Nome mayor appointed to AK Arctic Policy Commission

By Diana Haecker

Heeding the recommendations of the Northern Waters Task Force, the Alaska State Legislature in its last session created an Alaska Arctic commission that is supposed to develop recommendations for an official Alaska Arctic policy. Last week Senate President Gary Stevens and House Speaker Mike Chenault announced their appointments to the 20-member commission and those include Nome Mayor Denise Michels. Michels secured the seat for a coastal community representative.

Michels said in an email exchange with The Nome Nugget that she is very honored to be appointed to the Alaska Arctic Policy Commission.

"As the Coastal Community representative on the Alaska Arctic Policy

Commission, I will work with former Rep. Reggie Joule and Unalaska City Manager Chris Hladick and disseminate information through our membership with the Alaska Municipal League and through regional non-profits such as Kawerak so coastal communities are fully engaged in the public process," Michels wrote. "I addressed the Kawerak and NSHC joint board meeting last week on the increase in Arctic shipping."

During the joint boarding meeting, the two entities passed a joint resolution that urged Congress to ratify the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.

Michels said that subsistence and food security are very important for coastal communities that depend on marine mammals and the fisheries for commercial fishing.

Michels said that she heard concerns during the joint board meeting about the need to balance the health of the ecosystem with responsible resource development as marine mammals and fish in their seasonal migration pass through the Bering Strait. She also heard the desire to be

Planning panel to set up annexation study

By Sandra L. Medearis

The Nome Planning Commission has charged the City's contract planner with looking farther into the pros and cons of drawing new city limits around outlying areas by annexation.

The work would look into benefits for both sides of the current line as well as drawbacks for the "ins" and "outs" should annexation—a several year process—occur. The study will concentrate on costs and benefits related to utility service delivery, police protection and fire calls.

"This is a decision to research annexation. This is not on the decision to annex," NPC President Tom Sparks made perfectly clear.

City Manager Josie Bahnke handed the commission the job to develop a work plan on how to proceed with researching the potential annexation effort, identified as a high priority in Nome's Comprehensive Plan 2020 approved by Nome Common Council earlier this year.

Among other issues, Eileen Bechtol of Bechtol Associates will look into current availability and cost of services in and outside the City's boundaries: fire calls, ambulance services, utilities, police protection, Nome Police Dept. and Alaska State Trooper services.

In other business the panel continued to look at ways to encourage code compliance. One program getting a close look would divide the town into grids by map, pull grid numbers out of

AGC settles with EPA over water violations

By Diana Haecker

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency last week said that Alaska Gold Company has paid a $177,500 penalty for alleged Clean Water Act violations at the Rock Creek mine. The EPA alleges that the AGC violated permit requirements for controlling storm water pollution during construction activities between May 2009 and September 2011.

The EPA said in a press release that AGC has taken corrective actions to comply by submitting and implementing an upgraded Stormwater Pollution Prevention Plan and reclaiming a portion of the area disturbed during construction.

"Polluted runoff can damage important habitat and harm Alaska's natural resources," said Jeff Ken Knight, manager of EPA's Clean Water Act Compliance Unit in Seattle. "Companies need to plan for and manage stormwater runoff from their construction sites, and investing the time and energy upfront is always better than repairing damage and paying penalties later."

According to the EPA, they and the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation performed six inspections at the mine between June 2009 and September 2011, which revealed numerous violations of federal construction stormwater regulations.

Infractions included drainage channels without rock armoring, creating bank erosion, and undercutting and sloughing of channel sidewalls. Inspectors also noted areas where proper erosion control measures were not installed or maintained, which caused the discharge of large amounts of silt and sediment into Rock Creek and Lindblom Creek.

ACG also failed to create, maintain, and implement an adequate

Letters

To the Editor,

A letter recently circulated to media outlets and several other recipients accuses NSEDC once again of a laundry list of misdeeds.

While Tim Smith's continued rants are tiresome and disappointing, they are not totally unexpected. It's also no surprise that his conclusions are either outright wrong or based on a twisting of the facts.

You will likely hear from Smith this week telling you that NSEDC is trying to influence our upcoming member representative election by issuing a Community Benefit Share—a program that NSEDC has operated since 1999. Any allegation that NSEDC is using the Community Benefit Share to influence member community representative elections is absurd. Programs like the Community Benefit Share are exactly what NSEDC is supposed to do, giving communities the means to fill gaps in their resources and infrastructure. Sharing the profits of a strong financial year with our communities, rather than simply socking it away in the stock market, was a decision made with unanimous approval by NSEDC's board, and we are nothing but proud of the board's commitment to all NSEDC communities and youth.

Elections occur for NSEDC board seats every year in October, just as NSEDC annually holds a second quarter meeting in late July or early August, at which time the board may approve various projects that benefit member communities and residents. It is simply what NSEDC does in the goal of improving conditions for our member communities and their residents.

Smith's evidence-of-the-week that NSEDC is up to no good is our letter to municipalities informing them of the Community Benefit Share and asking about their planned use of the funds. For the past 12 years this letter has included a date by which NSEDC asks to hear back from municipalities. This date is included to help move the process forward and is not a hard deadline.

The City of Nome, as well as other municipalities, have been informed that they are not required to respond to NSEDC by announced date of Sept. 28. Many communities have in the past submitted their notifications well past the requested date, which never results in penalty or reduction in funds. Municipalities do not face any hard deadline for the program, and any unused funds are rolled forward for future use.

Smith also comes to the shocking conclusion that the board of directors did not authorize the date included in the letter. But what he doesn't tell you is that this is nothing new—NSEDC's staff has included a date in these letters for the past 12 years.

NSEDC maintains a staff to administer our programs. While Smith is trying to tell you this is wrong, common sense should tell you that this is simply how companies governed by boards work. The board gives the major approvals and direction, staff handles the minutia. Deciding which date to include in a letter falls well within normal administrative duties, especially when that date has no bearing on a community's eligibility, receipt or use of program funds. What will be Smith's next revelation? Perhaps he will reveal the big secret that our staff answers the phones without prior board approval.

For two decades, NSEDC has initiated and conducted a wide variety of benefit and grant programs that occur throughout the year. We find it curious that Mr. Smith only acknowledges NSEDC's benefit programs right before an election. Makes you wonder just who is trying to influence its outcome.

bulk fuel program. Can you guess which community residents don't get the benefit of this CDQ program subsidy? It's the one with 41 percent of the people in the region — Nome.

I have asked Janis Ivanoff many times why people who live in Nome are left out in the cold. Her answers don't make any sense to me and miss the point — something about NJUS and the City of Nome not wanting to participate in NSEDC's program. I'm not interested in getting cheaper fuel for NJUS or the city, I want to see lower prices when I gas up my vehicle or top off my heating fuel tank — like everybody else in the region.

Another reason I hear is that Nome people are so well off we can afford to pay higher prices for fuel. That doesn't hold much water either. The U.S. Census found that more people live in poverty in Nome than in any of the other Norton Sound community except Gambell and Savoonga. It's true that there are people in Nome who make a lot of money but that doesn't do much for the ones who don't and who still have to heat their homes and gas up their vehicles at these inflated prices.

The real reason that Nome is left out of NSEDC's fuel program comes down to our lack of effective representation on the NSEDC board of directors. I regularly attend NSEDC board meetings; I'm about the only person not on the NSEDC payroll who does. I have never heard Nome's representative on the NSEDC board speak up for our right to get the benefits of the fuel program. He doesn't speak up for Nome about much of anything.

Every three years we have an opportunity to elect a person to represent us on the NSEDC board of directors. If you take a look at your fuel bills, I think you will see that it is time for a change.

It Still Lives

Someone please drive a stake through its roof. The Wien Building doesn't die. It's been on the City of Nome's abatement list forever and ever. It's by far the ugliest feature on Front Street. It is the wart that meets the eyes of visitors and greets folks from around the world on the Nome web cam. It recently slithered off the abatement list for only one dollar.

The Wien Building tells the world that Nome has no civic pride. It says that we can't clean up our mess and since it sits directly across the street from City Hall it makes one wonder how city employees can justify the disgraceful, dilapidated structure in the prime real estate section of downtown Nome.

City Council needs to get off its duff, give Woody back his buck and insist that the structure is abated now, not next St. Swinthen's Day, but now. —N.L.M. —

To the Editor,

It costs $181 to fill up my truck's gas tank. Filling a 500-gallon heating fuel tank with oil costs $3,355. Those are amazing prices for fuel and it takes a lot of fuel to live in Nome.

