Rock Creek Dam breached

Phase I of Rock Creek mine closure is underway

By Diana Haecker

While the ultimate fate of the failed Rock Creek gold mine is still unknown – whether it will close for good or will find new owners – work on the first phase of the reclamamation plan has begun. The tailings facility dam has been breached and where once the toe of the massive dam was gaps a gigantic V-cut. The State’s Dam Safety Engineer Charlie Cobb said that the dam has been fully breached and that he is coming out on Thursday, April 19 to inspect the work.

The mine has been in care and maintenance status since November 2008 and has operated according to terms of a temporary closure plan dated April 2010. Cobb said that part of that plan was to decommission the tailings facility dam if the mine is not restarted within three years. The time is up now. The mine hasn’t been restarted and last year NovaGold’s board of directors decided to get rid of their investment in Nome in order to concentrate on the development of the Donlin Creek gold mine.

Since the temporary closure, the mine’s caretakers had to battle with large amounts of water that accumulated behind the TSF dam, requiring AGC to pump the water out, treat it and pump it back into the earth through their injection wells. “Water behind a dam makes it dangerous,” said Cobb. “My concern was that the system was safe.”

Cobb said that the breach now allows for water to flow freely. He said that diversion channels have been built above the cut to channel the water toward the breach. Below the cut is a sediment lake to filter out the muck and the water then is allowed to flow into Rock Creek. The closure plan says that storm water management practices, including use of best management practices, will be implemented to limit erosion and associated sediment loadings during break-up.

On site, in the white expanse of the idyllic Snake River Valley the silence is disrupted by the sound of heavy equipment moving massive amounts of gravel and soil around. Since the mine only operated for a

Legislature fails to increase PCE energy assistance

By Sandra L. Medearis

An increase in power cost assistance for rural Alaska went down for lack of money. When HB 294 passed to House Finance, that committee slapped a contingency for passage that required $150 million be provided in the Capital Budget to fund the increase.

As it stands now, the assistance from Power Cost Equalization Program applies to the first 500 kwh per month a household uses and has nothing for small businesses. The required $150 million did not make it into the budget, according to Rep. Neal Foster’s office. Foster was one of the backers of the bill introduced by Rep. Bryce Edgmon, Dist. 37.

The bill proposed raising the kilowatt-hours ceiling for assistance from 500 to 600 per month, and also added small commercial customers to the pool of entities eligible for PCE. Small commercial customers are defined as using no more than 2,400 kilowatt-hours per month. Businesses are currently ineligible to receive any PCE benefits,” said Rep. Bryce Edgmon, Dist. 37, in his sponsor statement “We are experiencing one of the coldest Alaska winters in the last 25 years. While folks in the Bush have become used to conserving power to fall under the 500 kilowatt-hour ceiling, it is a struggle to do so in winter months. This year’s weather is not helping that struggle.”

The legislation proposed returning elements of the Power Cost Equalization (PCE) program to its 1998 levels.

Meera Kohler, CEO of Alaska Village Electric Coop. testified for passing the bill. AVEC keeps the lights on in 54 rural Alaska villages.

Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Haines and House Finance co-chair, asked if with the dwindling of oil and high prices, the PCE fund would not become “low hanging fruit.”

“PCE comes with a pretty huge price tag,” Edgmon said. “I’m not trying to put that aside. It is a policy call of the legislature. What do we want rural Alaska to look like going forward? And understand that the cornerstone of looking like any type of healthy sustainability is tied to energy.”

How much energy subsidy is enough,” Thomas asked during Kohler’s testimony. Until there was a solution for Western Alaska that reduced electrical power rates to a reasonable level— 10 cents to 20 cents per kwh, there would never be enough, Kohler said. “Our communities are gasping for breath. The cost of energy is killing them.

“I am very optimistic we will design and put in place an all-Alaska solution that’s going to provide affordable energy across the state of Alaska,” Kohler said.

Apparently, additional relief for rural Alaska will not come out of this legislature.

In other capital budget items, Nome did not do badly. Projects in Nome received funds of $79,119,000 out of the total capital budget pie of $2.9 billion. Money to buy two large wind turbines is in the packet for $4,069,000—to develop renewable energy. The budget, headed for Gov. Sean Parnell’s desk and susceptible

Front St. site selected for museum

By Sandra L. Medearis

Plans for the Richard Foster Building took a jump ahead Thursday when the Nome Common Council agreed with the Nome Museum and Library Commission choice of a Front Street site as the priority address for the new construction.

Years of planning for construction currently funded by the state at $16 million will take on a new phase as the selection of a site will allow the planners, architects and engineers to get down to brass tacks for designing the building and its programs.

For old-timers, the potential site at the east corner of Steadman and Front streets is where enticing aromas once wafted out of the Billiken

Bakery. The site comprises lots owned by Thu Lan Munn, Leo Rasmussen, Jimmy West Jr. and the former site of the food bank under supervision of United Methodist Women’s Global Ministries.

The commission identified about a dozen sites and forwarded the list to the Nome Planning Commission for a technical analysis on parking, traffic patterns, location, flood hazards, availability of adjacent properties and the like.

The measure of the potential space is about 29,000 square feet, according to John Handeland of the commission. How many and which

