Council opens Foster Building to Kawerak museum plans

By Sandra L. Medearis

It is decided and all over but the shouting: Nome's new Carrie M. McLain museum plans will include Kawerak's Beringia Museum of Culture and Science. Kawerak needs museum quality space of about 3,500 sq. ft. for display, storage and office space.

The Nome Common Council Monday evening voted 4-2 on a resolution to allow Kawerak, Inc. to participate in planning and using space in the Richard Foster Building.

Kawerak has offered money for maintenance and operation as well as lease income.

Practical realization of the resolution depends on the City of Nome and Kawerak Inc. arriving at a memorandum of understanding establishing a management and operation plan for the facility.

The vote could have hung up on possible conflicts of interest held by Councilman Jerald Brown and Mayor Denise Michels that would have prevented their voting. Kawerak is a non-profit arm of Bering Straits Native Corp. Brown holds a management position with BSNC. The mayor, who would vote if there were a 3-3 tie, holds a management position with Kawerak, Inc. However, the City's attorney, Brooks Chandler, when City manager Josie Bahnke asked him for an opinion, said that neither had a conflict of interest obstructing their votes on the issue. As it occurred, Almost every seat was taken in the Council Chambers at Nome City Hall, with about a dozen citizens taking the podium to comment for or against the measure. Council members Louis Green Sr., Stan Andersen, Randy Pomeranz and Jerald Brown cast yes votes with Mary Knodel and Councilwoman Josie Stiles saying no.

Kawerak's president, Melanie Bahnke, led off, reiterating what the City of Nome would gain in allowing Kawerak to rent 3,500 sq. feet in the new building—a partnership with a substantial organization, help with maintenance and operation costs and build on Richard Foster's legacy of cooperation.

Amy Russell, director of BMCS, added that combining with the City's museum would foster better care of cultural resources than the City museum could provide, including resources that were confidential in nature.

Others spoke

"I think all cultures were planned to be on display," Councilwoman Mary Knodel said. The project was $2 million short of the need for including the library, with the City depending on a library grant.

"I am opposed to giving up any space," Knodel said. Studies had showed the amount of space needed for space for storage and displays, then that space was cut for the library. Not only would inclusion of Kawerak cut the museum space again, but it could make space for a larger facility unaffordable on Front Street.

"If we have to pay higher for land on Front Street, then we will have to move it off Front Street," Knodel said.

Brown, asking for a ruling on his possible conflict of interest, and receiving the go-ahead from the mayor, said he favored the combining of the two museums.

"My personal opinion is we need to cooperate, we need to work together, we need to be able to have the museums under one roof," he said.

Should the Council and all concerned not be able to agree, Nikolai Ivanoff had a dream, he said, complete with a hand-drawn map. Ivanoff proposed the two museums exist separately, but connected, on the same ground, sharing a service module for heat and power.

Barb Amarok said she did not represent any group, but it was "just and right for the [combined] museum to represent the culture of people who live here."

The City has received state funding of $2 million in 2010 and $14 million in 2011—$16 million for the proposed Richard Foster Building to house the museum. Design work has since included the library within the square footage. Kawerak wishes to lease 3,500 sq. ft. for display, storage and office space. The City will pursue library construction funds for an additional $2 million through a state grant process, according to Josie Bahnke, city manager. Currently, planners are looking at constructing a 16,000 – 17,000-sq. ft. facility at the priority site at the corner of Front Street and Federal Way.

Putting both museums under one roof would go far in healing a divide between Native and nonnative groups, Sue Steinacher said, and also "draw more local residents and visitors into both organizations' spaces."

Leasing to Kawerak for a regional museum would cut out needed space for the City's museum. He has had reservations about adding another partner to the Richard Foster Building project, Charlie Lean, member of the Museum and Library Commission, said.

"One of the selling points of this grant was a place to conserve preserve take care of the city's archive resources. It's not at cross purposes to add a greater collection. It seems somewhat disrespectful after so many people have worked hard to get a grant, for people to say 'your museum is too damn big anyway.' The situation is that the City has a

Road construction and repair projects are in full swing

By Diana Haecker

Summer is here when the barges stacked sky-high with containers arrive, laden with building and construction materials. Heavy equipment rolling off those barges is a sure sign that construction is happening. Flag men and women stand out in the safety vests in town as well as on the outlying roads leading both to Teller and Council. The Alaska

Dept. of Transportation has a long list of new construction as well as repairs and maintenance projects scheduled for this summer.

One of the biggest projects to begin this summer is the Snake River Bridge replacement. The $ 8.5 million contract was awarded on July 5 to Pro-West Contractors. The existing bridge north of the power plant will be replaced by a new bridge that is designed to cross the Snake River 300 feet southeast of the Center Creek Road and connect to Jafet Drive.

The project is to be completed by October 1, 2013. Work is slated to start this summer. Kinnan Engineering, an Oregon drilling company, is currently drilling a new 24-foot diameter water and sewer line from the power plant underneath the Snake River to Belmont Point to reroute the utilities from the old bridge to the new location.

The Nome-Council Highway has numerous sections where repairs are done. Just out of town, past the Beam Road intersection, contractor Ridge Contracting is performing a few small shoulder repairs, but further down the road, between mile 16 and

Letters

Dear Editor:

The two Native Villages of Tun-tutluliak and Akiak are within their rights to catch their traditional foods, which is something they have done for thousands of years. The state is arresting Alaska Natives not because they are wrong, but to discourage us Natives from taking what is our inherent rights that were never ceded nor relinquished.

Northwest Ordinance of 1787

(1Stat.50) Article 3 assured that “The utmost good faith shall always be observed towards the Indians; their lands and property shall never be taken without their consent; and, in their property, rights and liberty, they shall never be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars authorized by Congress; but laws founded in justice and humanity, shall from time to time be made for preventing wrongs being done to them, and for preserving peace and friendship with them.”