NSEDC subsidizes gas and heating fuel for residents of 14 of its 15 member communities through its

A Look at the Past: The 1900 Nome Gold Rush

By Laura Samuelson, Director,
Carrie M. McLain Memorial Museum

The Carrie M. McLain Memorial Museum continues the look back at the 1900 Nome Gold Rush with more perspective from Wilfred A. McDaniel Sr. Herewith are more excerpts from “Alaska Beckons” written by Wilfred in 1943. His love of Nome is quite evident in that his experiences in this exquisite land are still fresh in his mind four decades later. Last week Wilfred concluded his eye witness account of the treacherous and unpredicted Bering Sea storm of September 9 and 10, 1900. This week, armed with the essential gold miner’s trait of optimism, the boys make an asset out of the torrential rains.

ALASKA BECKONS
By Wilfred A. McDaniel Sr.
Following the destructive period of the September 9th and 10th storm, heavy rains fell, and the rough sea prevented any reconstructive work to be started. High tides still prevailed, and this condition would have made impossible any attempt to mine the lower ground, had we been equipped to do so. The heavy rains created a considerable flow of water in many of the draws and gullies draining the tundra, affording an abundance of water for sluicing, during the run-off. This we decided to make use of, and by digging a system of ditches the water was concentrated. Sluice-boxes were set up on the upper part of the beach and work was resumed. While the pay was not as good in this portion of the beach, the fact that the water cost nothing partly off-set the difference, and furthermore, there was no loss of time which would have resulted, had we waited for fair weather in which to get engine and pump in operation. After a few days the rain gradually decreased, with a corresponding falling off in the water from the tundra, and after about ten days of sluicing we were forced to abandon the ditch supply, it becoming inadequate.

As September advanced, calm weather came, clear and colder, but promising a few weeks more of moderate weather, during what remained of the short open season. The engine had received no damage. A thorough overhauling and cleaning to remove sand and grit, and it was soon put in running order. Pump foundations were leveled, suction pipe attached and sluicing soon went on as before. However, our troubles were not yet over. From all the varied difficulties experienced so far, nothing now seemed possible to happen which had not already occurred and which, in a measure, we were prepared for. But Alaska has her joking moods too, as we were soon to experience!

ROCK CREEK MINE (top)— The future of the Rock Creek mine and mill complex is still undecided as BSNC officials weigh their options.

ROCK CREEK (right)— EPA regulators said that AGC have implemented corrective measures as shown here with erosion control around a culvert funneling Rock Creek underneath the new Glacier Creek Road.

Stormwater Pollution Prevention Plan that met all requirements of the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System General Permit for Storm Water Discharges from Construction Activities.

This was not the first time that AGC was charged with storm water run off violations. EPA Region 10's Enforcement and Compliance Program officials noted that there was a previous enforcement action against AGC for alleged violations of the Clean Water Act up to September 2008. That action was resolved in April 2009 with a consent decree and payment of a penalty.

The Rock Creek mine had been non-operational and in maintenance and care status since November 2008. Alaska Gold Company, subsidiary of Canadian NovaGold Resources, is the owner of the mine. After the NovaGold board of directors decided to shutter the mine for good, AGC started to implement a two-phase reclamation plan this year. NovaGold Vice President, Environment, Health, Safety and Sustainability Ron Rimelman said in an email exchange with The Nome Nugget that they are nearing completion of Phase I closure activities at Rock Creek. "The tailings facility dam breach was completed earlier this year and we have now eliminated all of the sources of water that required ongoing water treatment," Rimelman wrote. "As a result, the water treatment plant has been shut down. We expect to finish all Phase I work within the next few weeks and we only have a few remaining Alaska Gold Corporation employees at the mine. We have not begun Phase II activities."

The regional Native Corporation, Bering Straits Native Corporation, has been in negotiations with AGC to buy the Rock Creek mine and also the remainder of the Alaska Gold Company. BSNC CEO and President Gail Schubert told the Nugget that BSNC and Novagold are continuing to move towards an agreement, which will transfer the Rock Creek Mine and other Alaska Gold Company assets to BSNC. "It is anticipated that the agreement will be finalized by the end of November," Schubert said.

As for the future of the mine, it is yet not certain which route BSNC will take. "We are currently examining two possible futures for Rock Creek: reclamation of the mine, or a restart of milling operations. If the mine is restarted, it will be on a much smaller scale than before. Our focus is whether the mine can be operated profitably, considering the best environmental practices available to industry. If these objectives cannot be achieved, then we will move forward with reclamation of Rock Creek," Schubert wrote.

a hat, and concentrate enforcement for cleanup, abandoned cars, abatement of shacks and violations of building codes.

"Issues need to be addressed. We can start with taking small bites of the elephant," Commissioner Randy Romanesko said.

The planning commission has been looking, as has the Nome Common Council, for ways to put teeth in City codes that are being ignored. Both are considering to give the public works director and building inspector the power to issue citations and assess fines to abate violations of building permits, moving permits, fill permits and zoning violations.

The Nome Common Council on Monday adopted an ordinance to allow traffic fines and forfeitures to flow into the City's treasury. The commission agreed with the measure and voiced a desire to look at adding the building codes to the violations.

"We could make it hurt a little bit but not take them to the cleaners," Sparks said.

"It has to be enough to get their attention," Commissioner Charlie Weiss added.

In other business the commission learned that Nome Eskimo Community has withdrawn a variance request for 300 McLain Lane where the housing department wished to build a new home for Della Walluk. The small lot presents setback issues and encroachment into the platted utility easement. Nome Joint Utility System did not approve the encroachment for safety reasons.

"While it appears there would be 10 -12-foot clearance between the primary power wire and the roof, communications utilities are also permitted on the power poles and there would be significantly less clearance," wrote John Handeland, NJUS manager. "In the event of a fire, if the burning structure was directly underneath high voltage lines, flames would more likely impact the utilities and endanger fire fighters."

NEC will go back to the drawing board to find another solution.

If you fund a School District for iPads

By Lori Head

"This really happened over the summer," explained Robin Johnson, Technology Director of Nome Public Schools (NPS). The Native Village of Council partnered with NPS on a three-year library literacy grant to provide kids with more books. Then the City of Nome added another $40K and the iPads were ordered.

What ensued might be likened to the 1985 children's story, "If You Give a Mouse a Cookie," because, according to the story, once a mouse is given a cookie he is going to want some milk. In the case of iPads, the "milk" was making sure NPS had the infrastructure to support the iPads. The wireless network was replaced two years ago at Beltz and just this summer at Nome Elementary.

Once the mouse has the milk, he might ask for a straw. Where should the iPads go? It was decided NPS would be one of the first school districts in Alaska to go 1:1 with the junior high students committing 90 of the iPads. The remaining 110 iPads would be shared by Elementary and Preschool (Head Start) students. Another 25 iPads would be used by instructors.

After finishing the milk, the mouse will ask for a napkin. In iPad terms, this was asking the teachers to come back to school, without being a part of the decision over the summer, and embracing the extra time and work involved learning about the iPads, and then seeking methods and applications to integrate the technology in the classroom. Johnson has been impressed with the teachers' willingness to accept this additional work. During a recent training, the instructor, who was not from the area, commented that Nome teachers were enthusiastic and technologically savvy, according to Johnson.

After using the napkin, the mouse will probably look in the mirror and see if he has a milk mustache. NPS's first look in the mirror probably came during the Junior High Back to School Night, which was well attended by students, parents, grandparents and staff. Students were engaged and eager to share what they had learned from an Apple Trainer who had spent time teaching them about their new iPads.

Robin Johnson has been with the district for 22 years – 12 years with technology. She describes herself as the "big picture" person in the department. System Administrator Jacob Phillips is the "makes it work" person who "speaks the language" and understands, supports and maintains the innards of computers, systems and networks. Justin Heinrich, Integration, brings it to the classroom, helping teachers and students put all the pieces together and modeling how it works. Johnson has the utmost respect and appreciation for both Phillips and Heinrich, summing it up with, "They're incredible." Collectively, their job is accomplished so quietly, in the background, that students and staff may not notice all the technology in the buildings – at least while it is running well.

The iPads each come with a dictionary, camera and calculator, among other tools. Johnson explained that a teacher can direct students to sites, like, www.gutenberg.org, where they can download free eBooks into their virtual, brown bookshelves, and then flip through the book's pages, reading, highlighting, taking notes or clicking words to hear pronunciations or see definitions.