Off to See the Wizard

PAC is not that little clamshell guy who gobbled up kids back in the 1970s. PACs are Political Action Committees that have their own agendas, unlimited funds and well-concealed benefactors who are all set to lead us down the yellow brick road. PACs give politics and politicians a big spin with enough torque to drill all the way to China. PACs perpetuate a lot of hokum unfettered by truth and responsibility. Their hyper partisanship leaves no space for real legislation. Their sole purpose is to control the public thought process and the devil takes the hindmost. Look at some of the TV ads we are subjected to. Some of these ads promote gold mining by telling us how much we need copper, how the pipeline didn't interfere with caribou migration (has nothing to do with gold mining). We have cute blond girls telling us how we should get real and not let South Dakota get oil money. We have a mystery ad telling us to thank Sen. Murkowski (she is not running for office). We have an oil company hyping the "Spirit of Alaska" to promote drilling in the Arctic. Many of these ads have a quick as a wink tail end segment in rapid speech and very small print type telling who paid for the ad. Could we form a PAC to get rid of the stupid and often hurtful PAC ads? Could we campaign for openness in campaign funding? Could we demand that PACs be outlawed because they allow rich cowards to sling blatant untruths without showing their face and having no standard of truth or integrity? Of course the truth is so damned limiting. The PACs operate on the premise that the public is incredibly gullible. Perhaps they are correct— people will believe the craziest things. Real Alaskans need to take a lesson from the Wizard of Oz and look behind the PAC curtain. — N.L.M. — for the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, the U.S. Post Office, the U.S. Dept. of Homeland Security and also the Nome Superior Court. Front Properties LLC is based in Anchorage and according to their general manager Laura Nichols, they own five commercial buildings in Anchorage, four commercial buildings in Dutch Harbor, one in Salt Lake City, Utah, and now the Nome Federal Building. Nichols said that Front Properties LLC looks for "retired" buildings to buy with the intent to upgrade, renovate and turn them into energy efficient office spaces. Front Properties LLC is owned by Steve Zelener who was in Nome last week to inspect the building and start to draw up plans for remodeling. Zelener said in a phone interview with The Nome Nugget that the goal is to reduce the building's energy consumption by upgrading the heating and ventilation system as well as the lighting. Zelener also mentioned that windows need to be replaced to help better insulate the building. The building itself is structurally sound, he said. Aside from practical and energy cost-reducing improvements, Zelener plans to spruce up the building's atmosphere. "We are planning to paint the building to give it a more modern and elegant look," Zelener said. "Right now it looks very institutional." The structure was built in 1958 and Zelener said the improvements are intended to bring the building "into the 2012 era." The new owners plan to spend $500,000 on those improvements.

Nome’s renowned Arctic leader, Charlie Johnson died April 12.

Charles “Tumungnaq” Johnson was born in White Mountain in 1939 and moved to Nome in 1944. Charlie graduated from Kodiak High School in 1958. On an athletic scholarship in Boxing, he attended Washington State University from 1961-64, studying mathematics. He lived in Europe for a year and returned to the states and received a Degree in Business Administration and Mathematics from the University of Oregon.

After working in marketing for several years he became the director of the Portland Urban Indian Center. He transformed it from a small storefront office into a multimillion dollar organization which provided many services to Portland’s Native Americans.

In 1976 Charlie became the Executive Director of Kawerak. After three years Charlie helped Kawerak emerge from bankruptcy. In 1979 Charlie was elected to Bering Straits Native Corporation board of directors. In 1981 he became president of BSNC. During his five years as president, Charlie was instrumental in turning a company around that was deeply in debt. Charlie served as a director of BSNC through 2006, and at times serving as first and second vice presidents.

In 1978, Charlie was instrumental in forming the Eskimo Walrus Commission in order to establish and solidify Alaska Natives’ subsistence rights in the Marine Mammal Protection Act. In 1994 he established the Alaska Nanuq Commission, which he served as executive director until his death, and facilitated a Native to Native agreement between the US and Russia for the conservation of polar bears.

Charlie was appointed by the first President Bush as a Presidential Advisor to the US Arctic Research Commission. He sat on the Oversight Counsel for the International Arctic Research Center and was a member of the Scientific Review Group for the National Marine Fisheries Service. At the time of his passing, he was serving as chair of White Mountain Native Corp. and the co-chair representing the US on the Bi-Lateral Commission for the Conservation of Chukchi Polar Bears. He had served as vice chair for the Alaska National Bank board, a member of the Iditarod Trail Committee board, chair of the Alaska Federation of Natives, VP of the Inuit Circumpolar Conference-Alaska, and served on the US Delegation to the Arctic Council and to the Organization of American States.

Johnson was also a leader in establishing and administering visa-free passage for indigenous Chukotkans and Alaskans traveling between Russian and Alaska.

Charlie dedicated much of his life to ensuring that others, like him, would be able to continue practicing a subsistence lifestyle. He combined this passion with empowering disadvantaged groups through his vision and political influence that spanned nine presidents and across many international boundaries.

Charlie was preceded in death by his son Truman and leaves behind Brenda, his wife of 43 years; daughter Nicole; son Boogles and his wife Allison; grandchildren Drew, Adrianna, Teague, Alohna, Melody, Alyssa, and Davin.

“Charlie Johnson had many titles, but he’ll certainly be remembered for one mission in particular: helping Alaskans assume their role in Arctic leadership,” said Lt. Governor Mead Treadwell.

“No meeting with Charlie ever happened without a good laugh and a real sense of purpose,” Treadwell said. “Charlie accomplished a great deal for Alaska. He will be sorely missed by many.”

lots will underlie the new building remains for planners to determine, Handeland said last week. The original idea was to build a museum of 14,000 square feet. Now a plans call for including new space for Kegoayah Kozga Library under the same roof. That would expand plans for the building to 17,000 to 20,000 square feet, Terry Hyer, architect, told the Council at its special meeting Apr. 12.

"The feeling was that we just needed to get it narrowed down so the architect and engineer could develop a cost proposal with the funding available," Handeland said. "The last recommendation was to include the library inside as well. With the library, that shrinks the space for the museum, or we seek other funding. Everything we put into the property takes away from square footing."

The current library, in the same building as the Carrie M. McLain Museum, occupies 800-900 square feet, not enough for needed expansion of children's programs.

A question still on the table was whether the Richard Foster Building plans would include space sought by Kawerak, Inc.

The Council unanimously agreed 4-10 with the site choice. Council members Mary Knodel and Stan Andersen had excused absences from the special meeting.

Still, one issue still lurks unsettled. Kawerak Inc. representatives at the meeting spoke in favor of having the building include their project, Beringia Center of Culture and Science. Kawerak has lodged the request to share space and expenses in years past.

Loretta Bullard, president, said the culture center would need from 2,750 to 3,700 feet, leaving over 10,000 square feet for the museum and library. A rental agreement at $3 a square foot would yield an annual payment from Kawerak to City of Nome of $99,000 to $133,200, depending on the space allotted, Bullard said, and forge strong ties between the City and Nome's Alaska Native organizations.

Kawerak was concerned, Bullard said, that the process of design would go to far before a decision on the issue was reached. Kawerak has offered their lot on Seppala Drive for the building provided Kawerak could have input into the design.

The museum commission has not actively considered the offer, Bullard told the Council.

Both Bullard and Handeland figuratively removed one glove in the debate.