Indian Tribal Justice Act

US Code: Title 25, Chapter 38, § 3601. The Congress finds and declares that (in part):

- (1) there is a government-to-government relationship between the United States and each Indian tribe;
- (2) the United States has a trust responsibility to each tribal government that includes the protection of the sovereignty of each tribal government;

(3) Congress, through statutes, treaties, and the exercise of administrative authorities, has recognized the self-determination, self-reliance, and inherent sovereignty of Indian tribes;

Secretary of State John Quincy Adams stated,

“The United States asserted that the Native Nations essentially possess the title and dominion with full sovereignty and independence as any European nation under the law of Nations.” This placed the sovereignty of the Alaska Nations on equal footing as any European Nation.

Therefore, Alaska Native Nations have “Title.” The State of Alaska sued the Federal Government in 1975 since they claimed to have quit claim deed. The Supreme Court ruling was quit claim does not transfer title. The State of Alaska sued again around 2000. The suit was called “Original Action 128.” Kuui’s filed a brief called “Act of State” with the Supreme Court putting them on notice that it would be conflict of interest to hear Original Action 128.

Sincerely,

Editorial

No excuse— recuse

Elected officials need to be aware that they have an obligation to refrain from voting on actions that would enhance their own economic interests. This also includes the financial interests of their employers. Elected officials should not be feathering their own nests or that of the company that signs their paychecks.

The appearance of impropriety is overwhelming in some cases. Its frequency numbs many Nomeites who have come to accept this as normal. “Well, this is Nome,” they say as they as they shrug their shoulders. The feeling of helplessness is pervasive. However it is possible to correct the situation if the public would attend meetings and call the officials into question. The elected bodies can also self-police themselves by asking if there is a need to recuse before every vote.

Let’s encourage elected officials to be above reproach by demanding special self interest actions be held to the scrutiny of recusal.

Foster’s Report

Representative Neal Foster
Alaska State Legislature House District 39

Hello everyone. I hope you are having a great summer. It’s nice to see everyone getting out into the country, and I’m looking forward to the berries coming soon. The following are a few items that usually come up in discussion as I’ve visited with folks this summer.

Redistricting: As things stand the Amended Proclamation Plan has been given preclearance by the Department of Justice. The Division of Elections has moved forward with implementation of that plan in preparation of the August Primary. There was a lawsuit (dismissed) to stop the DOE from implementing that plan. The argument was that if they were allowed to implement that plan they would use it regardless of approval from DOJ. The bottom line on this is that Federal trumps State. If the DOJ said no to the State’s election map then the State could not run under that map. That case has been dismissed, as has the district court request before a three-judge panel to look at the assertions of the plaintiffs. The potential for more lawsuits is still there. What would another lawsuit mean? In my view it is unlikely that a new map could be drawn in time for a primary election even if the date was moved back. Redistricting is a net zero game and any map that makes some groups happy is going to anger others. This would mean any new map would start the litigation process all over again. If a new map could clear the Supreme Court it would still have to go to the DOJ for 60-days for review and preclearance. That means if you could draw a map and get it through the courts in a month (unlikely) you still wouldn’t know if that map was legal until the end of October. This leaves us with two options to consider. The first is we could run under what’s been called the Benchmark Plan (existing districts). The second is we could run under the Amended Proclamation Plan that already has DOJ preclearance. The main obstacle for the Benchmark Plan is that it will be subject to the litigation process, and there are several groups with legitimate claims. For all the constitutional problems with the plans before us a Benchmark Plan would violate the most basic tenant of the constitution, which is “one man, one vote”. There are many areas that have grown in population. A benchmark plan would deny them their most basic right of equal representation. Therefore I think it is most likely that we will run under the Amended Proclamation Plan since it has been approved by both the Supreme Court and the Department of Justice.

Coastal Zone Management: Proposition 2 will be on this year’s primary ballot. It restores the Alaska Coastal zone Management Program. This program lapsed last year after sides were unable to reach consensus over the direction of the program. Each side in this battle has been described in many ways particularly over the issue of development. Both sides claim that their stance is better for development. Anti-ACMP argues that this program is an extra hoop to jump through that makes development more burdensome. Pro-ACMP argues that the program gives the State of Alaska dominance over the Federal EPA in the permitting process and is therefore better for development. The funny thing about this is that they are both right. ACMP will have requirements that prospective developers will have to follow. But permitting will be in the hands of Alaska’s Department of Environmental Conservation. Without the State’s Coastal Zone Program the Federal EPA will be in the driver’s seat, and they have not always fully understood Alaska’s unique conditions. If you would like more information on this program prior to casting your ballot please free to contact my office.

Supreme Court: A recent ruling in the case of Secretary of the Interior v. Ramah Navajo Chapter held that the Government must pay each Tribe’s contract support costs in full. During Fiscal Years 1994 through 2001 it was found that insufficient funding had been provided by Congress, and in order to deal with that short fall the Department of the Interior paid tribes on a pro rata basis across the board. This was in violation of The Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act. That act covered multiple areas of service contracting such as health, transportation, public safety etc. The Act requires the Secretary to contract and pay the full amount of contract support costs. This ruling should prove to be a healthy financial shot in the arm for Alaska tribes as well as those in the lower 48. The court has made it clear that the US government must honor agreements made with the tribes and puts the onus on Congress and the Administration to pay contracts now in the budget or later in a lawsuit. The ruling can be read in full here <http://www.supremecourt.gov/opinions/11pdf/11-551.pdf>

A Look at the Past: The 1900 Nome Gold Rush

By Laura Samuelson, Director, Carrie M. McLain Memorial Museum

In an attempt to reincarnate the spirit of the 1900 Nome Gold Rush, the Carrie M. McLain Memorial Museum is pleased to present "The 1900 Diary of Wilfred A. McDaniel" in the next several issues of The Nome Nugget Newspaper.

JULY 15, 1900 – “It is just a month today since we landed and we are running now in good shape. We have everything in good running order. Can see lots of gold in the boxes.”

Wilfred McDaniel was 25 years old when he first landed at Nome in June 1900 in the midst of the largest gold rush in Alaska. Wilfred was a gifted photographer, writer, artist, poet and an amateur dentist. During the eight years he lived in Nome he lugged his 20 pound Kodak camera from town to beach claim through rugged creeks and mosquito infested tundra, during powerful Bering Sea storms and furious blizzards. All the while he wrote descriptive letters to his parents in California and maintained a diary covering almost every day he lived on the coast west of Nome.

