a scratch. The junior class also raced on a shortened course.

This year's race saw a couple of serious accidents, one involving a spectator and racer. A collision near the race's start in the vicinity of the Nome River injured both racer Stacey Green and spectator Jessa Jennetten who was also on a snowmachine.

The most serious injury in the race appears to have befallen Nome racer Joe Fullwood. Fullwood had to be flown off the course after breaking his femur in a high-speed crash near the top of Cape Nome. Race winner Loyer described Fullwood as cartwheeling through the air. "He caught a wind drift really bad and went flipping through the air," Loyer said on KNOM Radio. "I hope he's alright. He was moving." Fullwood was on the return portion of the race.

The rough trail conditions this year required the start be moved farther east to keep racers from having to deal with a tall wall of sea ice that was pushed on to the shore near Nome as a result of the February storms. Once past the Nome River, the racecourse takes an inland route for much of the competition. Even with the problematic ice taken out of the mix, Loyer told KNOM Radio that the course remained plenty challenging. "The trail, it's pretty brutal," he said at the race's finish. "I'm just exhausted. I rode as hard as I could the whole way. My arms are pumped out. I can't feel my fingers anymore. It's brutal when you're going that hard the whole way."

able lead, as Hugh Neff, Ramey Smyth, Sebastian Schnuelle and Hans Gatt were all within striking distance and this gave fodder for speculations.

Into Unalakleet

While those five mushers battled to stay awake on the long 90-mile trail between Kaltag and Unalakleet, the coastal village of 800 swelled with Iditarod visitors. Media crews, fans and musher family members piled out of their chartered planes and into the Unalakleet pizza restaurant "Peace on Earth." Lance Mackey's mother was there, as was Mitch Seavey waiting for his son Dallas and Dan Kaduce looking to meet up with his partner Jodi Bailey, who is trying to become the first rookie musher to finish both the Yukon Quest and the Iditarod in the same year.

In the restaurant, talk dominated the fact that there are a bunch of mushers poised to make their move to win this race. Usually, by the time the mushers reach the coast, the race is on between two contenders. But there is nothing usual about this year's race. The weather had been warm, not conducive to teams like Baker's that are known to thrive in cold, windy conditions. Trail conditions, Baker said, were challenging on the Yukon. He said there was no bottom to the trail and that he could hear an echo from the snow as air pockets in newly put-in trails have a particular hollow sound. "Coming off the Yukon, I noticed immediately that the trail got better," said Baker. But he had to fight to stay awake. Baker said there were little problems he encountered during the run, starting with him falling asleep, waking up with the team stopped and also once falling off the sled. But being tired at this point, he said, is to be expected.

Despite being exhausted, Baker went about his checkpoint routine efficiently. He immediately took the booties off the dog's feet, and then he went to fetch hot water from a heated water tank to prepare the dog's food. As the dog food was soaking, he opened a bag of straw and bedded down the dogs. Three race veterinarians checked Baker's dogs for hydration and listened to their hearts and lungs. They gave all 11 dogs a clean bill of health to keep going. When Baker started feeding his animals, they devoured their meal with gusto. They also ate the second helping and gobbled down chunks of meat for dessert. Baker said that he feeds them bigger meals on the trail, as there are fewer distractions for them than in the checkpoints. As soon as they were done eating, they laid down to sleep despite the crowd surrounding their beds of straw.

Baker went inside the checkpoint to have breakfast cooked by Unalakleet mayor William "Middi" Johnson. Baker talked for a while with Mitch Seavey and visiting musher Aaron Burmeister before catching an hour of sleep himself.

Seavey had been in the race as well, but was withdrawn when he almost cut his right index finger off while opening a bale of straw in Ophir. Seavey had to be flown to a specialist in Anchorage to re-attach the partially cut-off finger. Looking at the teams coming into Unalakleet, he said that both Baker's and Ramey Smyth's teams looked in great shape. Smyth came in two hours and 23 minutes after Baker. He moved swiftly about his checkpoint routine, massaged a few dog's wrists and then covered his team with blankets for a good rest. As the sun rose on Sunday morning, Hans Gatt came in third, followed by Sebastian Schnuelle, Hugh Neff and Ray Redington Jr.