"Kawerak has approached the City for 10 years on sharing space. We understand the museum commission is not interested, so we are coming to the Council as the decision makers," Bullard said. The proposal would not move forward unless the Council gave direction to do so, she said. Kawerak could seek funding that the City did not have accessible.

"Some of the things Kawerak suggested in fact were not compatible. They were also for separate funding. They were working on buying Thu Lan's [Munn] building," Handeland said. "We worked hard over the years to secure funding for the museum and library, which is a department of the City."

The City's obligation was to seek funding for a comprehensive facility that doesn't include Native arts and programs, Handeland added.

"The City's obligation is to see that the City's needs are met. We are including all the people who are within the City of Nome in this," he said.

Councilmen Jerald Brown and Randy Pomeranz favored looking at including Kawerak's plans.

"My strong desire would be a shared facility with Kawerak," Brown said. "There is a dire need for a facility for artifacts. There are a lot of artifacts in the Smithsonian because there is not a facility to accept them. It is a strong community need we need to address."

"If the City side is 3,000 square feet less, then so be it," he said.

"Sorry, John."

Kawerak has expressed a need for climate-controlled equipment in order to bring home collections for good or on loan. She listed needs for rented space that included BCCS offices, Eskimo Heritage Program offices, art and artifact galleries, artifact and archival collections storage and a collection workroom. The City and the culture center could share other space: loading dock, restrooms, public event space, kitchen break room and classrooms, for example.

Pomeranz said he could see accepting an entity to share the costs of a larger building. "Not passing it onto the taxpayer is attractive to me," Pomeranz said. "I would like to see more work on that."

Bullard and Kawerak had brought new facts to the discussion, Handeland conceded.

"There may be a way to make it work, he said."

The issue needed to be examined at the Council level, Mayor Denise Michels said.

The Council did not vote directly on inclusion of the cultural center, but voted unanimously asking the City's administration to examine the details of such a cooperative use of space—after space for the library has been accommodated.

The site proposed to the Council came out of a last week's meeting of City, museum and library employees, and Council representatives.

MUSEUM SITE—The Nome Museum and Library Commission considered about a dozen sites and has recommended all or part of this site for the Richard Foster Building that will house Carrie M McLain Museum and Kegoayah Kozga Library. The view looks at Front Street and Norton Sound from a space between Federal Way and Steadman Street. The Frank Okleasik family's home is not included as part of the potential site.

few months before closure, the TSF contains only about 11,5742 tons of paste tailings. Cobb said that the tailings were covered with a geo-membrane. Phase 2 of the reclamation plan says that the tailings would be hauled to the mine pit and buried there.

The closure plan says, "If the mine is not acquired by BSNC and SNC, NovaGold will initiate the Phase II closure activities during early summer 2012." There were no indications yet from BSNC where negotiations stand. "I am still bound by confidentiality in discussing ownership but I can say that the Phase I activities, focused on the tailings storage facility, are ongoing at the site per the approved closure plan," said Ron Rimelman, NovaGold's vice president of Environment, Health, Safety and Sustainability.

If Phase II is going to be initiated, according to the plan, the main plant site demolition is scheduled to begin in summer 2012 and includes all site facilities not needed for water treatment or the support of reclamation activities.

• New owner of Federal Building

General Manager Nichols said it usually takes a calendar year from purchase to developing a game plan and then starting with renovations. Nome poses its own set of challenges as they need to factor in that materials need to be shipped to the site and the right kind of contractors need to be found. Nichols said that the building, although now privately owned, needs to be fixed up by contractors who satisfy federal rules. "Due to the tenants, it's still a federal facility and the federal government has stringent guidelines on who can access and work on the building," Nichols said.

So far, she said, Front Properties LLC has taken over the leases from the GSA and is now in the process of making a game plan on how to proceed with renovations. Zelener also pointed out that as a private owner the building is now subject to City of Nome property tax, which it wasn't under federal ownership.

Asked what prompted Front Properties LLC to bid on the building and invest in the Nome community, Zelener said that he was attracted to the potential in Nome. "The gold fever, the potential for a Coast Guard station or oil development, any time when people come to a city to work or explore, they need offices and housing," Zelener said. "We bought it because it already has state and federal tenants. We didn't speculate on an empty building," Zelener said.

Housing—the magic word! Nome's chronic housing crunch is deemed to get worse with the upcoming summer construction season and the added gold rush. Asked whether Front Properties would also invest in housing buildings, Zelener said they want to first learn to understand Nome and then figure out how to proceed. "We explored some opportunities in the housing market, but a lot of properties are in really poor condition," Zelener said. The inhibiting factor to jump into the housing market are material and building costs in Nome.

First things first, and the new owners are now working on giving the Federal Building a facelift and a energy-consumption overhaul, starting this summer.

NPS School board honors students and personnel

By Lori Head

Standing room only with students, parents, employees, administrators, community members, board members, press and Richard Beneville, director of Community Schools, making sure there were enough pitchers filled with ice water and cut lemons – welcome to Nome Board of Education's April 10 regular meeting.

Why all the people? To begin, Mary Reader was honored for her 28 years with the district and presented with flowers, a small gift and a surprise visit from friend/co-worker for 22 years/cheese dip making/former NPS business manager Clara Langton who cashed in personal Alaska Airlines miles to be there and honor Mary.

Next honored was Chase Gray, manager of the Native Village of Council, for partnering with NPS to acquire a grant to provide eBook technology for the Nome Beltz Jr./Sr. High library.

Three Spirit of Youth nominations were recognized:

- Nome Beltz Drama Club under the direction of Ms. Nikki Scherer
- Jacob Martin (delegate to Shared Beringian Heritage Program Youth Forum)
- Teens Against Tobacco Use (TATU) group under the direction of Danielle Sylvester

The students of the month for February were honored:

- Robert (Bobby) Pate – Jr. High
- Cameron Smith – Sr. High

The students of the month for March were honored:

- Hannah Alowa – Jr. High
- Tristan Matson – Sr. High

After all the compliments and accolades were done, board member Barb Nickels jokingly moved to adjourn, but not hearing a second, the board meeting continued.