Also installed on the iPads is an application called GarageBand. Students can record themselves reading a paragraph or page with this application, and then read it again. Each reading is measured by a bar, or "speaking bubble," according to the length of time and volume, showing readers when they are loud, quiet or pausing. The student can then compare the bars and if the second bar (from the second reading) is shorter than the first reading bar, and/or has fewer breaks from pauses in reading, it is an immediate, visual measurement of improved reading fluency.

Junior High students have also been working with QR codes. These are two-dimensional bar codes that look like squares of black and white designs. However, to the trained, iPad-familiar student they contain information such as the daily assignment or a website address after it is scanned. The teacher can generate these QR codes easily with a free application installed on their iPad.

Presentations can also be projected via iPad to the front of the class. Teachers have the ability to walk around the class, interacting, and then transfer control to students, who can show their work to all the class via their iPad. Students can also share a Keynote presentation, Apple's version of PowerPoint, from their desk or in front of the classroom. Gone are the wasted minutes of waiting during the transitions of student presentations.

Bill Gates once said, "Technology is just a tool. In terms of getting the kids working together and motivating them, the teacher is most important." Add to that a dedicated, highly qualified technology department and Nome Public Schools is on target for technologically literate students – or in other words, if you give a mouse in Nome Public Schools a cookie, he may ask for an iPad!

Live CANDIDATE FORUM

for all Municipal Offices
Mayor, Common Council,
School Board

Thursday, September 27

City Hall

6 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.

Meet the candidates,
ask YOUR questions

sponsored by the Arctic Business & Professional Women

In their own words: Municipal candidates answer to the public

In order to inform the public of the views of candidates running for office in the upcoming municipal elections on Oct. 2, The Nome Nugget sent out questionnaires to the candidates. This year, there are two seats on the Nome Common Council up of election, two school board seats, two utility board seats and one seat as the Nome representative to the Norton Sound Economic Development Corporation board of directors. All seats are three year terms.

Following are the answers turned in by the candidates.

Nome Common Council Seat "C"

Incumbent: Randy Pomeranz

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and why voters should vote for you.

Randy Pomeranz: I have been a resident of Nome for 31 years. All of my children were born and raised in Nome and with Taylor graduating in May, they will all be alumni of Nome-Beltz High School. I have served on the Council for the past 12 years and currently own and operate two local businesses. I have always been a strong supporter of keeping local property taxes down and providing opportunities for our local youth.

NN: What is your motivation to run for public office and what are your priorities that guide your decisions as a council member?

RP: My motivation for running is to try and keep our community an affordable place to live. With the high costs of everything we are seeing residents move to the bigger cities to get relief. They all say the same thing, that they can't afford to live here. In making my decisions on the Council, we always have to keep in mind what is best for the community. You have to put aside personal issues and use an open mind on how you base your vote. There are a lot of times when you need the public's input to make that final choice on some items that are brought to the table. We, as elected officials, are put there by the public and are serving their wants and needs.

Randy Pomeranz

NN: Which priorities should the City pursue?

RP: The city needs to keep pushing for cheaper energy costs for the residents of Nome. We need to also keep our infrastructure up to date and our schools funded properly. If we can cut our energy costs, it will make the other part of the City's responsibilities much easier to accomplish. One thing that will play a big part in this is extending our port out to minus 35 ft. so that we are able to bring in large fuel tankers for fuel deliveries. In one of our recent work sessions a comment was made that we could cut our cost of fuel by a lot if we were able to take delivery by ship versus barge. That, along with having the ability to dock larger vessels, would help Nome on many other issues.

NN: What is your vision for the City of Nome and the Port of Nome to deal with the increasing pressure from the oil and gas industry as well as the shipping industry that take advantage of the increasingly ice-free Arctic in the summer?

RP: My vision for the increased activity that is happening offshore would be to extend our port to the minus 35 ft. depth and use it as a major docking for the ships that are going right by us now. Nome could be a major harbor for all the offshore activity that is going on to the north of us. We are already looking at purchasing land to increase the size of the port pad so that we can accommodate these large companies that are drilling for oil. The port has so many opportunities at this time and all we need is to get it to deeper water.

Challenger: Randy Oles

Randy Oles

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and why voters should vote for you.

Randy Oles: I am a long-time resident of Nome and a 33-year member with the Nome Volunteer Fire Department and NVFD Search & Rescue. I am a member of Nome CAP, an Army Veteran and a small business owner. I'm employed with the State of Alaska Dept. of Transportation/SEF.

NN: What is your motivation to run for public office and what are your priorities that guide your decisions as a council member?

RO: I would like to help make Nome an affordable place to live by keeping costs down, control spending and not raising property taxes.

NN: Which priorities should the City pursue?

RO: We should contract large building projects out to avoid large cost overruns, support Nome Public Schools, support Nome's non-profits.

NN: What is your vision for the City of Nome and the Port of Nome to deal with the increasing pressure from the oil and gas industry as well as the shipping industry that take advantage of the increasingly ice-free Arctic in the summer?

RO: I support to seek funding for the port expansion for larger, deeper draft vessels.

Challenger: Kenny Hughes

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and why voters should vote for you.

Ken Hughes: I was born in Nome while my folks were teachers in Teller and returned to the Seward Peninsula after college to seek my fame and fortune. I ended up in Teller on May 28th 1981 about 3:30 in the afternoon +/- a few minutes. Although I began as an employee of Teller Commercial I eventually went on to own and operate my own store, taxi business, local airline agency, gold mining and commercial fishing businesses. In the middle of doing all that I also served as Mayor of Teller for several years, AEC chairperson for Teller for 20 years, six years on the BLM Northern Alaska Advisory Council, a dozen or so years on the Northern Seward Peninsula Fish and Game Advisory Committee. I married a local young lady by the name of Emily and raised four wonderful children.

Currently I am the Director of Northwestern Operations for General Refining Corporation, staffing their gold buying office here in Nome; and owner/operator of Stargate Alaska, selling and installing satellite TV and internet systems in the region as well as providing hotspot wi-fi access in several communities. In my spare time I dredge dive offshore, take pictures, enjoy hunting and fishing, snowmobiling, scuba diving, amateur radio and playing hockey. I believe that I am a good candidate for Nome City Council as result of my past experience in Teller. I am very

The hills outside of Nome show white caps and snow was flying in lower elevations, very briefly covering the vivid fall colors of bright yellow and reds on the tundra. Port of Nome activities slowed down a tad, but that doesn't mean that the shorter days are less hectic. Nome Harbormaster Joy Baker reports that research boat Professor Khromov left the Nome port for the last time this summer on Monday. This week saw six landing craft coming through Nome. Two construction equipment barges arrived with one delivering equipment to overwinter in Nome and the other one is supposed to take on construction equipment to haul it out of Nome. An Alaska Logistics barge arrived on Wednesday with the special dynamic compaction crane that Twin Peaks was waiting for as they need the crane for the Airport runway dip emergency repair project. The crane, too heavy to be trucked over the existing Snake River bridge, was put on a truck, then unloaded and walked across the river after special permits were secured, and taken to the construction site via the long way past the tank farms, the sewage lagoon, Dredge 6 and to the airport runway.

Baker also reports that four sailboats that recently completed the Northwest Passage anchor at port facilities. One is anchored at the causeway, the other three inside the harbor. Yet to arrive in Nome before the port closes for the season is a fuel delivery, the two last mainline barges — one Alaska Logistics, one Northland Services — and one last research boat to accompany the Polar Prince, the Canadian icebreaker still anchored out at sea in front of Nome.

In the office, Baker will see a change come on Friday as Port of Nome office assistant Tim Shield is leaving the job and Nome after many, many years to join his family in Kenai.

familiar with local city government regulations (Title 29) and processes. My experience in dealing with federal and state agencies will be a valuable asset for the community of Nome.

NN: What is your motivation to run for public office and what are your priorities that guide your decisions as a council member?

KH: I have been asked to run for city council by members of the mining and business community to bring my experience to the council as a voting member. Recent council decisions seem to have an anti-mining/business slant in many folks' mind. I hope to be a voice on the council that will represent small businesses and the challenges they face in dealing with seemingly monolithic bureaucracies and the regulations that seem to pop up will-nilly in response to their activities. I think the sales tax puts our local merchants at a disadvantage and would like to explore other funding options for the city and it's services. I am a fiscal conservative who believes people should basically be responsible for themselves and their actions. I would rather work for and support ideas and projects I believe in than to fight against those I do not.

NN: Which priorities should the City pursue?