In the last issue of the Nome Nugget newspaper, Wilfred and brother Ed spent a lot of time perfecting the operation of their water pumps. Wilfred suffered from severe indigestion from heaven knows what and with no Tums around in 1900.

However, they did see their first sign of GOLD. It was $18 per ounce back then...

July 15, 1900

It is just a month today since we landed and we are running now in good shape. We have everything in good running order. Can see lots of gold in the boxes. We will put on a night shift this evening. I will run the night shift and Ed take the day run. Our ground prospects fine and we are happy about all this gold. We hired two men today at six dollars per day.

July 16, 1900

I worked in the night shift all night. Went to bed at 8 this morning and got up at 5:30P p.m. The sun rose at 2:30 a.m. The moon staid in the same position all night long. About half way up above the horizon in the S.E. Apparently it did not move at all. Struck 15¢ a pan on our ground today.

July 17, 1900

Had to stop pumping at 10:15 p.m. as the water gave out. Put the men at cleaning bedrock. Started the engine at 2:30 a.m. and sluiced until 6 o’ clock. Went to bed at 0 a.m.. and slept till 1 p.m. Cleaned up the boxes and got one pound of amalgam. Had to

JULY 21, 1900 – “I went to bed at 7:30 a.m. and slept till 2 p.m. Ed moved the sluice boxes and we will start another fit tonight. Our pump is lots of trouble. I think we have mastered it though.”

take the suction pipe off and clean out the strainer and tighten the joints. Heard that the government is going to send five transports to take our destitute men from here. Had to lay off the night shift at 10:30 p.m. as the suction pipe was stopped up. We worked until midnight on the suction pipe.

July 18, 1900

Got up at 7 a.m. and started the diggings at 8:30. Weather is cloudy but warm. A steamer loaded with Cheechalkers came in this morning. I have had to turn my socks over as I have worn out the heels in all of them. I now wear the heel on top and am all right for a while. Our clean up weighed 5 oz. value $90. We removed the foot valve from the suction pipe and we are now getting more water. Dig a good day’s work today. Got letters from home. One letter of June 16 was 33 days on the trip to Nome.

July 19, 1900

Wrote a letter home this morning and sent it downtown. We sluiced until 12:30 p.m. when our pump began bucking. Worked on the pipe all afternoon. Got fine prospects in the mine. The sea is very rough and the breakers damage our suction pipe. The dynamo got a hot box. I worked on it until 10 p.m.

July 20, 1900

Started our pump this morning and she gave us as much trouble as ever. Went to work at 9 a.m. lagging the drive pulley. Got through at 11:30 and we now get enough water. Sluiced all afternoon. We will put on 2 men tonight. I slept all afternoon, as I must be up all night. It is very windy today and the sea is very rough. Heard that the Bear took out 250 strapped men to Seattle. The people are leaving as fast as they can get money enough to get out on.

July 21, 1900

I went to bed at 7:30 a.m. and slept till 2 p.m. Ed moved the sluice boxes and we will start another fit tonight. Our pump is lots of trouble. I think we have mastered it though. Opened it this afternoon and took out some sticks, a chunk of wood and some seaweed. We now get a fine flow of water. It is now midnight and I am writing this by the light of the rising sun. One star is visible tonight, the first I have seen for two months. To be continued in the next Nome Nugget.

READY, SET, GO! — Twenty-four Anvil Mountain Run competitors took off on the 12.5-mile run from Nome's Front Street to the top of Anvil Mountain and back.

Anvil Mountain Run continues Nome's Fourth of July tradition

By Stephen Palmatier

What do you do on the Fourth of July? Go to a parade? Perhaps watch some fireworks? Well, for the 35th year, 24 people decided to start their holiday off with a run on a cold, foggy Fourth of July morning. And not just any run, the Anvil Mountain Run, a 12.5 mile run, up the mountain that gives runners a test both physically and mentally.

Being the second oldest race in Alaska, the Anvil Mountain Run has a lot of tradition and history and is one race that people want to see if they can accomplish.

"I had heard about this race before and was intrigued by the challenge knowing that it would be the farthest I have ever run in my life," said Ian Cogan, who finished 12th in the race.

Many runners like Cogan participated in the race for the first time while some had experienced the challenge before.

The winner of this year's run was 24-year-old Levi Daugherty, who completed the race in a blazing time of 1 hour, 20 minutes and 30 seconds. Daugherty, who previously won the Nome Gold Dust Dash in June during the Midnight Sun Festival had nothing but a wonderful experience with the race.

"It was awesome," said Daugherty. "It was really neat running on the mountain," said Daugherty.

Finishing in second place was 41-year-old Nils Hahn with a time of 1 hour, 20 minutes and 57 seconds, just 27 seconds behind Daugherty. In third place was 40-year-old Ted Moore, who finished with a time of 1 hour, 21 minutes and 2 seconds. Rounding out the top 5 were 57- and 56-year-olds Greg Finstad and Gary Knuefer.

This year's race also was not just a test of running for 12 miles, but rather mother nature had something to add to make it all the more interesting and challenging. The fog, which was perched on the entire mountain was as dense and thick as anything one could imagine, being able to see only 10 yards roughly in front of you.

"In my mind's eye, this is the worst fog we have ever had," said Leo Rasmussen, the coordinator of the Anvil Mountain Run. "I've never seen fog that thick on top of all four checkpoints," said Rasmussen.

The fog made the challenge that much greater for the runners, in particular coming down the face of the mountain at a rapid speed where they could not see where they were going.

"It made it so much harder," said Callie Kettner, who finished 9th in the race. "I got lost during the race and had no idea where I was going," said Kettner.

The first woman to finish the race was Naomi O'Neal, who finished in 8th place, while one of the racers did not finish the race because they missed the mountain road during the run. Also of note, 56-year-old David Olson, who finished in 19th place, completed his 28th consecutive Anvil Mountain Run.

The race, even with its excruciating challenges at times is something that people want to take part in every year and it looks to be going strong for years to come.

"We have always started the Fourth of July off with this, and it gets people's blood flowing for the day," said Rasmussen.

FIRST PLACE — Levi Daugherty won this year's Anvil Mountain Run with a time of 1 hour, 20 minutes and 30 seconds.