Lemonade Day

Bryant Hammond, planning and development specialist of Kawerak, Inc., informed the board of Lemonade Day coming to Nome on May 6. The free, educational program is designed to teach youth how to start, own and operate their own business – a lemonade stand. Participants will receive a backpack and an opportunity to win a new bike donated by Nome Alaska Commercial Company. Registration deadline is April 24 – more information can be found at www.alaska.lemonadeday.org

Nome-Beltz news

Personnel not returning: Chuck Bille, SFC Jim Doll and William Vega. The current plan includes Nancy Bahnke, Sr. High science teacher transferring to librarian for one year, Kathy Horner transferring from Jr. High science to Sr. High math and Brian Marvin transferring from Sr. High science to Jr. High science.

However, Steve Gast, principal, explains that this plan is current and accurate only for the moment and subject to additional changes.

Elementary news

Dave Keller, principal, reported on a successful class called "Love and Logic for the Classroom" taken by teachers that "has been helpful in identifying a wide range of effective strategies teachers can use to minimize classroom distractions and interruptions while at the same time, maximizing student's opportunities to learn and progress through the curriculum." NES will be hosting a workshop for parents based on the same philosophy called "Parenting with Love and Logic" that teaches the approach of raising children with loving support from parents while at the same time expecting kids to be respectful and responsible. The parent workshop is free, and will be held on Saturday, May 5 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the NES library. Breakfast snacks and lunch will be served, door prizes will be offered and child care will be available upon request. Keller hopes parents will take advantage of this great opportunity. Keller does ask interested persons to contact Laurie Poston at 443-3285 or him at 443-5299 to register for the workshop and notify them of child care needs.

Currently at NES are three teacher resignations: Nikki Scherer – 1st grade, Diana Adams – 4th grade and Joni Earp – PE.

New teacher contracts

New teacher contracts were approved: Lucas Frost – life science teacher at Beltz; Nathaniel Lambert – 6th grade and Emily Stotts – 1st grade.

56er report

Joe Braach, administrative support to the elementary 56ers, noted that staff was working hard and willing to listen to suggestions. His suggestions regarding staff ranged from training staff to ensure all aspects of curriculum were taught with fidelity to visual guides posted in classrooms including posting the grade level expectations.

Nome Eskimo Community has helped with tutoring in the pod every afternoon, Monday through Thursday, and operating an after school homework program with an average of eight students attending and on-going recruitment for more.

Braach recommended to the superintendent a more traditional setting for fifth and sixth graders in the future with a homeroom, self-contained classroom setting, to provide more instructional time with less transitions. He also recommended two fifth grade teachers and three sixth grade teachers next year.

Activity Director contract

After a brief discussion of the division of responsibilities of the AD position, it was explained that Patrick Callahan, NPS AD, teaches four classes a school day, has one "prep" period, and two periods devoted to AD duties. His contract was approved with three board members in favor: Brennan, Nickels and Reader and one opposed: Amarok. Board member Gloria Karmun was absent.

BP 6145 Extracurricular and Cocurricular Activities

First reading passed on this board policy dealing with grades and eligibility to participate in extra/cocurricular activities. The board chose between two options:

- Option 1: Students with any "F" grades must also maintain minimum progress towards graduation in order to meet eligibility requirements.
- Option 2: Students with any "F" grades do not meet eligibility requirements.

They selected Option 1.

Security camera resolution

The board passed a resolution to "collaborate with Nome Police Department to research the purchase and installation of security cameras in Nome Public Schools facilities."

Elementary PA system repairs

A $79,547.52 proposal to repair the Nome Elementary School's storm damaged central clock/PA system submitted by Bering Straits Development Corporation was approved. Superintendent Mike Brawner explained that insurance would pick up all but approximately $17,000 and FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) would cover the rest.

Nome Board of Education will meet again in a work session on April 24 at 5:30 p.m. A special session will be held the same evening to take action on a FY13 budget.

THUMBS UP TO COLLEGE— Sixth-graders from the Nome Elementary School had a field day at Northwest Campus last Friday. The "I'm Going to College" event allowed the kids to experience a day as a college student. Prior to the event, the students worked through an activity book in which they explored different types of colleges and careers. During the event, the children experienced five classes as college students for a day. This year's courses included biology, nursing, computer technology, a library scavenger hunt, and early childhood education. At the end of the day students were given a certificate of completion for their "I'm Going to College" experience. Students also received a backpack filled with items to help gear them towards the idea that just a few short years they, too, can be college students.

School board discusses FY 2013 proposed budget

By Lori Head

The Nome Board of Education held a public hearing on April 9 regarding the proposed FY13 general budget. The sole community member to address the board was Patrick Callahan, activities director of Nome Public Schools. Responding to the board's decision to not increase student travel by 10 percent at a savings of $16,198 he wanted to be sure that the board, as well as the community, understood that an increase would not fund extra trips or frills, it would only aid in partially funding regular season travel by sports teams, music, BPA/Skills USA, student council and NYO. In fact, according to Callahan's best projections, the school district allocating $150,000 to student travel for FY13 would cover approximately 57 percent of actual travel next year. His projected amount of $260,000 included all teams' regular season travel, attending state competition and a 10 percent inflation rate.

One might ask where the other 43 percent of funds would be obtained. Beyond grants, it's a one word answer — fundraising. Athletes in Nome not only master their talents in singing, dribbling a ball or cheering, they learn how to be excellent raffle ticket salespeople, hot dog and popcorn vendors, free throw shooters, cake bakers — you name it, they've probably cleaned it, baked it, sewn it, auctioned it or sold it at a yard sale.

The information shared with the board put board president Betsy Brennan "on the fence," board member Amarok favoring adding back $15,000 to student travel, board member Jennifer Reader wanting to focus on direct instruction and possibly raising student activity fees, and board member Barb Nickels sticking with, "I don't want to raise that line item by 10 percent mostly because I know that students will

Broadband project TERRA Northwest to expand to Norton Sound villages this summer

By Diana Haecker

A project that promises to bring fast broadband internet service to Norton Sound and Nome is underway as crews for the so-called TERRA Northwest project of the GCI subsidiary Unicom Inc. are readying to work on a connection from Grayling to Unalakleet.

The TERRA Northwest project is going to connect to the TERRA Southwest broadband network that was installed last year covering 400 miles with new fiber optic cable and 13 new microwave towers to connect 65 communities in Bristol Bay and the Yukon-Kuskokwim Delta. The plan is to extend the network from Grayling to Unalakleet, Shaktoolik, to the Reindeer Repeater site 10 miles northwest of Shaktoolik, to the Golovin alternate repeater site 10 miles east of Golovin and on to Nome.