By the time Hugh Neff fed his dogs a nice helping of human grade chicken snacks, Baker awakened his dogs, fed them, bootied them up and gave one more TV interview before gee-hawing them out onto the icy slough out of Unalakleet. The dogs got up and willingly left the checkpoint. Smyth gave his dogs a five-hour rest in Unalakleet— an hour longer than Baker — and from there on slowly but surely whittled down on Baker's lead. By the time both Baker and Smyth made it to White Mountain on Monday afternoon, Baker had only a 51 minute lead over Smyth. There, the two teams were taking their mandatory eight-hour rest before battling it out on the last 88 miles to Nome.

Further down the trail, Baker's cousin Robert Nelson battled a painful injury. While getting ready to leave Kaltag on Sunday noon, Nelson said he had dislocated his shoulder while he was snacking his dogs and that he had to run six hours with excruciating pain until he got to Kaltag, where a veterinarian popped his shoulder back into place. Nelson said he felt much better, but was still sore from the ordeal.

A new record

In Elim, race judge Jake Berkowitz said on Monday that the race is poised to shatter Martin Buser's record time of 8 days, 22 hours and 46 minutes. "Unless weather moves in or one of them totally falls apart, this is going to be a record setting finish," said Berkowitz.

On the trail from Elim to Golovin, Baker helped his team move along, ski-poling and kicking the sled forward. In Nome, race officials got ready to welcome the winner to town. The finish chute was prepared with snow at the end of Front Street. The burlled arch was moved into place. The Iditarod 2011 finish sign was strung across the street and finally the flags representing musher's home countries went up and remained uncharacteristically limp on this sunny Monday afternoon. Nome was ready for the 2011 Iditarod trail champion.

WACDA hires executive director

Aggie Blandford has been hired as the executive director of the Western Alaska Community Development Association, the governing panel for the western Alaska community development quota program. In her new role, Blandford will work alongside the WACDA board of directors, administering the CDQ program, while advocating and coordinating activities on behalf of Alaska's six community development quota organizations.

Born and raised in Nome, Blandford most recently served as the special projects coordinator for Norton Sound Economic Development Corporation, one of the six entities represented by WACDA. After graduating from Nome-Beltz High School, Blandford earned a bachelor's degree in Business Management from the University of Alaska Anchorage. She was awarded her master's degree in Business Administration from UAA in 2008. In addition to working for NSEDC, Blandford has held administrative positions with the State of Alaska and a private law firm.

"We are thrilled to welcome Aggie Blandford as WACDA's new executive director," stated Larry Cotter, chairman of the WACDA Board of Directors and CEO of the Aleutian Pribilof Island Community Development Association.

"NSEDC's loss is WACDA's gain. Aggie's experience with the CDQ program and familiarity with fisheries issues are an asset to WACDA. We are excited to have an executive director from one of the CDQ program's 65 member communities and a candidate that has had the chance to work for such a fine organization as NSEDC," Cotter continued.

"Though it was a tough decision to leave NSEDC, I am excited for the opportunity to serve not just one, but all six CDQ groups represented by WACDA," says Blandford. "The CDQ program has a great impact on our state and I am grateful for the opportunity to expand my contribution to its effort."

WACDA's offices are located at 425 G Street, Suite 720 in downtown Anchorage. Its main phone number is (907) 868-7634. The fax line is (907) 868-7635. Email inquiries can be directed to ablandford@wacda.org.

2011 Iditarod Banquet to feature Norton Sound red king crab, halibut

After finishing the grueling 1,000 miles that mark the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race, mushers and fans in Nome will be treated to a special dinner at the 2011 finishers banquet. Offering a true taste of the region, banquet attendees will feast on Norton Sound red king crab and halibut sponsored by Norton Sound Economic Development Corporation and supplied by Norton Sound Seafood Products.

While red king crab has long been a mainstay of the multi-course meal traditionally presented to the first musher to reach the Yukon River, all mushers and fans alike will be able to enjoy the delicacy this year in Nome without having to be the frontrunner of one of world's toughest races to get it.