FAST RUNNERS — Naomi O'Neal, first woman to cross the finish line, joins third place finisher Ted Moore, winner Levi Daugherty and second place finisher Nils Hahn.

NJUS Water & Sewer Construction Project Update — July 2012

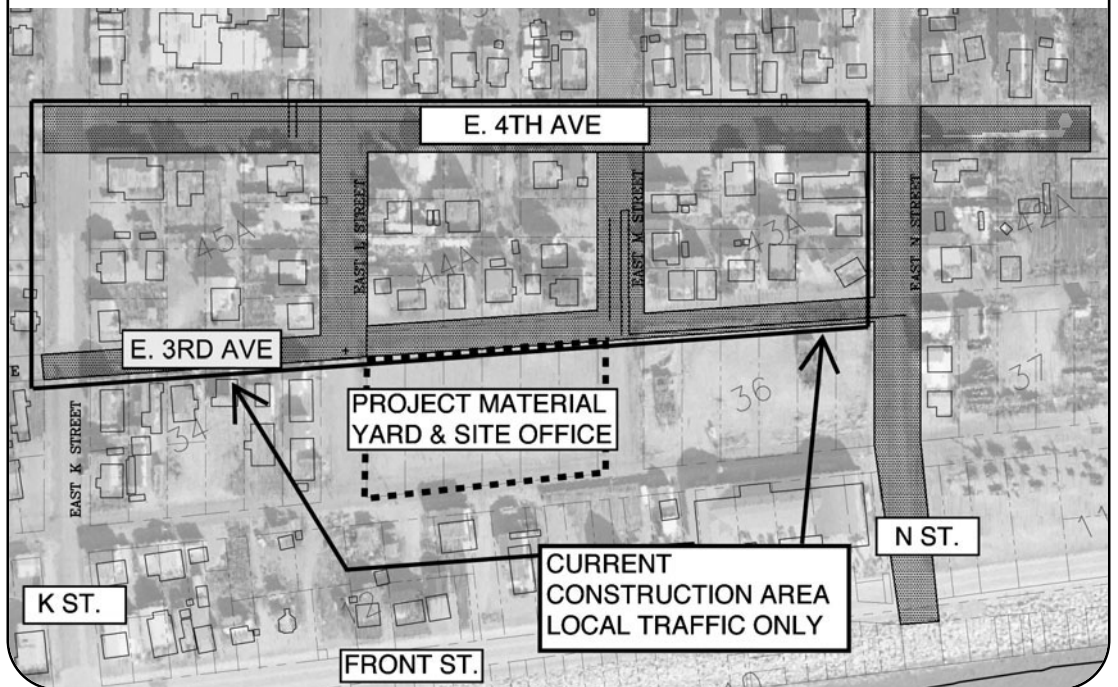

Construction is continuing to replace aging water and sewer mains and services in East Nome.

The project office and material storage yard are located on Block 35, between L & M Streets and 1st & 3rd Avenue (Thanks to Nome Eskimo Community for supporting this project by allowing use of their property). For safety reasons, please do not walk or drive through this area. Access is restricted to authorized construction personnel only.

The project area is shown on the map below. This area is closed to through-traffic. Access will be maintained for LOCAL TRAFFIC ONLY. Excavation crews will be continuing work at various locations within the project area. Effected homes have been connected to temporary water and sewer service.

For the next several weeks, excavation will proceed on 3rd & 4th Avenue toward N Street, and on L Street and M Street. As we complete work at the intersection of 3rd Ave & K Street, we will re-open K Street to regular traffic. By mid-July, we expect to begin excavating in N Street, working from Front Street northward. At that time, N Street will be restricted to local traffic only.

We appreciate the cooperation we have received from local residents. If you have any questions or concerns, please call our Project Superintendent, Jeff Juelson, at 443-6326.

Human remains found in Brevig Mission

By Diana Haecker

On Sunday, the Brevig Mission VPSO notified Alaska State Troopers that a Brevig Mission resident found human remains on the beach one mile east of Brevig. The remains were taken to Nome and then on to the State Medical Examiner's office. According to Trooper spokeswoman Megan Peters, the remains were unrecognizable and the State medical examiner is needed to identify the body.

Two men are still missing from the immediate area. Kyle Komok, 26, of Teller was reported missing after the historic Nov. 9, 2011 storm that hit the Bering Sea coast. Komok was last seen driving his yellow ATV on the spit as waves crashed over him, almost tipping him over. Teller Search and Rescue crews suspended their search on Nov. 10 after no trace of Komok was found.

The other missing man is Kenneth Lee, 22, who disappeared on Dec. 15, 2010 when he was snowmachining from Brevig Mission back home to Teller. Troopers, Teller and Brevig Mission Search and Rescue teams searched the known trails by snowmachine, but Lee was never found.

NEW PARK — The Nome Rotary Club last week received $20,000 from Original Productions, the production company behind the reality TV show "Bering Sea Gold," to help with expenses to develop East End Park. Rotarians, in concert with the City of Nome, plan to develop a nature walk around the pond for wildlife viewing and replacing old playground equipment.

SNAKE RIVER PARKING — Choppy waters kept gold dredgers from working on Saturday, July 7, making for crowded parking at the Nome Port and Harbor.

The Dock Walk

By Diana Haecker

Sea ice was sighted off the horizon last week, but that didn't hamper business being conducted at the Nome Port and Harbor. As the summer season is gearing up, Nome Harbormaster Joy Baker provides updates on what's happening at the Nome Port and Harbor in a weekly column.

Gray skies, some rain and turbulent waters have kept the bulk of the small dredge fleet from working for the most part of the Fourth of July week.

The fishing fleet with 17 registered vessels is definitely outnumbered by the gold dredging fleet this year.

Baker reports that 62 gold-dredges plus 23 dredging support vessels have registered to use the harbor and Snake River space. More dredges arrived on Sunday on a barge, plus there are dredges being worked on and assembled at the city pad upland from the port.

Last week, landing craft arrived and departed the Nome small boat harbor and port moving village freight.

The fishing fleet embark on trips out to Norton Sound as the red king crab summer harvest started on Sunday, July 1.

The Northland barge arrived right on schedule on Sunday with containers being offloaded onto the causeway.