The first phase of TERRA Northwest, planned for the 2012 construction season, involves the installation of two new microwave towers at Unalakleet and Shaktoolik, and the three remote repeaters. Phase 2 would start next year, with the installation of three remote repeaters and one microwave tower connecting Shaktoolik to Nome. Originally, the project proposed to erect a repeater tower on Skookum Pass and then run fiber-optic cable overland along the Nome-Council Highway Safety Sound, but plans have changed and GCI will now erect a repeater tower at Gill Mountain and one at Cape Nome.

Eventually, the network would expand to include Stebbins, St.

Michael, Elim, Golovin and White Mountain.

GCI rural broadband director Krag Johnsen described that the towers holding microwave dishes are approximately 60 to 100 feet tall. Repeater sites are located in remote area with no road access or power access. "Therefore we construct power generation facilities at the repeater sites," said Johnsen. Repeater sites are usually constructed by helicopter access only. The contractor, STG Inc. out of Anchorage has started to mobilize equipment and supplies to start work on the Grayling to Otter Creek connection.

In both Unalakleet and Shaktoolik GCI will put up microwave towers and connect them to the village power grid. The only public lands used to perch the repeater sites on is the Otter Creek repeater site in the Nulato Hills and the Golovin alternate repeater site, ten miles east of Golovin.

The 2012 and 2013 construction season for the project is funded, planned and in the stages of being permitted. The only agency involved in permitting is the federal Bureau of Land Management. The other repeater and microwave towers sit on private tribal or village corporation lands.

The BLM Field office in Anchorage prepared a 358-page long Environmental Assessment, which was open for public comment until this week. Asked why no public notice was given that the document is out for public comment, BLM officials said that the project wasn't deemed controversial and thus no public notice.

The Regulatory Commission of Alaska awarded a $6 million for the $35 million TERRA Northwest project.

In Southwest Alaska, where broadband service already has been established, GCI began delivering services to schools, hospitals and health clinics first. On Monday, GCI announced that they would complete the hookup to households in the 65 southwestern communities in October.

On Monday, GCI announced new internet service plans for the broadband services starting at $24.99 per month. They say that the new download speeds are eight to 16 times faster than what was available up until switching over to broadband. When asked how pricing would be for the Norton Sound villages and Nome, Johnsen said that the pricing has not been finalized yet.

Alaska Ice AAU heads south for the summer

By Lori Head

Seven Nome high school basketball players plan on a dizzying schedule of seven tournaments in six states this summer with hopes of valuable playing time and exposure to college coaches. Doug Boyer, formerly of Nome, began Alaska Ice AAU last summer and coached a girls' team including Nome's Devynn and Dylan Johnson. The team finished 13th out of 64 teams in the nation at the National AAU Tournament and also 21st out of 102 teams at the College Super Showcase Tournament in Orlando, FL.

What does one do with success like that? Boyer builds two teams for summer 2012 – a girls' team and a boys' team. Assisted by Bethel JV basketball coaches Jennifer Bradley and Matt Murphy, the three have chosen to spend their summer vacation coaching the teams – unpaid. The boys' team is composed of three Nome players and six Bethel players.

The girls' team has four Nome players, as well as two from Dillingham, two from Barrow, one from Kotzebue and one from Togiak. For the summer of 2013 Boyer would like to expand the program to four teams and by 2014 he would like to add a junior high boys' and girls' team.

Boyer hopes that the intensity needed to be competitive can be canistered and brought back to the different local teams by exposing these Alaskan rural athletes to elite AAU teams from around the nation. He also values the exposure to college scouts and coaches. Last year, seven out of 10 athletes were offered opportunities to play community college to Division I basketball after their senior year.

Each participant does need to cover travel, housing and other related fees. Consequently, fundraising has begun with dodge ball tournaments, bagel sales, and rib dinners to earn the approximate $20,000 it will take to get all of Nome's players participating. The people and businesses of Nome have been exceptionally supportive helping these athletes realize this goal. Nome Alaska Ice AAU athletes appreciate the support as they work towards making this dream a reality.

NYO games extravaganza held in Nome

By Hank Irelan

In its second annual event the Nanooks put on its Nome Native Games Extravaganza. For the fans the athletes put on quit a show. Participants from the ages of 6 to 64 took part in the games. Women competed against the men (even pregnant ladies). The Nanooks dolled the Nome Recreation Center with a beautiful school colored floor, banners shouting out Nanook Power and a sculptured eagle carrying the messenger Inua ball. Pamyua performed with their unique blend of traditional music dance and games. Through the Recreation Center door one walked past, mukluk ear rings, qiviut head warmers, NYO t shirts and Pamyua CDs for sale.

The first event was the kneel jump with Caitlyn Tozier having the best

In the two-foot high-kick again Caitlyn Tozier showed her dominance over her little sister and then Jens Irelan put the visiting performers of Pamyua, Phillip Blanchet and Ivan in their place with an 80-inch kick. When these two events were completed the Wolverine Jr. NYO team showed up in force having completed their academic day at Nome Elementary School. They were ready to school the old folks.

The double elimination leg-wrestling tourney was soon to commence with 16 entrants. This mixed competition of ages, sizes and gender was exciting to judge, watch and participate. Match after match was quickly done, with it soon being seen that the ladies were going to take on the men. Sierra for the Wolverines won the winner's bracket and then

Ten dog teams compete in NKC fun run

By Diana Haecker

This spring so far rewards dog mushers with conditions that all dreamed of during the super cold days of this 2011/2012 winter, which the National Weather Service declared the second coldest winter on record in Nome. Last Sunday made dog mushers revel in the spring time magic as the blaring sun was shining on hard packed trails while temperatures were hovering around the 20°F, still cool enough to run a dog team.

An impromptu decision made by Nome Kennel Club members a few days earlier resulted in a short 8-mile race around the Gold Hill Loop. Ten dog teams showed up at the race start located at the snow dump entrance on Sunday morning at 10 a.m.

A film crew present in Nome to continue filming the second season for the reality show “Bering Sea Gold” added to the excitement as they collected “beauty shots” to spice up their show with some dog mushing action. Since the race was dubbed a fun run and the grand prizes awarded were cookies for all —baked by Janet Balice— anything went. Juniors competed with seasoned mushers. One team decided to race the loop in the opposite direction. And the winning team even featured a tandem set up consisting of musher Nils Hahn and his 8-year-old daughter Lizzy riding the double sled. The number of dogs was limited to eight.