NSEDC is supplying up to 1,000 pounds of Norton Sound red king crab and halibut for the banquet to be held at the Nome Recreation Center March 20. The crab and halibut were all landed by area resident fishermen and are some of the finest seafood on the planet. For those wanting to get a taste of the crab and halibut outside of the banquet, Norton Sound Seafood Products offers the fish locally at its plant in Nome.

As in past years, the preparation of the dinner will be under the direction of the talented and expert chefs from Anchorage's Millennium Hotel.

KICY-AM receives prestigious NRB milestone award

Manassas, VA – KICY-AM received the prestigious NRB Milestone Award during the March 1st Banquet at the NRB Convention & Exposition.

"Just a year after Alaska become admitted into the Union, forward-thinking pastors founded KICY in the regional hub of Nome," said NRB President and CEO Dr. Frank

Wright. "More than five decades later, KICY's signal still reaches Alaska and the Russian Far East with the life-giving words of the Gospel."

On Easter Sunday, April 17, 1960, KICY AM-850 signed on with the words, "Faith comes by hearing. And hearing by the Word of God." This fulfilled the dream of connecting the many villages of arctic, western Alaska with a radio station. Today, KICY is a commercial, Clear-Channel 50,000 watt facility with the only international license ever granted by the FCC, which provides KICY and the Covenant Church an amazingly powerful tool to share the Gospel with our Russian brothers and sisters. And they, in turn, have responded with great joy and appreciation.

Longevity in any field is becoming a rarity, and exemplary service in Christian broadcasting for 50 years—or more—is a feat worthy of recognition and applause. With the Milestone Award, NRB desires to honor the industry pioneers who brought Christian communications to the place of respect and achievement it enjoys today.

Saying it Sincerely

Running the Race

By Pastor Karen Sonray, Our Savior Lutheran church for the Nome Ministerial Association

"You're only as good as the dogs that lead you." That's the saying stuck in my head. A good friend of mine, who is both a musher and a pastor, repeats it often. During this time of the Iditarod I find myself reflecting on his quip. No matter how hard you work, no matter how talented you may be as a musher, you cannot win the race without good dogs pulling you. The lead dog is crucial. But then so is the wheel dog. Each member of the team plays an important role. And, let's face it, the team needs the musher to push them toward the goal, too.

Jesus liked to teach with parables. He used everyday common activities to evoke rich lessons and meaning. Perhaps there's a parable in the dog team metaphor for us as individuals, families and communities. First of all, we need each other. And, given that reality, we should take seriously the differentiated roles we each play. There is dignity in each part of the team. This is easily discounted or forgotten in our specialized world and in a world that idolizes celebrities. Secondly, we can encourage one another. An elder I knew used to say, "I don't have to put you down in order to put myself up." I like that.

Where are you being pulled or pushed? Do you have the right lead dog? Are you being pushed toward the right goal? During this season before Easter, many Christians are taking the time to assess their own personal "race" of life. The 40-days of "Lent" are meant to be a time to re-examine priorities and values. Are there areas where I need to take a different direction or even turn around? "Repent" comes from the Greek word "metanoia" which literally means "turn around."

As you run the race of life, keep in mind the one who created you is also with you in that race. Carve out time to listen to God's voice in your life. As Christians we believe our maker sent his son into history so that we will never be alone whether we fail or win in whatever endeavor we find ourselves. Christians believe ultimately our reason for existence on this planet is to establish a relationship to the person who placed us here. Until then, all quests for happiness fall short. Recognition, money, power, the perfect marriage or friendship – all fall short and never quite satisfy our deepest longings nor fill our restless spirit. The good news is the one who alone can satisfy is there even now behind, beside and before us. St. Paul says it best:

"Therefore since we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses, let us also lay aside every weight and the sin that clings so closely, and let us run with perseverance the race that is set before us, looking to Jesus the pioneer and perfected of our faith." Hebrews 12: 1

"I choose not to smoke because when I was around 14 years old I became violently ill from one puff of cigarette smoke. This happened at Wrangell Institute. I tagged along with my childhood Teller friend Angela Wheeler and another student. We went down the beach, Angela lit a cigarette, took a puff, passed it to the other student then to me. They had no problem taking a puff, I took one puff, next thing I'm falling to the ground having dry heaves. I was dizzy, my world tumbling all around me, I could not get up. My friend and roommate had to grab each of my arms and drag me back to the Girls Dorm. I was nearly unconscious. I was bedridden and ill for three days! I could not figure out how my dad can smoke a pack a day!