KH: One of the first priorities I would emphasize is communications with the public. For instance the last posting of council information to the City website is several months old. How do I as an interested person stay informed of what's coming before the council or research what's been going on? The Nome Nugget articles are fine, but don't go into all the details, and that's coverage after the fact, not beforehand. Port development, energy options, water/sewer services, and infrastructure improvements are priorities that directly impact business and quality of life issues and need to be pursued. Other projects I would really like to see come to fruition is a large multi-use facility such as Mitch Erikson has proposed that could be a hockey rink as well as a performing arts center. The number of children that show up at the hockey rink whenever it's cleared show the tremendous impact of a wintertime alternative activity. The Front Street beautification plan the Chamber of Commerce is developing is also a great idea that needs to happen to assist tourism development. I think that we need to become less dependent on government dollars and more diversified in our economy, taking advantage of the increased shipping and tourist interest in our region as best we can, while supporting current industrial activity such as gold and gravel mining.

NN: What is your vision for the City of Nome and the Port of Nome to deal with the increasing pressure from the oil and gas industry as well as the shipping industry that take advantage of the increasingly ice-free Arctic in the summer?

KH: My vision for the City and Port of Nome to deal with increasing OPPORTUNITY is to take as much advantage of it as possible. We should do whatever we can to assist locally based businesses in meeting the opportunities to service the needs of industry as the development and use of the Arctic region continues to unfold. Public-private partnerships and joint ventures to complete goals otherwise unobtainable should be pursued aggressively yet cautiously with an ear to the political winds of change.

Nome Common Council
Seat "D"
Incumbent: Stan Andersen

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and why voters should vote for you.

Stan Andersen: I was born and raised in Nome. I have served on the Nome Common Council, Utility

Board and Planning Commission for several years. I take the time to study the material for a more informed decision.

Stan Andersen

NN: What is your motivation to run for public office and what are your priorities that guide your decisions as a council member?

SA: I have always had a desire to be a part of the direction the City is heading, which includes the Utilities and School. I want to make the public aware of where our money comes from and where it's being spent.

NN: Which priorities should the City pursue?

SA: Priorities would be continued road improvements, a solid school system, measured port improvements and a safe city. With the shortfall of funds from the Federal Government, more organizations will look to the City for funding. The State has to – in the next couple of years – cut back on funding also.

NN: What is your vision for the City of Nome and the Port of Nome to deal with the increasing pressure from the oil and gas industry as well as the shipping industry that take advantage of the increasingly ice-free Arctic in the summer?

SA: I support building up our existing Port while looking for money to expand to deeper water and our shore facilities need to be expanded.

Challenger: Nikolai A. Ivanoff

Nikolai Ivanoff

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and why voters should vote for you.

Nikolai Ivanoff: I was born on November 7, 1950 in Russia. I am a U.S. citizen now, I have Master Degree in Geology and over 35 years experience working for exploration and mining companies. My family includes wife Svetlana, son Igor, daughter Lucy and their spouses, and four grandchildren. My son lives with his family in Japan and my daughter lives in Anchorage where she teaches Japanese and Russian in High School. She recently graduated from UAA with a Master degree in Education.

In 1993 I moved to Nome. Since 1996 I have been employed by the Alaska Gold Company (AGC), which was then owned by Mueller Industrial until 1998. NovaGold Resources Inc. is the present owner.

It was and still is a pleasure for me to work for AGC and to help with community development of many subdivisions, as well as leasing and selling land for storage and for placer mining activities.

The AGC land manager position requires to communicate and deal with many Nome residents. With NovaGold official's advice and help, I always try to honorably and respectfully serve customers and to try to find the best solution, making sure it works out for AGC and Nome residents.

So far this relationship was very successful and I am sure people and city officials will remember what was done for the community by NovaGold/AGC and me as the land manager.

So! For many years I have been working for AGC owners and the community out of the AGC office and now I try also to work for the community as a member of the Nome Common Council.

The past few years has seen the gold rush/gold fever returning to the Nome area, but we are not ready for this and we also do not have a mining expert sitting on the Nome Common Council who would represent the mining community. This is one of the main reasons why I have submitted my name to be one of your city council members.

Also we need a fresh view on many issues that we are facing in Nome and I want to present to the Nome community some my ideas, if elected.

Let's vote for me and give me a chance to make some positive changes in our community life!

NN: What is your motivation to run for public office and what are your priorities that guide your decisions as a council member?

NI: First off, I am not running to satisfy my own ambition or get some benefits for myself or a special group of people. I'll be working for all members of community, even those who do not vote for me. This will be a challenging job and I will be ready to serve the community with honor and respect. I am a very strong, well-educated person with fresh views on some of Nome's problems and wish to help us move forward. While the town site was created in 1905, we are living in the 21st century and need to adapt. We need to define a clear path forward in which Nome can grow and prosper. Also we need to prepare the City and its facilities for the upcoming expansion in arctic resource development that is just around the corner. So! In order to do this, we need to elect people who can quickly adapt a new, 21st century reality. I hope I have the chance of doing this after I am elected as a member of Nome Common Council.

NN: Which priorities should the City pursue?

NI: At any level of government, elected officials have to present to the public a community strategic plan, because without solid plans and approval by the people, a lot can be done wrong.

I want introduce my vision and what needs to be done in the near as well as distant future in Nome to make sure our community will "fit" into the 21st century's reality.

In order for Nome to be a better place to live and create a strong economy, we cannot depend only on federal and state dollars.

We need help from all Alaska elected officials in Washington, DC and the state to make sure that Nome will be selected to be a regional Western Alaska marine/aviation hub for the upcoming Arctic region resource development. It will be great for the Nome community and also for all of Western Alaska.

I support exploration and developing mineral resources in Nome area (including natural gas near Nome) and Seward Peninsula, because the mining industry provides high pay jobs and also helps surrounding communities. Modern mining technologies and strong state regulations make the mining industry more controllable and harmless for nature and we do not have to be overly concerned about the impact.

I think we need to continue to bring serious attention to alternative energy and electricity sources, including wind powering generators and also Pilgrim Hot Spring hot water resources and of course natural gas.

City officials, council members and the community have to decide which way Nome wants to grow and what we can do about small lots and old, unoccupied buildings located on Front Street and on many streets in town. I'm sure everybody wants to see our beautiful town to be much cleaner and attractive for visitors and Nome residents.

If the community is united, and if city and elected officials do their job and follow promises, then everything can be done and our community Nome will be a great place to live and our economy would become stronger, and more important, stable.

NN: What is your vision for the City of Nome and the Port of Nome to deal with the increasing pressure from the oil and gas industry as well as the shipping industry that take advantage of the increasingly ice-free Arctic in the summer?

NI: First we need figure who exactly (Coast Guard, the military, oil industry or construction companies) would be stationed or set up a base here in Western Alaska and specifically in Nome.

Then we need to start to research what option Nome has, whether it be a deep water port, inland storage space, housing, workforce and much more. Without solid information and promises of a future port facility, or housing and storage space users, we can't go forward and spend money for all upgrading infrastructures.

So! City and elected officials need to spend energy, money and time to promote Nome make sure our port and all facilities will be selected for long term use for all activity in the Arctic.

We have few competitors. There are other places in Western Alaska vie for dollars to develop a deep draft port and also to set up bases for future Arctic development and we need to be working hard make sure Nome will be selected.

Challenger: Jim West Jr.

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and why voters should vote for you.

Jim West Jr.

Jim West Jr.: Born and raised in Nome, have a Degree in Business Administration, own and operate various businesses here in Nome, 28 year member of the Nome Volunteer Fire and Search & Rescue Dept currently a Captain, 6 year member of the Nome Ambulance Dept., 10 plus years as a member of the Local Emergency Planning Commission, past member of the Nome Joint Utilities Board, 12 years and current chairman of the Nome Port Commission. I have been involved with and completed projects which include building the Port of Nome Phase 1 and Phase 2, building the new Power Plant, the continuing phases of upgrades on the water and sewer system, the new Public Safety and equipment storage buildings and the new landfill solid waste cell. Preparing and growing Nome's future for the benefit of the younger generation thru responsible, fiscal management. Nome is a First Class city with outstanding city services that the people have come to enjoy. We have been very lucky on being able to find the grant funding to help with the much-needed upgrades throughout the city, utility and school systems.

NN: What is your motivation to run for public office and what are your priorities that guide your decisions as a council member?

JW: My motivation for running for office is very simple, to ensure the citizens of Nome are well represented and have a say in all issues that come up. Having a good ear to listen to the concerns of the people and the ability to strive for positive actions for the good of all its citizens is a priority for me. With my background I will bring to the council table a positive outlook on the present and future needs of the city. Keeping the balance of harmony between taxes, school education, future development needs will be a priority in my book and having a good understanding of how things are put together. We are all in this together there is no I in team, positive actions gives positive results.