The race was punctual and in two-minute intervals, team after team raced up Gold Hill, took a “Haw” towards Icy View and Dredge #5, then a “Gee” through the Quonset huts near Osborn Road, down toward the Golf Ball on the Beam Road and following the trail back to Gold Hill. Volunteers Bianca and Deborah Trowbridge timed the incoming teams. Pat Owens made sure that the trail was still OK and Connor and Margaret Thomas proved invaluable by helping to secure sleds during the intense moments of waiting for the starting signal.

If conditions hold and the warming temperatures don’t wreak havoc with the existing trail, there may be another “fun run” next Sunday around the same time at the same location.

Ken Anderson wins Kobuk 440 sled dog race

by Nils Hahn

Ten 12-dog teams left the starting line of the 440 mile long Kobuk 440 dog sled race in Kotzebue on April 13, at 4:40 pm. The 440 is the last race of the season on the Alaskan distance racing circuit. The trail crosses the Baldwin Peninsula leaving Kotzebue, leads teams across frozen Kobuk Lake, follows the Kobuk River to the the village of Noorvik, portages over to Selawik and Ambler where the trail once more uses the Kobuk River to bring teams to Shungnak and Kobuk, backtracks to Ambler then Kiana, Noorvik and Kotzebue.

This years race saw near perfect conditions for dog racing. Ken Anderson of Fox/Fairbanks won the race, crossing the finish line just 15 minutes ahead of Scott Smith from Nenana. Smith is the kennel partner of Aaron Burmeister of Nome/Nenana. Third place went to Norwegian Musher Sigrid Ekran, 1 1/2 hours behind the winner.

Gerry Riley of Nenana, the Iditarod 1976 champion - 75 years young - rounded out the field, finishing just over 20 hours behind the winner of the race.

competed against Caitlyn winner of the loser bracket. Caitlyn struggled to stay alive against Sierra and put the double elimination into a double match. The Wolverines were well represented in the wrestling. The final event of Friday was the wrist carry where the carriers were Jake Stenbach and Kyle Clark carrying Jens Irelan the farthest.

One event of Friday needs its own paragraph because it stirred up the competitive instinct of the audience, craft merchants and even pregnant ladies. Phillip managed the score sheet choosing to sit out this event. Abby, Eli and Zach Tozier manned the greasing station. Rules were explained as this: simple grab the greased stick either pull the stick out of your opponents hand or get the other person off their feet. Pamyua’s Ossie entered this one representing the singers. Out of the stands jumped Marilyn Irelan to give him a tussle. Then Asaaluk Irelan walked over from her craft booth. Eight-months pregnant she out-pulled her brother Jens.

Saturday included performances by Elijah Cabinboy in the Alaskan High kick as well as outstanding performances by the Wolverines. The Native games are fun because top performers and record holders are right there to help along the younger athlete. The significant thing about this is the top performers such as Phillip and Elijah help the younger such as Jens to soon be competing head to head with them. Both evenings Pamyua demonstrated different games with the help of Jens and Elijah with musical background in the middle of their song “The Games.” The grace and beauty of the Native games was a whole lot of fun. Check out the Nome NYO Facebook page for the detailed results of each event.

Are diet sodas better for your health?

By Bob Lawrence, MD
Alaska Family Doctor

Does diet soda or diet “pop” make you healthy? Probably not, according to research published from two recent studies.

Daily consumption of diet soda may increase a person’s risk of having a heart attack or stroke, according to research out of the University of Miami Miller School of Medicine published in January of this year.

Over a ten-year period, daily consumers of diet soda had a 43 percent higher risk of developing cardiovascular disease compared to people who either drank no soda, people who drank regular soda, or those who drank less than a can of diet soda daily.

Furthermore, the researchers found that the risk was the same regardless of whether or not a person had previous risk factors for heart disease. The risk was increased both for a person with high blood pressure, bad cholesterol, and diabetes as well as a person who was otherwise healthy.

In other words, diet soda does not appear to be a good choice for the prevention or treatment of cardiovascular disease according to this study.

This study was not large, only a few thousand people participated, and the researchers relied heavily on people’s ability to recall their soda consumption. Therefore the results are important, but more research is needed before anyone can say with any authority that diet soda causes heart attacks or strokes.

A second study, published this month in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition helps answer the question about whether or not diet soda consumption leads to weight loss, or at least prevents weight gain.

Again, the news is not so good for soda lovers. The study examined the interplay between dietary choices and diet beverage consumption, including diet soda consumption. The researchers found that over a 20-year period people who eat healthy and do not drink diet beverages maintain a healthier waistline compared to everyone else in the study including people who eat a healthy diet and do drink diet beverages.

In other words, if your goal is healthy weight management, diet soda is not helpful according to the new data.

The results of these studies are not surprising. Diet soda and similar low calorie beverages may be marketed as healthy, but a growing body of research suggests diet sodas are actually unhealthy.

Diet beverages and artificial sweeteners may trick the taste buds, but MRI studies suggest the brain is not fooled. Pleasure centers of the brain remain unsatisfied until real glucose enters the system. Therefore, people who drink diet beverages tend to consume calories, often more calories than needed, in other forms.

Furthermore, diet soda does not tend to pair well with typically healthy foods. For example, a diet soda is more likely to taste better with a pizza than it does with an apple.

Diet soda is also thought to increase, not decrease the risk of diabetes. Women who drink diet soda are at greater risk of bone loss than non-consumers. And diet soda consumption in excess is even associated with a form of fatty liver disease similar to what occurs in alcoholic patients.

The bottom line is that diet soda and diet beverages are not health drinks. In many ways, diet beverages are likely just as unhealthy or harmful as regular soda or pop.

For real low calorie or no-calorie drink options with health benefits try drinking water or sparkling water with a little lemon. Or if caffeine is important, try an exotic tea with a hint of spice, like cinnamon. Even coffee is back on the healthy good list (minus the cream and sugar of course). Most coffee connoisseurs say that a quality cup of coffee does

Obituary

Russell Jim Tekaghaghmii Gologergen “Tekaaay”
December 30, 1955 - March 2, 2012

Russell Jim Gologergen was born on December 30, 1955 to Timothy and Anna Gologergen in Savoonga. He died unexpectedly on March 2, 2012.