Later on, I made friends with a smoker. It was very heart breaking to see my friend wither away from lung cancer, to see them become completely bedridden and lose lots and lots of weight. Even while dying their body craved for a cigarette. Please, if you are young – do not start smoking! If you are smoking – you have the will power deposited into you to quit!

Enjoy your lungs! Keep them smoke free! Breathe deeply! Enjoy your Life!"

Cell phone use affects the brain

By Bob Lawrence, MD
Alaska Family Doctor

Cell phones have changed the way we communicate. According to a recent study, they may also be changing our brains.

The electrical signal from a cell phone antenna causes subtle changes in brain metabolism, according to research published last month in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA). The clinical significance of these findings remains unclear.

Investigators used a special imaging machine called a positron emission tomography (PET) scanner to document the effects a cell phone has on the human brain. The PET scans show a change in glucose metabolism in the area of the brain closest to where the cell phone makes contact with the head.

Whether or not these changes in brain metabolism are harmful is unclear, according to the lead study author, Nora Volkow, MD of the National Institute of Health.

Research regarding the risk of cell phone use on the brain, especially the risk of brain cancer, is conflicting. Some studies show a small risk. Other studies show no risk at all. The largest study to date, published

Make your home safe from carbon monoxide, the silent killer

By Jim Gorman

Jim Gorman serves as vice president and general manager for Allied Barton Security Services, www.alliedbarton.com.

Being proactive in making sure your home is safe from carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning is the first step in keeping you and your family safe.

While CO detectors work well, they should not be your only reliable source of preventing this odorless, colorless and tasteless gas from entering your home. Each year, more than 15,000 people report to the Emergency Department with symptoms of CO poisoning and a staggering average of 500 lives are taken yearly because of accidental intake of this silent killer. Keep you and your family safe by following these tips to prevent against CO poisoning in your home.

Gorman's tips include:

- There are many common household appliances and chemicals that have the potential to give off CO gases. While CO in small doses usually is not harmful, you should be aware of which appliances and chemicals can produce the gas. Items include, but are not limited to:

1. Gas water heaters, ovens and stoves
2. Charcoal grills
3. Cigarette smoke
4. Spray paint, solvents, degreasers and paint removers

- CO is most commonly formed when organic compounds burn. The most common sources for organic compounds to burn are in vehicle exhaust, smoke from fires and non-electric heaters. Be cautious if you are around any of these sources for an extended period of time.
- A CO detector should be on each level of your home, placed near bedrooms so sleeping children and adults will awaken when an alarm sounds if CO is present. Detectors should be checked monthly to make sure they are properly working.

- As a home owner or renter, you should always inspect your home for hazards that could easily cause CO poisoning such as a clogged chimney, inadequate ventilation of your furnace, gas oven and range, and blocked exhaust flues or ducts. If any questionable hazards are found, contact a trained professional to clear the area. Have your furnace serviced regularly.
- Idling your vehicle in a garage, even if the garage door is open, is very dangerous because CO fumes can fill up a small garage space very fast and leak into the rest of your home if the garage is connected. Only idle your vehicle outside.
- A gas oven is not meant for heating your house. Make sure you are properly using your household appliances because not only could CO gases become present, but also fires could easily be started.
- Evacuate the building immediately if CO is detected.
- If CO gases are present in your home, it is important for the source of the gas to be found. Contact your local fire department or public safety company, as they will be able to find the source for you after you evacuate.

Treatment is very important if you or anyone you know is showing signs and symptoms of CO poisoning.

The signs and symptoms of CO poisoning include, but are not limited to headaches, nausea, fatigue, chest pain, impaired judgment, confusion, abdominal pain and fainting.

If someone is showing any of these signs or symptoms, first move them outside to fresh air and then seek medical attention immediately. Humans are not the only ones who can be affected by CO poisoning. Pets will also show similar signs to CO poisoning and will also need treated immediately.