NN: Which priorities should the City pursue?

JW: A.) The City of Nome has been very lucky in the past ten years to be on the receiving end of Federal dollars. With the political climate up in the air, we face the possibilities not being so fortunate, we now have to stay within our means and enjoy what we have built. With this funding we have upgraded our infrastructure, which we dearly needed and have to maintain the services which all of Nome citizens have come accustomed to.

B.) The City of Nome does and will continue supporting the Education system. Finding the balance is challenging, but it must be done for we are growing the future of Nome.

C.) With the coming of global warming, the shipping lanes will be opened up more, making Nome a natural stop-over point. We have seen over the past few years more activity out on the Bering Sea and our Port has seen an increased use. We need to increase the length to get to a deeper depth to accommodate the larger vessels. This potentially would help in lowering the freight cost to the people of Nome along with helping the economy by providing more local jobs. Nome is lucky to have two Ports that could be developed, in town and out at Cape Nome. In my opinion, the development of Cape Nome, which is naturally deep but without protection, would be my first choice. This would push potential development out towards Cape Nome or adding to the existing causeway would be a little more expensive, but the result would be the same.

NN: What is your vision for the City of Nome and the Port of Nome to deal with the increasing pressure from the oil and gas industry as well as the shipping industry that take advantage of the increasingly ice-free Arctic in the summer?

JW: We all need to keep an open mind and ear to the future development of Nome. We are in good position to deal with any and all activities that might pass through our community. Nome has a good infrastructure, airport and road system to handle the traffic that might come our way. Nome has in the past always been a good stopping point for fuel, cargo, and will always be a good place to stop. There's No Place Like Nome. With the increasingly ice-free Arctic, Nome is a natural spot to conduct a good support center for any and all traffic. Being able to provide goods and services to these folks will only help the Nome community to grow in the long run. Balancing the needs through smart fiscal responsibility will help keep the quality of life we all enjoy here in Nome. I would like to encourage everyone to get out and exercise your right to vote. Thank you and I would appreciate your support on Election Day.

School Board
Seat "C"

Incumbent: Betsy Brennan

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and what your qualifications are to be on the NPS school board.

Betsy Brennan: My name is Betsy Brennan and I am the incumbent candidate running for Nome School Board Seat C. I have lived in Nome since 1988. I earned my Bachelor's of Science degree in Environmental Science from Saint Michael College prior to moving to Nome. My husband, Mike Wade and I have been married since 1998. I am the proud mother of John and Sarah, ages 12 and 9. They both attend Nome Public Schools. I work full time in the business office of KNOM Radio Station.

During the 24 years I have lived in Nome, I have served on various local boards and organizations: Nome Preschool Association Board of Directors, The Bering Sea Woman's Group Board of Directors, St. Joseph Catholic Church Parish Council, Nome Community Center Board, and the Nome Parent Teacher Student Association. I have served as an elected member of the Nome Public School Board for five years. I feel passionately that education is the key to success in life for all children. Being a member of the Nome School Board is another way for me to be involved in the community I love and use my talents to do good things for kids. I have the experience and proven commitment to serve as a school board member.

NN: With huge reading deficits in the Nome Public School District (many 8th grade students are reading at the second and third grade level) what would you as a school board member do to help solve the problem?

BB: I believe as a current school board member, I AM supporting our Nome Public Schools staff in working on the problem of students not being able to read at their grade level. It is a problem that no one is running away from. As a board member I have attended training and listened to education experts and brought home ideas to my School District. I have advocated for school budgets that include funding for programs that will directly impact student learning. Nome Public Schools has dedicated teachers and staff that work hard every day for our students. As a board member, I have supported adding more teachers to our staff to keep the student to teacher ratio at or below 20 to 1.

I have supported the following efforts as a current board member: NPS was awarded a grant to hire three certified teachers to work with Nome Preschool and Kawerak Headstart to increase school readiness. The Nome Elementary School staff is in the second year of implementing the "Read 90" initiative. This "Read 90" aims to have all students reading at grade level by the time they reach 3rd grade. Staff is doing this through a variety of literacy interventions and more time is being spent teaching reading. A program called Reading Mastery is being used to teach students that are reading below grade level. NPS added a transitional class to the 1st grade with a focus on catch up growth in reading. The school has partnered with various community organizations like Nome Eskimo Community, Nome PTSA, and Nome City Library to have programs such as "Guys Read", "Girls Read" and a fall and spring reading incentive program. In the Junior High, a "one to one" iPad initiative has begun with generous support from the Native Village of Council and the City of Nome. NPS added a third Junior High English/Language Arts teacher for this school year. Can more be done? Absolutely! I believe more parent and school communication needs to occur on this subject. I believe NPS is making a great effort to help solve this problem.

NN: Describe your vision to realize a quality education for the diverse student populations in Nome?

BB: The Nome Public Schools vision statement states: Nome Students will be engaged in a quality education that ensures student proficiency through a challenging curriculum that embraces diversity and is culturally responsive. As a board member I have a duty to follow this vision. Our job in public education is to take ALL children that come to us and help them grow, learn and develop so when they leave our district they have the tools to be successful in whatever they choose to do in life. I take every opportunity to learn and ask questions of our administration, staff and community when there are important decisions before the board. When making decisions, I will try to always ask the question – Is this good for our kids? I always have an open door policy for public input.

NN: What are your financial priorities for the school district?

BB: My first priority as a school board member is to advocate for the education of the youth in our community. The outcome of public education is important to everyone's future. Therefore, my greatest financial priority is to advocate for funding for Nome Public Schools on the local, State and Federal level. I have shown support for our children by asking the Governor and Alaska State Legislature for an increase in funding for public education in Alaska. I will continue to do so. I believe our students are well worth this investment. I attend budget meetings with the Nome Common Council to advocate for City of Nome funding for our schools. In the upcoming year I intend to once again ask for funding to keep student to teacher ratios at or below 20 to 1. I believe it is vital to continue to fund the Nome Public Schools pre-Kindergarten staff. We have seen large gains in the readiness of our students to enter school. The District needs to retain the excellent staff we now have, and recruit new staff when we do have turnover. We need to offer fair wages to our employees so NPS can compete with school districts in areas with a lower cost of living.

Betsy Brennan

Challenger: Monica Rose

Monica Rose

Nome Nugget: Please tell us about your background and what your qualifications are to be on the NPS school board.

Monica Rose: Both of my parents were teachers and administrators for Bering Strait School District, Lower Yukon School District and my mother was a teacher at Nome Public Schools. While attending high school I worked for Bering Strait School District and was also a student board member. I am a graduate of Nome-Beltz High School, two of my children have graduated from Nome-Beltz High School and two are currently attending school. I have volunteered at both schools through reading in classrooms, school events and sport activities. I was a substitute teacher at both schools, worked as a cook at the elementary, and rode the buses for bus security.

NN: With huge reading deficits in the Nome Public School District (many 8th grade students are reading at the second and third grade level) what would you as a school board member do to help solve the problem?

MR: As a school board member, I will support and make sure that the School Board is evaluating the outcome of Read90 and current curriculum. The board needs to stay current with reading assessments and proficiency scores for Nome Public Schools. I would like to encourage parents to read more at home, volunteer to read in classrooms at their school and ask questions about their child's reading level. I would also support a reading program between schools and local agencies that are offering tutoring to students.

NN: Describe your vision to realize a quality education for the diverse student populations in Nome?

MR: If elected to the School Board, I would like to make sure that all Nome students are competitive in academics, scholarships, college prep, Alaska performance scholarship and support reading and math fundamentals. There is so much support in Nome, our region, and Alaska for higher education that I would like to see all our students prepared and make sure everyone of them is offered the best education to be successful.

NN: What are your financial priorities for the school district?

MR: I think that the top priority for funding should be to support all aspects of student experience in the school system. This means academics first. It also includes school environment (classroom, lunchroom, transportation) and any needed additional training for teachers. Support staff (cooks, custodial and maintenance) should also receive annual or updated training — this helps operations of schools run smoothly and has a great affect on students and their surroundings. I support spending extra for academic activities to help in reading, math, language and Native culture classes and culture awareness. I'm not afraid to ask questions and receive input from the community.

Thank you. Please vote for Monica Rose School Board Seat C!

Beltz Cross Country runners sweep Region 1 North

By Tara Schmidt

Nome's top seven boys and girls cross country runners will be advancing to the State Championships this weekend at Bartlett High School in Anchorage after their double-header victory in Unalakleet.

The varsity girl's team dominated the podium, with five scorers finishing in the top 15 for a team score of 26. Second place was Barrow with 42 points.