Russell’s life was dedicated to his faith in God, his family and friends. He was raised by Amos Pinaaya and considered this his family. He attended Savoonga School, until his family moved to Nome in 1970. There he attended the Nome Public Schools and graduated from Nome-Beltz High School. In 1986, he moved back home to Savoonga.

Russell was currently in his second term as an Elder for the Savoonga Presbyterian Church. One of his main accomplishments in his life was giving of himself to the Lord. He was an original member of Arnold’s whaling crew that landed a whale in which he was so proud! The first whaling crew consisted of himself, Arnold and Bivers Gologergen, Myron Kingeekuk and Joe Iya, Sr. At times he would go boating with his cousins Bivers and Aaron. The last whaling crew he was with was Arnold, Edward and Arthur Gologergen and Myron Kingeekuk. He happily stated that he and Arnold will be getting ready this spring for another whaling season when he returned back to Savoonga.

Some of his accomplishments included serving faithfully in the National Guard Army, the construction of various schools and pre-fabricated houses in Seattle for BSRHA, Savoonga Water and Sewer Project and IRA Roads Project. He would often tell his family how he was hired on and would move up quickly in his line of work. Russell’s expertise was in carpentry and mechanics and he excelled in anything that was handed to him to work on. He was often called upon to give advice or check on things that broke down and needed fixing. He was an accomplished carver and also did some tanning of seal skins with the seals he caught only to brag that he had the nicest ones that he tanned himself!

Russell was a man who was dedicated to his family, whether they were close or extended members. He considered all family equally. He had a special place in his heart for everyone. When you saw “Tekaaay,” you would automatically feel his love, and his happiness for you and his big smile. He was a man who was very proud of his family, especially his nieces and nephews. He never hesitated to brag about their accomplishments by sharing it with all that were around him, even if they were not listening. He always walked away with a smile from ear to ear, only to move onto the next person he ran into and retell the same story and be just as proud and happy. In fact, when family texted him about something great that happened in Nome, he would reply with “Now I’m gonna brag even more! HE, HA, HO!!”

He always called/texted his sisters, nieces and nephews about what he was doing or had done, only to end with one question, “Everyone OK tho?”. Upon hearing they were, he was satisfied. When his family was sad about the passing of loved ones, he would respond by telling them to think of other relatives whose loved ones have passed on, and to know their sadness they are experiencing and to say some prayers for them. A family member once asked how he was doing during a big storm. His response was, “Don’t worry about me, worry about others that may be affected, I am going to stay up and keep watch and help as much as I can and say some prayers for all of them, I’ll be OK.”

Russell’s devotion to his dog Shuric was amazing. He was his true companion; he loved him like his own son! Always looking for his next meal and never hesitating to ask around for scraps for him. One of the last things he was concerned about was to get dog food and make sure it was sent to Lee, so Shuric would be fed.

Russell and his brother Lee were close in their own way and he often ate Ada’s cooking at Lee’s. He spent time with his precious Awliinga, teaching how to fish, hunt and taking him on his many outings.

Russell was always quick to help others making sure they were OK. He was very dedicated to check on his aunts; Harriet (Palaay), Janet (Napaziighhaq), Ina (Akilghumii) and Gertrude. He will be greatly missed by them. He took it upon himself to make a handicap ramp for Janet at her house, after her stroke, to make it easier for her to come in and out of her home.

Since his family lived in Nome and Anchorage, he worked extra hard to provide neqepik for them. He was always giving with his share that he harvested with relatives in Savoonga. He gathered, picked and hunted to provide for his loved ones, always sending boxes of food for his sisters, brothers and nieces. He always teased in a good way by saying, “enjoy your neqepik” with a big smile and happiness in his heart.

Russell was the most familiar sight during the long winter months where he would be fishing. Whether it was very cold, winding or snowing bad, his familiar profile would be seen down on the ice pack. He was always found where the blue cods and kayuupiks were. Because of his perseverance, people would go to his fishing areas and harvest fish for their families. He would also take his nephew Awliinga when he would go out fishing. At times, he would take his dog and would go beach combing and fishing during the summer and fall season. He even composed a fishing song, after spending many, many hours, days, months fishing over the years.

He was always so happy that he even went as far as to introduce himself as “Happy” to people he met along the way. He was not shy to express his happiness to Eskimo dance and proudly accompanied both sides of his relatives who danced clan songs. Recently, he was so proud to perform his father’s song by dancing and drumming at the same time, something that surprised everyone.

He was preceded in death by his loving parents, Timothy and Anna Gologergen, his beloved sister Juliana, his nephews Edward and David, his great niece Andrea, his uncles Edward, Arthur and Abner Gologergen, Jonathan Annogiyuk, his aunts, Ora Gologergen, Ellie Kulukhon and Della Waghiyi and many beloved cousins the so loved very much.

He lovingly leaves behind, his brothers; Timothy Jr, Lee (Ada), Dustin (Barbara), his sisters; Linda (Chris), June, Joyce and Rosali. His nieces and nephews; Kristy, Rena (Jade Greene), Ryan, Derek (Jade Hill), Jillian, Leeann and Timothy, Sheila (Josh), Nolan (Stephanie), Kerry, Niaomi, Raenelle (Tre), Taeler, Colin, Kyle, Amos, Scotty, Tianna, Alyssa, Rhiannon and William “Awliinga”. Saying it Sincerely

Karen Sonray, Pastor Our Savior Lutheran Church
Nome Ministerial Association member

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of all knowledge. Proverbs 1: 7

I thought of this piece of truth from Proverbs when I heard recently that the leader of the Roman Catholic Church preached his Easter sermon on how in our day of age we are more in awe of technology than we are in awe of God.

I find this to often be true and it can end up causing us difficulty in our spiritual lives as a community and as individuals. We have advanced so much in our modern age: we can call one another instantly, text each other across many miles and time zones, post via the internet a message or a video that can go out to the entire world in a matter of seconds. We are eager to be the first to get a new type of phone or gadget.

This is a real gift but let’s face it , like all gifts, it can easily become a vice and keep us from being in relationship with one another and with God. Too easily we forget the One who is the true Giver and has the power over our life and death.