According to the National Fire Protection Association, 93 percent of homes have smoke detectors but the Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates only 15 percent have a CO detector. It is important to have a detector in your home to alert you when the gas is present but taking the precautionary steps to prevent CO poisoning is key to you and your family's safety.

in May 2010 in the International Journal of Epidemiology found that cell phone users have no increased risk for glioma or meningioma, two of the most common forms of brain tumor.

The harmful effects of any electromagnetic radiation diminish with distance from the antenna. Most experts agree that the electromagnetic field produced by a cell phone is harmless beyond 12 inches.

It is also important to note that in the recent study, changes in brain metabolism occurred only after 50 minutes of exposure to a cell phone in the "on" position. This suggests that prolonged exposure to electromagnetic radiation from a cell phone is required to elicit any effect on the brain.

Whether or not the research should serve as a note of caution is a matter of perspective. At this point, experts only know that the electromagnetic signals from a cell phone affect the brain in some way. Encouragingly, these effects do not appear to cause cancer. Perhaps one day, use of this technology will prove clinically beneficial.

The finding that brain metabolism can be affected by radio waves has profound implications for future forms of medical treatment. Imagine an application for your smart phone that treats migraine headaches simply by holding the phone over the painful area of the head.

Until research further clarifies the risks and benefits of cell phone use on brain chemistry, Dr. Volkow and others recommend using the speakerphone or other hands-free option when using a cell phone. This may be especially important for young children and teenagers whose brains are still in development.

Frank E. Ahnangnatoguk

Frank Eilghuk Ahnangnatoguk was born August 5, 1923 in Ikpiik, Alaska to John and Lena Ahnangnatoguk. Frank was born into a large family, with 13 sisters and brothers. Frank and his brothers and sisters grew up in Shishmaref, Ikpiik, and Brevig Mission.

When Frank was a young man, it was love at first sight for him when he first laid eyes on his future bride, Edna Eyuk, at the Reindeer Plant near Teller and Brevig Mission. For about a year Frank and Edna got to know one another by writing to each other through the mail. On November 27, 1950 Frank and Edna were joined in marriage and began a life full of love and family together in Nome.

Frank was known to be a hard worker that always completed the job with competence and efficiency. Frank never did anything halfway, and made sure his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren learned to excel in whatever they did. Among Frank's career and activities was having been recruited and proudly serving in the Alaska Territorial Guard from 1942 through 1944. Frank then made his career operating heavy machinery for Hammond's Gold Mining at Sunset Creek, Coffee Creek, Lost River and in Teller, Munz Northern Airlines, B&R Tug and Barge, and the Department of Transportation for the State of Alaska and also working for Lomen's and Billman's in Nome. Once he retired, Frank was always busy making ulus, carving ivory necklaces and earrings, collecting coins, carrying out traditional subsistence activities throughout the year and teaching the younger generations how to go hunting, fishing, camping and reading the weather. As they grew older, Frank made sure his brothers and sisters had enough Eskimo food to eat and always shared what he and his crew caught or gathered.

Frank and Edna welcomed four children into their lives: James Ahnangnatoguk, Alma Smithhisler, Ronald Ahnangnatoguk and Florence McComas. When their first grandchild, John Ahnangnatoguk, was born they welcomed him into their family and raised him as one of their own children. While John was growing up he couldn't say "grandpa" or "grandma" and began calling Frank and Edna, "Papa" and "Gaga". The names stuck and they have been known by those terms of endearment ever since. When Frank "Little Papa" was born, Papa found a new best friend. Little Papa was the apple of Papa's eye and under Papa's supervision he could never get into trouble.

Family was important to Papa and he made sure his siblings, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren were taken care of. Papa made sure everyone was included when going to camp whether at Fort Davis, Teller, Tukshuq or near Igloo. Papa loved fixing up camp and taught his grandchildren how to build the seawall at Tukshuq so when the river rose it would not damage the house.

Papa will be known and remembered for his mischievous sense of humor and silliness and making people laugh. Even when he was sick in the hospital, he still managed to remember his humor and would make funny faces at the nurses and joke around with them.