In addition to barge traffic, fishermen and offshore gold miners going about their business, several camera crews with the Californian film company Original Productions work at the harbor filming another season of the reality show "Bering Sea Gold" to be aired at the Discovery Channel.

Change of Teller reindeer herd management questioned

By Amelia Cooper

In April, the Kawerak Reindeer Herders Association and the Bureau of Indian Affairs convened to reappoint the management of the Teller reindeer herd from Julia Lee to Tom Gray, and many of the people of Teller are wondering why they've been left out of the loop. "Why were we not notified that the management of the Teller reindeer herd was going to someone outside of Teller?" Norbert Kakaruk of Teller asked in a June 14 letter to the editor.

It seems the BIA has been out of the loop as well. According to BIA Alaska Regional Office Natural Resources Manager Keith Kahklen, the BIA hasn't received a tally on sales in the past three years. He doesn't even know how many reindeer are in the herd.

"The bureau requires numbers," Kahklen said. "There are reports that have to be filed," and the previous manager wasn't responding to requests for those reports, he said.

"We needed to do something to make sure that the herd was being taken care of," Kahklen said.

James Pushruck is glad that somebody has finally taken control of the herd. "The way things were going, we had people from Brevig, Teller, and Nome," he said, "people were just constantly butchering reindeer."

There are 10 inherited owners of the Teller herd. They are all descendants of the previous owner, John Kakaruk. "We contacted those owners and let them know what we're going to do," Kahklen said. "They don't know what's been sold in the past few years," he said, "they don't know what's been going on."

Many of the herd owners don't live in Alaska, according to Kahklen. "Some of them never been to Teller in their life," Teller resident Joe Garnie said.

not plan to relocate the reindeer. In fact, they do not plan to make any changes other than the new appointment, which isn't permanent, Kahklen said. "It's successful where it is," he said. "It's one of the most, if not the most, successful herd." According to Greg Finstad, the Teller reindeer herd is the largest herd on the Seward Peninsula. Finstad is a Reindeer Research Biologist and Finstad said, but the Teller herd hasn't been harvested to its economic potential.

Garnie said that the price of reindeer has been too high in recent years. "An animal that is home-grown and grazes for free is more expensive than beef or poultry or pork that has been imported," he said. "This is wrong."

"The management has been unstable," Finstad said. One constant that has allowed the herd to thrive is local initiative, he said. Garnie attributes the herd's success to Teller locals as well. "It is because Teller people take care of the reindeer today as we have done for more than 100 years," Garnie wrote. "Occasional caribou have wandered into the reindeer herd," Kakaruk wrote, "but since the herders were always on their toes, they got rid of the caribou."

"You gotta be with the reindeer," Garnie said, especially during calving season in the spring.

Whether the manager is from Teller or White Mountain is insignificant to reindeer research. "We will work with whoever the manager is to increase production," Finstad said. Though, Finstad added, "Local range resources should be used to improve quality of life for local communities." The people of Teller benefit from the herd, Kahklen said. "We'd like to see that continue."

Pushruck doesn't mind that the new manager isn't from Teller. "People didn't respect the last manager," he said. "What they need is some sort of authority here."

Rose Fosdick of the RHA declined to comment until she had an opportunity to speak with the Teller community.

"Everything's at a stalemate," Garnie said. Usually by this time of year, the Teller reindeer have been rounded up and de-antlered, but Garnie said that this July the reindeer still haven't been tended to.

The last couple of years have seen meager round-ups, according to Pushruck. "Last year they rounded up about 400," he said. "Not a very good job of corralling them and tagging them."

Right now the issue is "up in the air," Pushruck said. The BIA is tentatively planning to meet with the community, Kahklen said. "We're going to try to meet in Teller," he said, but they haven't yet set a time to meet. The RHA sent a letter to the community, but nobody has responded, they said. "I'm just too disgusted to deal with it," Garnie said.

Garnie and Kakaruk both think that the people of Teller should have a say in what is best for their community. "We need to start over with Teller people at the table," Garnie wrote.

"We took care of them, we did our job," Garnie said, "Give us a chance."

"We needed to do something to make sure that the herd was being taken care of."

— Keith Kahklen, BIA

"Finding out about something like this by reading it in the paper is an insult," Garnie wrote in a June 7 letter to the editor. The voice of Teller was not represented in making the decision to reappoint the herd. Pushruck argued that the Teller Traditional Council has never had a say in how the reindeer were managed.

Kahklen said that the BIA does head of the Reindeer Research Program at UAF.

The Reindeer Research Program works closely with Alaskan reindeer herds and herders to see that the reindeer are healthy and productive. Money generated from reindeer sales benefits the community. There is incredible value in the antler velvet and meat production of such a large herd,

Salmon: Superfood of the sea

Bob Lawrence, MD
Alaska Family Doctor

Salmon are arriving back into the region. Fish racks and smoke houses are adding their scents to the welcome aromas of summer, and freezers in western Alaska will soon be restocked with many varieties of salmon, arguably the world's healthiest meat.

Though it is easy for people in Alaska to take the presence of wild salmon in the summer for granted, the American Heart Association and the American Diabetes Association would say we are fortunate to have access to such healthy food. These organizations recommend fatty fish like salmon for the prevention of serious disease and the promotion of overall health.

Wild salmon provides an excellent source of protein. Salmon contains nearly the same amount of protein per serving as red meats with only half the amount of total fat and only a quarter of the amount of heart clogging saturated fats.

Salmon provides a natural source of healthy polyunsaturated fats called omega-3 fatty acids. Two forms of omega-3 fatty acids are found in salmon: docosahexaenoic acid (DHA) and eicosapentaenoic acid (EPA). Research shows that consumption of DHA and EPA reduces the risk of heart attack, heart arrhythmias and stroke.

In Northwestern Alaska, the Genetics of Coronary Artery Disease in Alaska Natives (GOCODAN) has shown that a diet rich in foods like salmon, which are high in omega-3 fatty acids, are associated with lower triglycerides and LDL (bad cholesterol) and a higher HDL (good cholesterol).