The Hebrew word for “fear” might be better translated as “awe.” To have a sense of wonder as we behold the majesty of our God is a healthy spiritual attitude and state of being. We often are insulated from that sense of “awe.” As human beings we start to think we are in control of everything in this world and life.

In biblical stories the initial response at seeing an angel — a messenger of God — is almost always “fear” or “awe.” Angels deliver helpful messages and give important pronouncements to call us human beings into attention: look God is at work and moving in our communities. God wants to use your gifts and talents for his greater purposes.

What is God saying to us in our families at this time and place? What is God pronouncing to us? Are we listening? Are we insulating ourselves from the power of God and God’s voice in our lives? Knowledge that is satisfying and eternal comes from God alone who can satisfy this deep longing and thirst n our lives.

Public Notice
State of Alaska
Department of Environmental Conservation,
Division of Water
Notice of Water Quality Antidegradation Informational Teleconference
April 13, 2012
The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) Division of Water will hold informational teleconferences on water quality protection. The Department has an existing policy on water quality protection established in regulations at 18 AAC 70.015, commonly referred to as the "antidegradation policy." DEC is not proposing changes to the policy but is currently developing implementation procedures for the policy with input from an existing stakeholder workgroup and the public.

The antidegradation policy and implementing procedures are complex. As one element of Alaska's Water Quality Standards, they play a role in wastewater discharge permitting decisions. At the teleconferences, DEC Division of Water Director Michelle Bonnet will provide a presentation that describes the origin of antidegradation requirements; ways to learn more; and how local governments, tribes, and the public can provide early, meaningful comments to DEC before DEC develops the implementation procedures. The implementation procedures will be in the form of draft regulations that will undergo a formal public comment period late this year.

The teleconferences are designed to be educational and informational and are not part of a formal public comment process. Both teleconferences will cover identical material.

The teleconferences will be held on April 24 from 10-11:30 a.m. and April 26 from 6-7:30 p.m. The teleconferences will be held at ten Alaska Legislative Information Offices: Anchorage, Barrow, Bethel, Dillingham, Fairbanks, Juneau, Ketchikan, Kotzebue, Nome, and Sitka. In order to provide quality audio connections and a visual presentation, there will not be a separate call in number.

For more information on the teleconferences contact: Tim Hoffman at (907) 269-0598 or timothy.hoffman@alaska.gov For more information on DEC's antidegradation policy and implementation workgroup go to DEC's website at:

WELCOME— The new Bering Sea Restaurant opened its doors for business last month. Owner Sang Yi, standing left, offers a mix of American and Asian food specialties. Waitress Shannon Eggert delivers two hamburgers to patrons as manager Al Burgo, right, looks on.

Bering Sea Restaurant adds flair to Nome's dining scene

Story and photos by Diana Haecker

It is Fat Freddie's no more. The new restaurant that set up shop in the old Fat Freddy location adjacent to the Nugget Inn now has a completely different feel and different look to it. The Bering Sea Restaurant opened in March just before Iditarod teams were arriving a stone's throw away under the burled arch. The eatery has undergone a complete make-over and change in menu as well.

The new owner Sang Yi — who formerly owned Twin Dragon — has sunk a lot of money into the transformation of the place. The front has completely changed with a large sign stating "Bering Sea Restaurant" above the entrance.

The door is framed by river rocks held in place with mesh wire. The interior design is a stunning mix of retro chic and Zen-inspired simplicity with walls that feature plywood cut to give it a feel of bamboo trim, mirror mosaic and elaborate wall decorations that feature lots of mirrors and three-dimensional effects.

Window seating features a price-less ocean view in diner-type benches and in the back, regular tables are arranged for more formal seating.

A back room that would lend itself for private parties or functions, features wall decoration consisting of empty soda cans held at bay by mesh wire and seating is the latest retro chic style of round saucer chairs that seem to come right out of a 1970s James Bond movie.

Sang Yi said he had worked for 10 months on renovating the place and enlisted the help of an interior designer to make the restaurant into an eye candy with sophisticated ambience. "I try to make it the best restaurant in town," Yi said. Aside from the modern interior, the menu offers a mix of American and Asian cuisine.

American food is well represented with thick and juicy hamburgers and all its variations. The Korean and Japanese specialties are showcased by the long list of sushi on the menu. Yi hired a sushi chef, Joe An, who learned the art of sushi making in Japan.

An, standing behind the sushi bar that features fresh fish of the day, skillfully cut cucumbers in paper thin slices and said that he used to be an electrician. He worked as a subcontractor for the US Navy in Yokosuka, Japan where he befriended a Japanese sushi chef.

The chef taught him the basics of sushi making and let him work at his restaurant. From there, An went to New York City and worked for a year in a sushi restaurant.

Wanderlust plagued the young An and he moved on to California. "I became bored there, too," he said and that's when he booked a ticket to Nome and arrived in the Gold Rush City a month ago. It's quiet here, he said with a shy smile.

Yi said he has been in Nome since 1990. He used to run the Twin Dragon restaurant until he sold it last February. The Bering Sea Restaurant is open from 6 a.m. until 11 p.m. Yi said he has five employees working in the kitchen, including a breakfast cook who used to work at Airport Pizza, the Polar Café and restaurants in Seattle. The sushi chef is working the sushi bar and for now, two waitresses are in charge of serving the patrons.

Al Burgo is the restaurant's manager and said he'd like to keep things fresh — look for changes on the menu, daily specials for lunch and dinner and theme nights, such as Mexican specials. Burgo also said that the restaurant would be working with the Norton Sound Seafood Plant to offer fresh seafood — salmon, halibut and maybe even king crab when available. "We want to make it a community restaurant, a fun place to go to," Burgo said.

While the restaurant was very busy at its initial opening with Iditarod visitors things have slowed down. And that's OK for now, Burgo said. "It was nice and steady and it gives us time to get ready and to gear up for summer."

NEW LOOK— Bering Sea Restaurant owner Sang Yi stands in front of the newly renovated restaurant.

WORKS OF ART— Sushi chef Joe An, left, just prepared a Holiday Roll with seared salmon on the left, and a Dragon Roll topped with eel on the right, as restaurant owner Sang Yi looks on. Yi said the restaurant orders fresh fish daily from an Anchorage fish market. In the future, the restaurant is planning to put local seafood on the menu.

BON APPETIT— Sushi chef Joe An bows as he offers a Shrimp Crunch Roll to a guest.