Led by Rosa Schmidt (19:05), Senora Ahmasuk (19:48), and Hannah Tozier (20:23) in first, second, and third places once again, the Lady Nanooks remain undefeated this season. Tori Thomas' fifth place finish was instrumental to their low score, solidified by Jannelle Trowbridge in 15th position. Teammate Alexis Hutson set a personal record time of 26:17, coming in 22nd place.

Many of the racers last weekend posted personal records, as the Unalakleet course was largely downhill. White Mountain senior Asa Bergamaschi had shattered the competition on the very same course at the Wolf-pack Invitational two weeks previously.

Bergamaschi led half the Regional race, pulling ahead as they turned onto the rutted, rough and slippery half-mile loop through the tundra. Tim Schmidt passed Bergamaschi after the course turned back onto the road pointing downhill. Schmidt completed the race in 16:23, with Bergamaschi 30 seconds behind.

Following racers from Kotzebue, White Mountain, Barrow, Kiana, and St. Michael, the next Nanook to cross the finish line was James Horner in 9th place, in 18:09. Nome's remaining scorers arrived in 12th, 14th, and 15th. They were Lief Erikson, Junyor Erikson, and James Jorgensen, respectively. Nick Morgan and Degnan Lawrence were close behind, finishing 18th and 20th.

Eighth-grade runner Ivory Okleasik took another first-place title for the Nanooks as the fastest in the Junior High Girls division. Her time of 22:21 would have placed her in seventh amid the high school girls.

Three Junior Varsity representatives competed in the open race, with Bobby Pate (18:36) placing third overall and the first high school student to finish. Nolan Horner sprinted into the chute in fourth position (19:11) but second for high school, and Oliver Hoogendorn placed fourth among JV; seventh overall.

Coach Jeff Collins said, "One of the key points this season is the depth of our boys team. This is the first season we've been able to set people aside if they're sick."

Speaking about the team, he added, "I'm very pleased with the way they present themselves. I couldn't be happier with how they've grown up as people, competitors, and a team."

Before the season wraps up, the Nanooks have one last race to run, and Collins says, this is the zenith of the season. "Our big focus is Regional's and State. Long term goals supersede the short term, and the short term leads to the long term," Collins said.

Volleyball Ladies win bracket in thrilling weekend

By Stephen Palmatier

The undefeated Lady Nanooks volleyball squad had yet to face any sort of challenge from an opponent this season, but all of that changed last weekend in Anchorage. The ladies were able to win their bracket in the West Anchorage High School tournament, defeating teams from 3A and 4A schools on the way in thrilling fashion, but also lost some matches.

The ladies arrived to the tournament last Thursday preparing first for pool play matches on Friday, where they would be assigned a bracket depending on the results. Each match was only two sets long, but the ladies played four different matches on Friday to qualify. In the first match, Eagle River defeated Nome, 25-18 and 25-19 followed by a split set match with Skyview where Nome took the first set, 25-16 and Skyview took the second, 25-17.

In the third match against South High, one of the best 4A schools in the state, Nome played competitively but eventually fell, 26-24 and 25-16. And in the final match of the day, the Nanooks fell again, losing 25-18, 25-14. With Nome having just won one out of the eight total sets in qualifying, they were assigned to the nickel bracket, one of four brackets in the tournament.

The Nanooks, who had not been truly tested yet this season, got all they could handle and more in the qualifying rounds. These losses could have demoralized the team heading into the bracket, but rather, they seemed to make the team hungry and stronger instead.

The bracket began the next day, Saturday, where the ladies' first match came courtesy of Homer. The first set was competitive throughout, but in the end Homer came out on top, 25-23. Being down a set in a best of three set format could have marked trouble for the Nanooks. But once again, the ladies did not panic or get discouraged, but rather bounced back with force, winning the second set, 25-16. In the third and deciding set, Nome was able to win it 15-11, outlasting Homer in the end.

The win was just the beginning of the madness for the ladies in this bracket because in the very next match, Nome faced off against Thunder Mountain. In this match, it was eerily similar to the first match, only this time the ladies reversed the script, winning the first set, 25-23. However, in the second set, the ladies could not close it out, dropping the second set, 25-20. And in the third and deciding set yet again, Nome prevailed, winning this time 15-12. With this match being very similar to the first, it showed that the Nanook ladies seemed to play better after dropping a set, having won a set both times after dropping a previous one.

With the two wins, the ladies moved on to the championship game of the bracket where they faced Wasilla. With Nome having played nearly six matches in a span of 24 hours, the question heading into the championship was if the ladies had enough energy left in the tank. In the match, they answered the questions, winning it in two very competitive sets, 25-22 and 25-23.

The win was huge, not only for their confidence but also to answer a lot of the questions swirling around about the team. The question heading into this tournament was how they would stack up physically and mentally against stronger competition. The ladies, who have been saying all season that they would be ready for stiffer competition came out and proved it. Perhaps the thing to take away from this last weekend's result was not just that they won their bracket, but rather the mental toughness they showed to win it, bouncing back time after time from adversity.

"Overall, we played well. I was very pleased," said Lucas Frost, head coach of the Lady Nanooks commenting about the weekend as a whole. Coach Frost will not be the only one impressed after this weekend with the ladies showing that they can compete with anyone. The ladies, coming off their biggest matches and wins of the season, look to build off them when they head to Homer for another big tournament this upcoming weekend.

Arctic Orchestra delights Nome audience

Story and Photos by Diana Haecker

A rare treat came to Nome courtesy of the Nome Arts Council in form of the 30-member Arctic Chamber Orchestra that performed at the Nome Elementary School's gym on Saturday evening.

The orchestra, an offshoot of the Fairbanks Symphony Orchestra, toured Alaska with stops in Healy, Wasilla, Eagle River, Anchorage and, for a grand finale, in Nome.

Nome Arts Council president Josie Stiles said that the orchestra approached the NAC if they wanted to host the orchestra in exchange for a hot meal and a performance fee. The Arts Council jumped at the opportunity since it has been at least two decades since the orchestra has been in Nome to perform, and treated the musicians to a king crab dinner and berry desserts. In turn, the Nome audience experienced an evening not soon to be forgotten.

SOLOIST— Jun Watabe, saxophone soloist, performed last Saturday with the Arctic Chamber Orchestra in Nome. Watabe was born in Japan, holds a doctorate from the University of Northern Colorado and joined the music faculty at UAF in 2009.

MAESTRO— Russian born Maestro Eduard Zilberkant, right, is the musical director and conductor of the Fairbanks Symphony Orchestra and the Arctic Chamber Orchestra, which performed in Nome last Saturday.

The Arctic Chamber Orchestra drew a crowd of more than 140 Nomeites. Before the concert started, conductor Eduard Zilberkant pointed out viola player Trevor Adams, Nomeite Jimmy Adams' grandson. The orchestra first performed Franz Schubert's Overture in D, in the Italian style, often associated with ballet performances.

Then came an unusual piece composed by Russian composer Alexander Konstantinovich Glazunov (1865-1936), which incorporated a rather modern instrument, the saxophone in its concerto for saxophone and strings. Fairbanks music professor and Japanese born Jun Watabe definitely stole the show with his saxophone performance, also in Ibert's concertino da camera for saxophone.

The concert, not interrupted by an intermission, concluded with Symphony No. 4 by German composer Felix Mendelssohn and the Nome audience were up on their feet for a long applause and standing ovations.

After the concert, musicians allowed Nomeites to check out their instruments, and bass player Bob Olsen was not afraid to let even teenagers hold his 124 year-old bass.

school athletics and activities. I currently work at the Nome Community Center assisting programs like the Nome Food Bank, Senior Services, Children's services and tobacco prevention programs. I am a proud alumni Nanook, and plan to focus on our children for ALL to succeed from our Nome-Beltz schools. I highly value education as it is a key to success as early as infancy, preschool, and during all Nome Elementary and Jr. / Sr. High years; the education we provide impacts lives and well being.

NN: With huge reading deficits in the Nome Public School District (many 8th grade students are reading at the second and third grade level) what would you as a school board member do to help solve the problem?

PD: This is a tough one because I don't know what programs the school is using to help children learn to read. I think the current curriculum/programs are good. We need to support teacher training, parents in the classroom, support reading as a foundation of education, support the reading initiative and follow up with results, and definitely support teachers/parent input on improving reading skills. We need teaching staff that can connect with students, so that children feel comfortable learning and want to learn. Early literacy begins in preschool and kindergarten. We want involved parents. Parents are children's first teachers and their strongest advocates for learning. If schools don't have relationships with parents, we are losing the battle.