Salmon may also help people with autoimmune diseases. The omega-3 fatty acids found in salmon are known to have anti-inflammatory effects that reduce symptoms and need for extra medication in people with rheumatoid arthritis, ulcerative colitis, psoriasis, Crohn's disease, and lupus erythematosus.

In recent years, salmon has been highlighted as an important source of vitamin D3. People who live in the far north are at risk of vitamin D deficiency because dark winters and poor UVB radiation penetration of sunlight at northern latitudes inhibits the synthesis of vitamin D in the skin. Vitamin D deficiency has been associated with an increased risk for heart disease, osteoporosis, type I diabetes mellitus, certain cancers, multiple sclerosis, rheumatoid arthritis, and susceptibility to infectious disease.

Regular consumption of salmon can prevent vitamin D deficiency. One 3.5 oz serving of salmon contains between 600-1000 units of vitamin D3. Experts recommend 400-1000 units of vitamin D3 daily for children over age 1, and 800-1000 units of vitamin D3 daily from all sources for otherwise healthy adults. Many doctors in Alaska recommend higher doses for people with vitamin D deficiency.

Wild salmon also provides essential minerals like selenium and vitamin E, antioxidants that help detoxify the body of waste products and improve the immune system, and may also protect against prostate cancer.

Some people are wary of possible toxins found in salmon. Various studies show that salmon meat contains low levels of mercury and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) that once ingested can remain in the body for years. This concerns some nutritionists who discourage the consumption of fatty fish, especially in pregnant women and young children. However, the extent to which these toxins cause disease in people who eat salmon regularly is unknown, and all experts agree that population subgroups, like rural Alaskans, who once relied exclusively on a salmon-rich diet suffer negative consequences in overall nutrition if they decrease their intake of marine foods.

Therefore, the American Heart Association states that the risk of not eating salmon far outweighs any risk from accumulating toxins from eating fish. The Food and Drug Administration currently recommends limiting salmon consumption to 12 ounces (3-4 servings) of fish weekly for pregnant women and children. Generally, adults may safely consume 14 ounces or more of salmon weekly.

The far greater risk to Alaskans is not potential toxins in fish but the ever looming potential for a loss of healthy salmon runs.

Studies of the Karuk tribes of Northern California show a clear link between a decline in access to salmon, and a decline in the health of a people.

Salmon is one of the healthiest meats in the world. It must be recognized that salmon is more than a "net gain" for the economics of the region; it is the very foundation of health for rural Alaskans.

Glorious Fourth of July draws crowd to Front Street

By Diana Haecker

Fog hung low over Nome early July 4th. The wet, cold bone-chilling morning didn't seem inviting for a run up Anvil Mountain, shrouded in low clouds, but 24 runners and their cheerleaders made it out of bed in time and stood ready to rock'n roll at the 35th Anvil Mountain Run start line on Front Street. Organizer Leo Rasmussen noted that no runner was younger than 18 and older than 60, meaning that he could pack up and store away his trophies for those age categories. At 8 o'clock the runners took off to conquer not the mountain but the fog. Even those with knowledge of the mountain's terrain got lost in the gray-out as visibility was near zero. While most found their way back to Nome, a visitor missed the turnoff to the top of Anvil and kept going towards Dexter but was retrieved by friends. Rasmussen made a point in congratulating her to be the second person ever to continue on to Dexter in this particular run.

Despite the visibility handicap, the top runners finished the race in respectable times: See Anvil Mt. Run story.

As soon as all runners were accounted for, the miracle happened. The clouds parted and the sun came through, setting the stage for the annual Nome Fourth of July parade, followed by the presentation of the colors by the Nome Boy Scout troop. Nome Mayor Denise Michels welcomed the crowd and Harbormaster Joy Baker sang the National Anthem as well as the Alaska Flag Song. After the blessing, Michels welcomed special guest, film producer Thom Beers with Original Productions who is currently filming the second season of the reality TV show "Bering Sea Gold" in Nome. Beers handed a $20,000 check to Julie Yoder Elmore with the Nome Rotary Club for their project to enhance and beautify East End Park.

After the formalities were over, Michels said, "Let the games begin."

For the next three hours, hundreds and hundreds of Nomeites participated in all kinds of street games, foot and bike races, egg races, slow bike races, gunnysack, wheelbarrow, three-legged and shoe scramble races. Toddlers, some eager to run into their parent's arm, some disoriented by the cheering crowd closing in on them, were a great source of entertainment. Elder Dan Karmun participated in the egg race and safely carried an egg all the way to the finish line at City Hall, where a big cheer greeted him. Teenagers and Nome-grown "kids" returning for the summer from college showed that they didn't lose their competitive spirit and gave it all at the footraces. Not to forget the Herbie Locke Memorial pie-eating contest that left some participants feeling a bit queasy after the rapid pie consumption. The sun smiled on the activities while a light breeze cooled participants down. As tradition dictates, the street games ended with the rope-pull contest East against West, with West being victorious.

Then the whole party moved up Bering Street, where the Nome Volunteer Fire Department held the annual ice cream feed and raffled off bikes. While the day started with clouds hanging low, it ended with brilliant sunshine befitting the occasion of the day, to celebrate the independence of this nation.

Obituary

Jacob Ahwinona

Jacob Ahwinona was born on April 10, 1923 at Death Valley on the Fish River where his grandparents lived. He was born premature and could fit into one's hand. His grandma would wrap him up in rabbit skins, and place him on the wood stove to keep him warm.

Jacob moved to Nome from White Mountain at the age of 17 to work for the Mining Company. He told a white lie about his age to work. He had lived in Nome since then. Jacob worked several jobs to support a family. The job that he enjoyed the most was with Nome Public Schools as the building maintenance man. He loved interacting with the kids everyday, all were special to him. He also loved it because he was working with his hands and loved helping others. He retired June 1, 1990.

Even in retirement Jacob remained very busy, working with the Native Corporation Boards, traveling to meetings for what seemed to be too many days for his family.

Jacob and Hannah Ahwinona were married February 20, 1950 in Unalakleet, the church was so packed that there were people even standing outside. Together they raised four of their children and one grandson. Freddie, Cynthia, Debra, Dora and grandson David. Also their nieces, nephews and their friends' kids. Their house was always filled with love, good food, a good story and laughter. Throughout his life he has made many great friends.