Papa read the Bible and prayed every day and would teach his family to love the Lord. Papa also taught the children in the family to have faith in God because we would one day meet again in Heaven.

Frank went to be with his Heavenly Father on Friday, February 25, 2011. He went to meet in Heaven his parents John and Lena Ahnangnatoguk, parents-in-law James and Eva Eyuk, siblings Walter Ahnangnatoguk, Dorcas Rock, Victor Weakak, Margaret Picnalook, Andrew Ahnangnatoguk, Ira Ahnangnatoguk, Donna Kline, George Ahnangnatoguk, and Agnes Ahnangnatoguk, son James Ahnangnatoguk and son-in-law Donald Smithhisler.

He is survived by his beloved wife of 60 years Edna Ahnangnatoguk, children, Alma Smithhisler, Ronald (Sarah) Ahnangnatoguk and Florence (Albert) McComas, grandchildren John (Marilyn) Ahnangnatoguk, Gail Smithhisler, Thomas and Joshua McComas, Donny, Tracy, Steven and Allen Ahnangnatoguk, great-grandchildren Frank "Little Papa," Piniak and Nutaasaq Ahnangnatoguk and siblings Della Walluk, Allen Ahnangnatoguk, Mary Sallee and Agnes Pagel.

Cora Atqaquq Senungetuk Olson

Cora Atqaquq Senungetuk Olson, loving wife, mother, grandmother and sister, died on early in the morning March 10. Cora was born on April 4, 1942 in Wales. She was known to many as Grammy and was well known for her friendliness and kindness to everybody. Cora's quick wit and sense of humor made it easy for her to make new friends and make people laugh.

In 1971, Cora moved to Seward for training where she met Larry Olson and on June 29, 1973, they were happily married. Larry and Cora made their home in Seward and later moved to Nome to be closer to Cora's parents, Willie and Helen Senungetuk. They lived in Nome from 1982 - 1991, and Cora worked at the Bering Sea Women's Shelter. She enjoyed helping and comforting women and children.

She enjoyed attending church at Alaska Native Medical Center, cultural activities at the Native Heritage Center, and Singspiration. She truly loved to see family and friends, sharing good memories and always laughing. The joy of her life was her grandchildren. She liked sewing and beading, and often shared her beautiful Eskimo angels with others.

Cora is survived by her husband Larry Olson, daughters Charlotte Miller and partner Jeff Newbauer; Leah Senungetuk Warburton and husband Gunny, all of Fairbanks; her baby girl Laura Olson, loving son Eric "Son" Olson, most loved grandchildren, her rainbow Andrew "Jake" Miller, her sunshine Jenny Miller, and beautiful and she's ours Carlee Elizabeth Olson, her brothers Ron Senungetuk and wife Turid of Homer; Joseph Senungetuk; Nancy Felton and her husband Willard and

He did improve in that instance.

The verdict on his tenure as a fisheries developer is too early to tell. But not trending well.

For many years a Yupik educator at Nome Elementary has hatched salmon eggs with her students in the classroom, without Charlie's assistance, or Charlie's need for publicity. She also helped get a salmon hatchery going here with her husband. There are misguided attempts now to close it or take it away. Who is behind the misguiding Charlie?

Doesn't anyone involved in, or influencing the Hobson Creek break-in have a sense that at some level they're doing something wrong?

Mukluk “fun”raiser puts feet to Front Street

By Sandra L. Medearis

Starter Lew Tobin's flare set off about 87 pairs of tennis shoes, boots, slippers, and yes, a few traditional Eskimo mukluks, racing down the street in the Nome Rotary Club's annual Bob Beardsley Memorial Mini Mukluk Marathon Sunday afternoon.

Walkers headed from Nome Rec Center to a turnaround and return at Swanberg Dredge on East Front Street while in-shape and can-do runners did a 5K to Ft. Davis Roadhouse and back.

Jackie Markese, Iditarod volunteer of Jacksonville, Fla., ran the distance in cool shoes and striped socks that competed with the sun on such a bright day. "This is my first time in Alaska and my first race in Alaska. I'm a runner, a half-marathoner, so I said 'Why not?'" Markese said at the finish.