NN: Describe your vision to realize a quality education for the diverse student populations in Nome?

PD: It's wonderful that we have diversity in our schools. We want students to reach their highest potential in school and to do that they need support from staff, peers, parents and community. ALL students need support, ALL of our kids, not just the students who can read well, not just the students with perfect behavior. ALL students need to feel connected and welcomed at school. We can't reach our vision of quality education without reaching all of our students. We need to continue to make reading a priority until all of our students are proficient.

NN: What are your financial priorities for the school district?

PD: Obviously reading is an issue, so efforts need to be made to cover this priority. I encourage the community to give input about financial priorities. When we invest in curriculum, we need to make sure it is working, support K-2 education, which is foundational to the entire education experience. Technology, building maintenance, quality personnel, quality curriculum, extracurricular activities—these are some of the other issues that would benefit from prioritizing as a group/school board together, so we're united in spending money. Please vote for Paula Davis School Board Seat "D"!

NSEDG
Member Representative
Incumbent: Don Stiles

Don Stiles

Nome Nugget: What is your motivation to run for NSEDG office and what are your qualifications to be on the NSEDG board?

Don Stiles: I'd like to continue as a productive team member on NSEDG's board. I have maintained positive working relationships with the NSEDG board of directors and staff and have the ability to communicate effectively and work well with others, which is critical in a large board like NSEDG's. I am an active commercial fisherman who has a long record of involvement in both Nome and the Norton Sound region. I have been a strong advocate for Nome and its needs and have a good sense of what's needed in the region. I feel like I have a good record in my prior service through NSEDG and I would like to continue helping to guide the corporation as it invests in our communities, residents and fisheries.

NN: What is your vision to guide NSEDG as a board member?

DS: I would like to see continued growth in NSEDG's programs. Programs that educate, provide scholarships and support youth activities. Programs that help lower the cost of energy. Programs that will enhance and rehabilitate our fisheries through responsible methods.

NSEDG has made progress in all these areas, but there is still work to do. I would like to see NSEDG continue to expand commercial fishing opportunities in the region. Our recent expanded winter crab fishery this year was a great success. Giving residents more opportunities to earn income through activities like commercial fishing is one of the best ways we can encourage economic development. I would also like to see more programs and opportunities in NSEDG member communities outside of Nome. When they do well, Nome does well.

NN: NSEDG's annual financial report for 2011 is due to arrive at every mail box in the member communities by Sept. 30, nine months after last year ended. There is no financial report in the quarterly reports NSEDG sends to its member communities. If you are elected, what will you do to provide Nome residents with timely information about NSEDG's financial activities and status on a quarterly basis?

DS: This question is written in a way that assumes NSEDG is currently and actively working to improperly keep information from residents in our member communities. This is not the case. I think a better question is what is the right balance between disclosure and protection when it comes to financial information. I believe myself and my fellow board members have done a good job finding that balance. As board members we have a duty and fiduciary responsibility to safeguard certain financial information. We also have to make sure what is released is accurate.

Part of this is due to our participation in the competitive commercial fishing industry in the Bering Sea, as well as our relationship with harvesting partners, which are private companies. NSEDG does report on quarterly financial results at its board meetings which the public and media are invited to attend. The Nugget is often at these meetings and reports on the quarterly figures. These figures are only preliminary, however. NSEDG does not publish our financial data until it has gone through a rigorous audit performed by an outside firm. This happens after the calendar year has finished.

NSEDG is by far the most transparent of the six CDQ groups, and is the only one that allows the public and press to attend its quarterly meetings. NSEDG could hold all financial discussions in private, but this is not something I have pushed for. If people would like more disclosure, I would certainly hear them out. At this point, however, I believe people are satisfied with NSEDG's transparency.

NN: In your view, what is the most effective way for NSEDG to help improve the diminished chum salmon runs in the Nome subdistrict?

DS: The issue of poor chum salmon returns in the Nome subdistrict is complex. Anyone who blames a single cause for the decline in chums is either mistaken or is trying to mislead others. There are many factors involved—overfishing, habitat issues, competition from Asian hatchery chum (that affect the carrying capacity of the oceans), bycatch in the pollock fishery, the Area M salmon fishery, coho predation and numerous others all play a role. Some are significant while others play a much lesser role. A lot of focus gets placed on NSEDG because NSEDG is the only organization actively pursuing salmon restoration efforts on a regional scale—but that doesn't mean we need to be the only ones. Other organizations are working on local projects and NSEDG has a long history of working with other entities. I would encourage more groups to partner with NSEDG in addressing salmon concerns, in Nome and elsewhere.

This question will likely generate discussion of a hatchery at Hobson Creek. NSEDG's past history with this project and its operator's inability to get a hatchery permit makes me unable to support allocating funds to a project that can't move forward.

Even if Hobson Creek were permitted by ADF&G it wouldn't be the magic bullet that solves our chum issues. It is a cold-water stream that stunts salmon growth, putting the fry at a distinct disadvantage as late bloomers. This does not rule out my support for a future hatchery project in the region as part of an overall plan for chum, but I also won't blindly demand that NSEDG fund a non-permitted project with no regard for the critical limitations that come with it. If we are going to put the money forward to operate a hatchery, we should fund one that can be permitted and will be successful.

We've heard a lot about hatcheries from a very few people. If Nome truly wants a hatchery, it needs more support than just a handful of people who have tunnel-vision on only a single option. As a board member I will make sure any project we support will have a realistic chance of getting a permit and that its operators will make every effort to meet permitting requirements.

If a hatchery for chum salmon, or perhaps another species that people feel is more desirable, is truly what Nome wants, then I have the ability to work with NSEDG's board members and staff to make that happen. No single board member can steer NSEDG on their own.

I'm not one to talk much about my accomplishments, but I know the importance of having Nome's representative be able to work well with other members—and my record demonstrates that I get things done. I would appreciate your VOTE Tuesday, October 2, 2012. Thank you.

Challenger: Louie Green Jr.

Nome Nugget: What is your motivation to run for NSEDG office and what are your qualifications to be on the NSEDG board?

Louie Green Jr.: I have been serving on regional boards and committees since 1993. I want to give member communities a stronger voice in how NSEDG conducts its business. I also want to provide transparency and accountability in NSEDG's business affairs to members of the Nome community. I am the chairman of the Seward Peninsula Federal Subsistence Regional Advisory Council. I serve on the Sitnasuak Native Corporation and Bering Straits Native Corporation boards of directors.

NN: What is your vision to guide NSEDG as a board member?

LG: I want to find a way to provide local people more access to Bering Sea and Aleutian Island commercial fisheries and encourage other means of economic development within the member communities. I feel NSEDG should have a larger role in advocating for and developing local subsistence fishing.

Louie Green Jr.

NN: NSEDG's annual financial report for 2011 is due to arrive at every mail box in the member communities by Sept. 30, nine months after last year ended. There is no financial report in the quarterly reports NSEDG sends to its member communities. If you are elected, what will you do to provide Nome residents with timely information about NSEDG's financial activities and status on a quarterly basis?

LG: The annual report to every box holder should be due on April 15 for the previous year. I would provide quarterly financial reports to each member community's city council following each NSEDG quarterly board meeting. I would also provide a copy of NSEDG's audited financial statement to the member communities.

NN: In your view, what is the most effective way for NSEDG to help improve the diminished chum salmon runs in the Nome subdistrict?

LG: In my view, the best way to improve local chum salmon runs is to work cooperatively with Sitnasuak Native Corporation that owns the land in the Nome Subdistrict where the weakest chum salmon runs occur, to operate the Hobson Creek Hatchery. We should support studies using marked fish from the hatchery to determine the impact of interception in the False Pass commercial salmon fishery on Norton Sound chum salmon runs. We should advocate for a serious reduction in salmon Bycatch in the Pollock trawl fisheries. Marked chum salmon from the hatchery could also contribute to assessing the impact of trawl bycatch on Nome Subdistrict salmon stocks.

Saying It Sincerely

Treasure in Heaven

A man ran up to Jesus and asked, "Good teacher, what must I do to inherit eternal life?" Since the man observed all of the commandments, Jesus asked him to take the next step, "You are lacking in one thing. Go, sell what you have, and give to the poor and you will have treasure in heaven; then come, follow me." The man eager to ask Jesus the question was not so eager to accept the answer and went away sad.