Jacob believed that the children are our future, and they deserved a good education, both in the western and Inupiaq ways. He believed education should include the knowledge of traditional values: knowledge of hunting, trapping, fishing, and gathering traditional foods. This is where the real education started. He and

Hannah also taught their children to work hard and finish what they start. "If you're not hurtin' you did not work." — Jacob Ahwinona

Jacob leaves his children Cynthia, Debra her husband Raymond Sr. and their children Andrew, Rachel, Florence, and Raymond Jr. Their grandchildren Fred Jacob, Henry and Cain, Dora and Greg and their children Leah, Kristian and Karlin, sister-in-law Laura Paniptchuck and sister Arlene Soxie.

Jacob joins his wife Hannah of 56 years, his parents Joshua and Nora, sisters Helen Carlson, Mary and Ethel Ahwinona, brothers Fred, Carl, and Sam Ahwinona, his grandparents, nieces, nephews and many cousins.

Jacob started everyday with a prayer and a positive attitude. His many stories, words of advise, praise and comfort will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

"You are never alone. They say you will never be lonely from the start of each day to it's end if you walk life's path with God in your heart, and side by side with a friend."

— Author unknown. This passage was handwritten by Jacob, and was close to him so it could be seen everyday.

Scripture: Mark 5:21-43

Have you ever had one of those days when things did not go quite as you had planned? You wake up, go about your routine and all of a sudden, you get interrupted by something that demands your immediate attention. Recently, a friend of mine in Michigan was riding her horse and her horse freaked out, resulting in my friend breaking her ankle and having to have emergency surgery! This was not really how she wanted to spend her Saturday.

Mark 5:21-43 tells of how Jesus was interrupted several times one day. The day starts out with a big crowd of people gathered around Jesus, perhaps hoping to hear Jesus' teaching or to be healed. Then a man named Jairus, a Synagogue leader and very influential man in the community, falls at Jesus' feet, begging him to come heal his daughter. Jesus travels with Jairus to his home, closely followed by the crowd.

On the way a woman who has been bleeding for 12 years reaches out to Jesus, touches the hem of his garment and is instantly healed. Doctors had been unable to heal her, even when she spent all her money. Additionally, her community shunned her, considering her unclean because of her bleeding. She used all the strength and faith she could muster to even appear in public. Right away Jesus stopped, sensing that power had left him. He asks, "Who touched me?"

The woman fell to Jesus' feet just as Jairus had earlier, admitting to Jesus that it was she who touched him. Instead of being harsh, Jesus had compassion. He called her "daughter" and told her to go in peace and that her faith had made her well.

After that Jesus continued to Jairus' house. In the meantime, Jairus' daughter has died and messengers came to Jesus not to bother coming. It was a sad time; people had already begun the grieving process. Yet, Jesus continued on to Jairus' house and into the girl's room. With her parents and three disciples at his side, Jesus told the girl to get up from her sleep and she did.

One of the beautiful messages we can take from this story is that Jesus has time for each one of us, no matter what our status is in society. People in positions of power, like Jairus, need Jesus. People considered the lowliest in society, like the woman, need Jesus. People who fit somewhere in between need Jesus. We are all broken in some way and in need of healing. God through the Holy Spirit is with us, ready to heal us, sometimes in expected ways and other times in unexpected ways. Like Jairus and the woman, we can reach out in faith and trust that God will heal even the deepest hurts in our body, mind, and spirit. From what do you need healing?

CHIEF'S NOTES:

Although the City allows for ATV operation on CITY owned streets, there is no provision for ATV operation on STATE roadways which include Front Street, Bering Street, Seppala Drive, Nome-Beltz Highway, and Center Creek Road. If you are operating an ATV on any STATE roadway, you will be subject to being stopped by a law enforcement officer. If at all possible, choose a route that does not travel on these roadways or travel to the far right side of the road at a speed not to exceed 20 miles per hour. Passengers are not allowed to ride on ATVs unless the ATV is specifically designed for passengers to ride. There has been an increase in ATVs violating this provision and traveling at unsafe speeds. Voluntary compliance will reduce the likelihood of official contact.

Also, please be reminded that any operator of an ATV on any roadway must be at least 16 years old AND have a valid driver's license. Helmet use is strongly encouraged to reduce the risk of injury.

Finally, please do not engage in open burning within the City limits as open fires present a true danger to the entire community. Nome has an extensive history of significant fires that have destroyed a large portion of the City on more than one occasion. With structures built closely together, an ample supply of combustible material; and a wind that is always present to fan any flame; open burning is a true threat to public safety. If NPD is advised of an open fire within the City, we will work with the Fire Department to insure that the fire is extinguished expeditiously. The person responsible may be subject to paying for the cost of response. Once again, we ask for your voluntary compliance in keeping the community safe.

The Nome Police Department encourages all citizens and visitors to engage in healthy and fun activities while keeping everyone safe. Please help us achieve this goal. If you have questions, need assistance or have information about any crime, please call us at 443-5262.

Have fun, be safe, and enjoy the summer.

BELMONT POINT GOLD FEVER— Rough waters outside the Nome Port and Harbor kept the majority of gold dredges parked at Belmont Point, on Saturday, July 7.

• City Council

good-sized collection. A lot of it people haven't seen. How this is all put together is very important. Not only is the preservation of each collection—City and Kawerak important, there's a chain of custody going on. We're trying to get donors to give us more. They want to be assured their stuff is going to go [to the proper place], for better term, chain of custody, we have to have an agreement on how we're going to mix those two collections" Lean said.

"Boy, I hope we do this right! I hope we leave the [curator work] to the professionals. This is a museum, not an office building. Let's make sure we use this for what we told the grantor we would use it for," he said.

John K. Handeland, member of the Museum and Library Commission conceded that the two museums could live together perhaps, but Kawerak should not use square footage for office space.

Commission member Cussy Kauer also agreed, "opposed to any more office space going into that building."

Some making comment agreed with leasing to Kawerak, but protested using museum space for offices.

Councilman Stan Andersen, who voted later in favor of letting Kawerak into the museum building, extracted a verbal agreement from Melanie Bahnke that Kawerak would commit to a long-term lease so the City would not hold the bag on a larger space to accommodate Kawerak's uses.