Kevin Busk came in first, with faithful running partner Java tagging along. Dogs on leashes were welcome. Many parents brought toddlers and their strollers. Nome Rotary Nome Community Center's "You feel so good, you forget about smoking" program has co-sponsored the fun run/walk for the past four years.

"We ask that you do not smoke during the MM Marathon," organizer Tobin urged.

The event is named in honor of late Nome Elementary School educator Bob Beardsley. Three generations of the Dr. J. Pepper Goslin III family of Nome dedicated their walk to the memory of grandfather J. Pepper Goslin Sr., a Rotarian for 40 years, who passed away recently.

The "fun"raiser offered a nifty t-shirt for a $10 entry fee.

•The status of right of way on the curve between the new hospital and N St. has been established with plats filed with several adjoining parcels of Alaska Gold property.

• Conveyance of title of the road to the City involves a deed that would protect the State from environmental issues, safety issues and federal funding obligation that are unlikely for the City to accept.

Chairman Tom Sparks asked if the City would have to take ownership before dealing with issues of speed and signage. Commissioners stated there would be problems with more vehicles and more foot traffic on the road. They noted the potential area where there are likely to be blind spots. They wondered if the city should purchase more land on the north side of the road to allow for a footpath on the north side of the road.

Commissioner Charlie Weiss discussed a 4-way stop coming out of the new hospital driveway and Sparks said we would not want to have an unlimited number of driveways along the road.

The city manager agreed to the need for baseline traffic use information.

The Commission considered the Nome Justice Center and State Office Building concept as proposed by Sitnasuak Native Corporation an the City of Nome. The plan is NOT to utilize the 6th Ave. subdivision.

The City and Sitnasuak propose to work together to provide a 20-year government-to-government lease.

The size of the building will be smaller than the original proposal. It will not include the DOT, which will keep its office space at the Nome-Beltz facility.

The proposal is to build on Front Street on the Sitnasuak lot across the street from the Board of Trade. The proposal is to purchase and remove the Old Pharmacy Building and Mark's Soap and Suds. Commissioner Gerald Brown stated there was no reason to have a sky bridge over Lane's Way. As to the concerns that half of the lot would be in the 100-year flood plain Brown said if it was raised five ft. it would be out of the flood plain.

The commission also considered the need for cemetery expansion and commented about areas the city needs to consider for land purchase and expansion. They talked of expansion to the Camp 5 area, north of the Public Safety Building and asked where the city might want to purchase land for subdivision. The area east of the Bypass road was considered too bad for development because it is wetlands. They will take up the recommendations for subdiviyear's team," Baker said. "But I've always said I didn't want to race against this dog team."

Baker had kept the lead ever since leaving Eagle Island on the Yukon, but had a pack of hungry mushers vying for first place snapping at his heels. From Unalakleet on, the race was between Smyth and Baker.

"I didn't figure I had the race for sure, I didn't allow myself to think like this," said Baker. "I knew I had to take care of my own business, take care of my dogs, [...] be fair with them, not asking too much of them and if I could do that I would be all-right."

Baker said that he was fortunate that he got to stick to his plan in resting the dogs exactly how he had planned while he saw Ramey Smyth continuously breaking the rest. "I was curious how strong his team actually is and how long he continues to do that," said Baker.

However, Baker also offered some self-criticism when he said that he is not very good at mastering the first part of the race that takes teams out of Willow, through forests and challenging terrain. "I am not very good at this, I don't control the sled very good," Baker said. "I need to make a lot of changes if I'm to continue to do this because I'm really weak in that area. It's not the type of mushing I enjoy, I guess. The sled is banging into the trees and I got too much stuff in the sled and the dogs are traveling too slow." But once Baker reached Nikolai, he was literally out of the woods and felt more at ease.

Now back in northwest Alaska, Baker said that he can't wait to get back home to Kotzebue to share this life-changing experience with his family, friends and supporters.

As Baker, the dog team and the entire entourage emptied the chute, the Nome sirens sounded again to mark the arrival of Ramey Smyth. Escorted by a Nome police car, Smyth ran in front of his team up Front Street, arriving 64 minutes after Baker in second place. Hans Gatt was the third to make it into Nome on Tuesday morning.