The husband of one wealthy family in France was a watch maker and his wife owned a business making fine lace. By the standards of the time they were a wealthy family. They were grateful to God and recognized their wealth was a blessing from God for which they were called to be responsible stewards. Without the benefit of a Food Bank like Nome, those who were hungry approached their home directly to ask for assistance. They sent their youngest daughter to the door when people came knocking for assistance. Although only a child, the parents wanted her to recognize the need to help others. She greeted those in need with a warm smile and gave generously from the family's ample supply of food. Part of the key to giving with joy is to recognize that we have a responsibility to help others.

Illness set in and the mother died of cancer. In time, illness robbed the father of the ability to make a living as a watch maker and yet he still considered himself a rich man. He was rich for he had the love of five daughters. Each of the daughters in turn asked Jesus, "Good teacher, what must I do to inherit eternal life?" The daughters all observed the commandments and from the wealth of faith they received from mother and father, they were all eager to set aside worldly concerns to follow the Lord. Each entered religious life in order to pray for the good of others and to grow closer in their own relationship to God.

The youngest entered religious life at age 15, in fact ahead of several of her sisters. In the Story of a Soul she tells of her life and of her relationship with God. She recognized God's wisdom and asked him to share it generously with her. Although she didn't own a bible, she had access to one in the chapel and memorized verses taking the lessons from scripture to heart. She recognized God's abundant love and asked to be able to share that love as easily and as freely as she had responded to those who asked for food at the front door of the home she grew up in. She recognized the sacrifice of Jesus on the cross and asked to share in that wealth as well. She contracted a fatal disease that medical science did not know how to cure at the time. She died a martyr of love at the age of 24 from tuberculosis. Even in her pain and suffering she still found ways to reach out to others. Through letters that took great effort to write in her illness, she encouraged a young man to give to the poor and follow the Lord to the ends of the earth.

It is good to ponder the question of eternal life often, and to respond generously to others. An elder rich in wisdom does not grow poorer by generously sharing that wisdom with others. A hunter, who shares the wealth of the hunt with those who can no longer hunt, feeds the soul both for himself and for his neighbor. And let us not forget the Little Way of Therese of Lisieux who turned the question around on Jesus and asked him to share abundantly from his wealth so that she could share it with others.

Obituaries

John Patrick Bunce

John Patrick Bunce, age 26, died Saturday morning, September 1, 2012 at his home in Nome, Alaska.

John Patrick Bunce

John was born November 13, 1985 at 6:27 PM at Emanuel Hospital in Portland, Oregon. His mother is Noqah Elisi Adkins of Homer, Alaska. His birth father, John Patrick Bunce Sr. resides in Oregon. John's early childhood was spent in Estacada, Oregon and when it was time for him to begin school, he and his mother moved to Ashland where he attended pre-school and kindergarten, while his mother worked for the university and attended classes. It was here that John learned to snow ski, swim, ride a bike and many other activities. He was a quiet child, a watcher with keen observation and insatiable curiosity; he had an innate physical strength and agility greater than most, and a wisdom beyond his years; he was, as some would say of him "an old soul." John was ¾ Irish from the Keene family in County Derry, and the Cronan family in County Cork, Ireland and 1/8 Cherokee of the Wolf clan from the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina. He had within him the spiritual awareness and emotional intelligence of his Cherokee ancestors, and the witty charm and keen intellect of his Irish roots.

In 1993 John and his mother moved to Alaska where John attended the Adventist Elementary School in Fairbanks and Nome. He graduated from North Atlantic Regional High School, and Smoky Bay Learning Center at Homer, Alaska in 2004. He did his general college studies at Northeast State College in Tennessee and studied Geology and Diesel Mechanics at University of Alaska Fairbanks. He was certified and licensed through the State of Alaska for Diving, Professional Truck Driving, Hazwoper and Professional Boating Safety. When the issue of his going on to further education was brought up, he would say "I am not disciplined enough to warrant the money it will cost, I think I will wait until I am older." He wanted to study environmental law.

John's first employment was with Tech-Connect in Homer where he learned to install computer systems, and programs. Later in Tennessee, he worked as a lens grinder/polisher for an Optometrist, and laborer for a construction company. In the restaurant that his family owned, John washed dishes, waited tables, tended the till and cleaned. Back in Homer he worked as a deck hand on a fishing boat and learned to make parts and construct yurts for Nomad Shelter. In Nome he worked at leveling buildings; in environmental, as a truck driver, and maintenance/refueler for Nome Gold, general laborer for Nome Utilities, drill sampling for Metal Logeny, and finally for himself as a diver gold dredger. He said to me "mom, I love being down there, it is very peaceful, and there is so much to explore and see...I want to take pictures." For the first time beneath his words there was an exhilaration and wonder as he described what he saw and experienced down there on the ocean floor; he was discovering his passion and coming into his own.

John loved to travel. He visited Mexico, Canada, Costa Rica and Hawaii. At 10 years he rode over 300 miles on horse-back with the Unity of the Nations Riders from the Black Hills of South Dakota, up to Cannon Ball, Alberta. He traveled with his mother in their motor home from Tennessee to Alaska visiting National Parks and historical places along the way. He talked of studying Druidism and going on a Pub Crawl through Ireland; he talked of doing a bike trip through New Zealand, England, and climbing the pyramids of Egypt. He was interested in history, politics, and current events. He read regularly Washington Post and BBC news, and many other sources. His interest in music was widely eclectic, ranging from the sublime to the profane. He could reproduce with perfect pitch, any music he heard, and knew all the songs, word and note from Muppet Treasure Island; he had a beautiful tenor voice.

John is well known for his humor, his silly little laugh and quirky grin; and for his ability to listen on a deep level, and wise in his counsel. He had a kind and forgiving nature, non-judgmental of others, which is why they loved being around him. He was a loyal and protective of his friends, loving to his family, concerned for their welfare, and respectful and kind to his mother. John lived his life openly and honestly; there were no hidden agendas, no manipulations; he did not use others for personal gain. He was respectful of women and children and kind to animals; he loved dogs and sometimes cats. He laughed a lot, cried sometimes, and never failed at loving.

He is survived by his mother Noqah Elisi; uncles Mike, David, Greg and John Adkins; his Aunt Jan Adkins and cousins Josh and Brandon Adkins of Tennessee; adopted brothers: Zeke, Sam and Gabe Tenhoff of Nome, half brother and sister Brandon and Kelly Bunce of Oregon; adopted parents Lee and Jess Tenhoff of Homer, and John and Nita Klimp of Nome; "more-like-brothers-than-friends": Mitchell and Tom of Homer, Calvin, Joseph, Javier, Mike, Emily and Laura of Nome; Jeremiah and Alex Rhodd of South Dakota; and many other friends across the country. He kept people close to his heart, no matter the distance or time, his love and friendship never wavered. He was honest and solid friend. He was predeceased by his grandparents Charles and Elizabeth Adkins of North Carolina; and cousin Keith Grindstaff of North Carolina.

The day I felt you come into this life there beneath my heart I knew you were an expression of God's transcendent love, a gift sublime. Thank you, son, for the greatest honor ever bestowed upon any woman: that of being your mother. You go now, and do the work you are meant to do, with all our love and gratitude for the gift of you.

A Memorial Service will be held on Sunday, September 30, 2012 at 5 pm at Old St. Joseph's Hall/ Anvil City Square Nome, Alaska. For information call: 907-299-6448.

Rotary Citizen of the Year 2012

Each year the Rotary Club of Nome selects a Nomeite who exemplifies service to the community above and beyond their call of duty. This year Nicole Scherer was voted to rank among the names listed on the plaque in City Hall honoring those individuals who serve our community.

Scherer's 10 years of residence in Nome started with a job as a summer waitress for local eatery "Fat Freddie's." Nikki Polk, as was her maiden name before getting married to Zeb Scherer, then worked full-time at the Nome Community Center with Project Venture and then moved on to teach at Nome Elementary School.

Outside of work she donated countless hours to various projects and organizations. Nikki was active and instrumental in groups like D.A.W.N., the Nome Literacy Council and the Nome Arts Council acting in various leadership capacities. She was on the Board of the Nome Community Center as a way to show support to the organization. Nikki also had a strong focus on youth development through Drama Club, Summercise, Ski Coach and the Young Author's Showcase she created. In her "spare time", Nikki was organizing a food drive for the Nome Food Bank or helping to organize Nome's Relay for Life.

Nikki left Nome for Anchorage last summer to accommodate her growing family and to allow her husband Zeb to get the chance to follow his dreams of becoming a pilot for Alaska Airlines. Nicole Scherer is a very special individual who has been a valuable asset to the community of Nome and it is The Rotary Club of Nome's honor to award her the Citizen of the Year Award.