Bahnke agreed, adding that Kawerak was interested in leasing space from "your existing plan, not to have you build a bigger building."

In other business the Council:

- Extended Nome Police Chief John J Papisodora's employment contract by three years, with annual salary of $101,623 for the first year and a 3 percent increase for each of years two and three. Papisodora will accrue 20 hours of personal leave per month and may drive his City vehicle inside and outside of town and keep the vehicle within City limits overnight.

- Heard Mike Benchoff during citizen comments ask for help understanding why he was being required to remove his tug boat-dredge conversion vessel from the harbor, a request he saw as unequal application of rules to his case and an application that ran afoul of the 14th amendment equal protection clause of the U.S. constitution. He also questioned the threat of his boat being deemed derelict while he was paying storage. He claimed to have paid port fees in the amount of $20,000. He said he was willing to litigate against the City. Miner Jim Hanson also spoke on Benchoff's behalf. City administrators and councilmembers did not comment, except for Mayor Denise Michels who said the Rustler had leaked oil in the past. It had not, Benchoff responded, except when it rolled over during a fall storm. The Port of Nome had given Benchoff a latest deadline of July 9 to move his vessel or possibly be barred from port use.

- Passed a resolution supporting the Alaska Coastal Management Initiative to come before voters that would give both state and local governments and coastal districts a voice in development of coastal waters and lands and provide a framework for mitigating disputes among competing uses and demands for coastal resources. The Coastal Management Program could bring local knowledge into play on development decisions but would not allow local veto of projects." When we were part of the Coastal Zone Management Program, we had a good grasp of what was going on within City limits," Charlie Lean said.

- Approved issuing a utility revenue anticipation note capped at $8.06 million for buying diesel fuel for the Nome Joint Utility System's generators. NJUS Manager John Handeland estimated diesel fuel to run ballpark about $3.10 per gallon, or closer to $3 than $4, he said.

- Approved a local match of $267,513 for an agreement on Port Road improvements among City of Nome, state Dept of Transportation and Public Facilities. Port Road continually sustains heavy loads of gravel and container truck traffic throughout the shipping season and heavy use year around. It needs widening, paving, drainage maintenance, sidewalks and other safety improvements.

- Approved a modification of the City's land purchase from Alaska Gold Co. for Nome's new Snake River Bridge for a total of $18,000. The State of Alaska would pay the additional $3,000 incurred by the revision.

- Heard a citizen express concern that the Animal Shelter has closed, leaving stray and escaped animals to uncertain disposal, even a "nickel's worth" of lead. The citizen also expressed concern that the shelter has been moved from Port Road to clear the way for construction to a spot by the Nome Public Safety Building where barking dogs likely annoyed police staff. Requests for proposals to run the shelter went unanswered, Josie Bahnke, city manager, said.

- Joined Knodel in commending Amy Smithheiser for almost 10 years' service as animal shelter and control operator. Smithheiser's contract expired July 10. She did not renew. Bahnke said the City administration was looking at ways to provide temporary service using volunteers.

- Heard City Manager Josie Bahnke report that demolition of the Wien Building, eyesore on Front Street, would begin this week. Knodel pressed for a deadline for completion, and not August 2013.

- Experienced a moment of silence when Knodel asked whom citizens should call as regards animal issues until the shelter opened again—Bahnke, city manager, or Nome Police Dept. Bahnke and Chief Papisodora pointed at each other.

DRILL BABY DRILL— Hank Ashton with Kinnan Engineering, Inc. of Camas Valley, Oregon and his son Isaac, right, are part of the crew directionally drilling a 24-inch diameter water and sewer line underneath the Snake River to Belmont Point to get ready for the new Snake River bridge.

34, most of the emergency repair is being done by fixing the road after storm damage. Workers are finished with maintenance repairs and are now reconstructing damaged road sections, placing riprap to beef up the beach shoulder, hauling more gravel in and surfacing the road with dust palliative. This project is supposed to be completed by October 31.

Also on the Nome-Council Highway, Pro-West Contractors began to work between mile 4 and mile 16 on filling the cuts between Farley's Camp and Cape Nome. DOT construction engineer Lisa Coyle said that the road will be elevated and shifted to the north, and that there will be a ditch to the South. The cuts will not be completely filled, but the resulting road height will be about the same as the bank it is built against, she said. The project includes culvert installation and new surfacing. The majority of the earthwork is going to be done next summer.

As for all construction sites, the DOT asks motorists to expect single lane road sections and delays. The project comes at a cost of almost $12 million and slated to be completed October 1,

Yet further down the road between mile 62 and 73, contractor Phillips and Jordan are working on resurfacing the road, to improve the drainage. The project started last year and is expected to be done by the end of July.

The Bonanza Channel Bridge is slated to get new paint and Pro-West Contractors are working on the $1.3 million project. DOT's Lisa Coyle said that as of Saturday, half of the scaffolding under the bridge is in place. She said that a maximum clearance of six feet can be expected and that at high tide boats—even without windshields—are not able to safely travel under the bridge. During working hours, there will only be a single lane on the bridge and motorists are asked to go slow. Construction is scheduled to begin July 16.

Evan Booth, DOT superintendent for the Northern Region said that road repairs are scheduled between mile 30 and mile 40 of the Teller Highway. Booth said that a special DOT bridge crew is coming up to Nome this summer to perform redecking and repair of several bridges on the Teller and Kougak roads, including redecking the Snake River bridge on the Teller highway. The DOT is also replacing and repairing signs on all Nome roads and the process will be ongoing through this summer.

At the Nome airport, the DOT is this year fixing a dip at the west end of the main runway. Next year, airport safety area improvements are scheduled to begin.

In Kotzebue, the safety improvements are in the last phases and this year's construction began July 8. Last season a large section of the runway was excavated and poor material replaced with an engineered fill. Two inches of pavement was left for the winter surface. Another two inches will be placed this season. Runway closures are scheduled for July 16 through 17 and July 30 through 31. During those dates, jet service won't be available, said Lisa Coyle, but provisions were made for medevacs in emergencies.

In town, Nome Joint Utilities continue the replacement of water and sewer mains at Fourth Avenue between K and N Street.
